LOSS OF LIFE IS ENORMOUS.

Now Estimated 100,000 Perished in Southern Italy.

AID BEING RUSHED FORWARD.

Messina and Reggio Have Been Destroyed—Survivors Fleeing in All Directions — British and Russian Squadrons Reach Afflicted Parts and Aid in Rescue Work—All Nations Extending Helping Hand.

Rome, Dec. 30.—Stunned at the magnitude of the calamity which has overtaken fellow countrymen, all Italy mourns for the stricken province of Calabria and the island of Sicily. Accustomed for centuries to earthquakes, Italy stands ever in dread, but none was prepared for the disaster which, in the fraction of a minute, devastated cities and towns and caused the death of thousands.

Messina, which was the center of the terrestial maelstrom, was shaken to ruins. Flames burst forth to complete the city's destruction and to burn alive untold numbers, helplessly pinioned beneath fallen walls and broken timbers.

It is estimated that 100,000 persons are dead.

The death list in Messina ranges from 12,000 to 50,000; that of Reggio, which with its adjacent villages numbered 46,000 people, includes almost the entire population. At Palmi, 1,000 are reported dead; at Cassano, 1,000; at Cosenza, 500, and half of the population of Bagbara, about 4,000. The Monteleone region has been devastated, and Riposto, Seminara, San Giovanni, Scilla, Lazzaro and Cannitello and all other communes and villages bordering on the straits are in ruins.

The king and queen of Italy are now on their way to Messina, having sailed from Naples aboard the battleship Vittorio Emmanuele. The pope has shown the greatest distress at the calamity and he himself was the first to contribute a sum amounting to $200,000 to the relief of the afflicted.

Strait Is Twisted.

The Strait of Messina was shaken and twisted by the earth's trembling, for mariners report the channel altered beyond recognition. The ports and villages on both the continental and Sicilian sides were wrecked or inundated, and all lighthouses along the coasts were swallowed up. Navigation now is dangerous and in some places impossible.

In the Calabrian district, which was only beginning to recover from the effects of the earthquake of 1905, Reggio was the center of the earth's upheaval. The seaport of Reggio is reported as no longer existing, and the city proper is in ruins.

The loss of life on both sides of the strait and in eastern Sicily was enormous. One of the refugees from Reggio, who was the first to bring the news of the city's destruction, tried to make his way to Sicily in a sailboat, but was compelled to return, and finally found safety at a peninsula port. In describing his experience, he said:

"The sea was strangely, mysteriously agitated, and the heavens were ablaze. Nearing Sicily, the clearing smoke revealed the mystery; Messina was in flames. In the frenzy of despair, I turned my boat back to Calabria."

Survivors Flee.

Starving, bleeding from injuries and almost insane from their terrifying experiences, Messina's survivors are fleeing in all directions. The spectacle presented by the ruined seaport is described as terrifying. Tumbling buildings both killed and mutilated, while hundreds of the injured imprisoned in the wreckage were abandoned to their fate by the fleeing populace.

Already British and Russian squadrons have arrived at Messina. Sailors and marines have been disembarked, and they have performed courageous act in rescuing the injured and removing the dead. A large number of the survivors have been taken aboard the ships, which have been transformed into floating hospitals. It is imperative that the dead be removed from the ruins in order to avoid a pestilence. Steamers with doctors, druggists, firemen and workmen have arrived at Messina from Catania and other places.

Special dispatches received here from Calabria confirm the destruction of Reggio. They report that the situation there is as bad, if not worse, than at Messina. The streets in Rome are jammed with people, who snatch the special editions from the news boys. The people are plunged in grief, and lamentations are heard on all sides.

The hands of all the nations have been extended to Italy in her affliction. From rulers have come messages of condolence and from the peoples spontaneous promise of that aid which brings the world closer together in times of great calamity.

Relief fund subscriptions have already been started, and ships and trains are on their way carrying supplies and reinforcements to the south.

A great national committee has been formed to collect funds for the assistance of the sufferers. The committee is headed by the Duke of Aosta and includes the presidents of the senate and the chamber of deputies, the mayor of Rome and all prominent men in the leading towns.

The subscription list has been opened by $40,000 contributed by King Victor Emmanuel. All banks, clubs, civic and commercial associations and the newspapers have opened subscription lists.

The lord mayor of London has telegraphed that subscriptions have also been opened in British colonies abroad, including the colonies in the United States.

REFUGEES REACH CATANIA.

Half Naked and Almost Insane From Horror That Confronted Them.

Catania, Dec. 30.—Refugees are pouring into Catania by trains, steamers and automobiles. They are half naked and stupefied with terror and suffering. Some of them appear almost insane from the horrors through which they have gone.

In the beginning they could only babble: "Messina has been devastated; the city has been annihilated." Little by little some idea of the indescribable horror at Messina was obtained from these unfortunates.

They declare that thousands of demented survivors are still wandering about among the ruins of the city.

CONSUL KILLED.

United States Representative at Messina and Wife Probably Dead.

Washington, Dec. 30.—That Arthur S. Cheney, American consul at Messina, Sicily, and his wife lost their lives in the earthquake disaster which devastated that city is indicated by an official dispatch received by the state department from Stuart Lupton, American vice consul at Messina. The dispatch follows:

"The Messina consulate destroyed, and consul and wife supposed to be dead. (Signed) "LUPTON."

Arthur S. Cheney is a native of Illinois, but was appointed consul from Connecticut. Stuart Lupton is from Tennessee.

DISTRESS IN NEW YORK.

News of Calamity Deeply Affects Italians There.

New York, Dec. 30.—The news of the earthquake in southern Italy with its appalling loss of life was received in the several Italian colonies in this city with every evidence of keen distress. Of the half million or more Italians who have settled here, fully 200,000 are from the stricken districts. Thousands upon thousands have families, relatives and friends in Calabria and Sicily, and their anxiety over the dire news can be imagined.

Work and business is either suspended or carried on in a half hearted way by the Italians, while on every block and corner the people gathered in groups and discussed the news of the calamity. Here and there weeping women and children would be seen.

The Italian consul general has issued a call for subscriptions.

Chicago Italians Raise Funds.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Members of the Italian colony of Chicago responded promptly to a call issued by Chevalier Guido Sabetta, Italian consul, and at a mass meeting subscribed $2,000 for the relief of the earthquake sufferers.

Pittsburg Italians Wrought Up.

Pittsburg, Dec. 30.—The Italian residents of this city are greatly wrought up over news of the earthquake in southern Italy. About 2,000 Italians living here have relatives or friends in the ill fated district.

BELIEVED THEY ELOPED.

Jackson Man and Woman Disappear at Same Time.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 30.—Edward S. Stone, who conducted a bakery in this city, is missing, and, now when it is learned that Mrs. Jennie Snyder, a widow, is also gone, friends of both as well as the police believe that the couple have eloped.

Stone's wife will ask for a warrant for him.

The Stones have been held in the highest esteem, and the wife is receiving the sympathy of all.

Killed by Burglar.

Lakewood, N. J., Dec. 30.—Frank Jankowski, a bartender, was shot and killed by a burglar, following a sensational chase of the thief by a crowd of citizens and officers. The murderer was captured.

Fifty-seven Years Married.

Eaton Rapids, Mich., Dec. 30.—Mr and Mrs. William Smith of Charlesworth, five miles south of here, have just celebrated their fifty-seventh wedding anniversary.

WILLING TO GO TO VENEZUELA.

Castro Would Return and Prove Political Honor.

HE LEAVES BERLIN HOSPITAL.

Asks That International Tribunal Be Judge For His Actions—Believes Gomez Is Acting As He Thought Best In Settling Foreign Questions. Does Not Intend to Interfere.

Berlin, Dec. 30.—Senor Castro has left the hospital and returned to the Esplanade hotel. On granting an interview, the former president was asked if there was any truth in the statement that he left Venezuela knowing what was going to happen.

Senor Castro calmly made the following reply:

"No, for if I had even suspected such a thing I would have remained in Venezuela, even had my life been imperiled through ill health, because I have always been and am now the slave to honor and duty. The only fear I have is the fear of God."

"It is rumored that the Venezuelan government will request your extradition from Germany in order to indict you," Castro was informed.

"I do not consider that possible," replied Castro, "since no such covenant is in existence between Venezuela and Germany. Only the slightest hint is necessary and I am willing to go to Venezuela and prove my political honor.

"In regard to internal affairs concerning the foreign policy of Venezuela, I would suggest that an international tribunal should judge me, to prove that Venezuela has right and reason, provided that if such right should be proven justice might be accorded to Venezuela and to me."

Senor Castro discussed the events in Venezuela. Concerning the intention of President Gomez to settle the outstanding foreign question, Castro believed that Gomez was acting as he thought best, but declared that the action of Venezuela hitherto was justified. He did not intend, however, to interfere in the progress of events and had not communicated with Venezuela in any way.

MRS. ERB SHOT CAPTAIN.

Prosecution Will Attempt to Prove Such Was the Case.

Media, Pa., Dec. 30.—Much more progress than had been generally anticipated has been made here in the trial of Mrs. M. Florence Erb and her sister, Mrs. Catherine Beisel, indicted jointly and separately on the charge of murdering Captain J. Clayton Erb, at his home, Red Gables, last October. A jury has already been selected.

District Attorney MacDade in his address reviewed the tragedy in many details. He said that the commonwealth will endeavor to prove that the defendants murderously plotted the death of Captain Erb. That Mrs. Erb and not her sister fired the fatal shots, he said, would be shown as the most plausible diagnosis of the crime.

HITCHCOCK WITH TAFT.

President and National Chairman Framing Up Cabinet.

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 30.—The arrival here of Frank H. Hitchcock, Republican national chairman and future postmaster general, and the announcement that Senator Knox, Mr. Taft's secretary of state, will be here on the 6th indicates that the president elect is to occupy himself actively with cabinet construction. Mr. Hitchcock will remain a week or more.

Mr. Hitchcock is having short conferences with Mr. Taft.

LUMBER FIRM GOES TO WALL.

Mann, Watson & Co. Fails For $80,000.

ASSETS AGGREGATE $50,000.

Petition Filed In Federal Court at Grand Rapids — Special Partner, Frank Hubbard Smith, Not Liable Above His Holdings—Also Had Two General Partners.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 30.—With liabilities approximating $80,000 the firm of Mann, Watson & Co. of Muskegon have failed, a petition in bankruptcy having been filed in the federal court by Robert K. Mann and William G. Watson.

The petition asked that the court take charge of their assets for the benefit of creditors. The firm is one of the largest lumber dealers and manufacturers in western Michigan. The assets will aggregate nearly $50,000, including some doubtful paper in the shape of notes and open accounts.

In the petition the bankrupts assert that Frank Hubbard Smith, as special partner, contributed $50,000 and that under the law under which the firm was incorporated Smith is not liable above his stock holding for the debts of the firm.

General Partners.

The petitioners say that the firm of Mann, Watson & Co. were general partners with Paul Smith of Greenville in the Greenville Lumber company, the trial balance of which shows that the debts of that firm are $12,523.84, for which Mann, Watson & Co. are directly liable. The assets of the Greenville concern will cover the liabilities. The firm was also general partners with Charles Hogue in the Adrian Lumber company, the debts of which are given as $11,900 with assets of $26,00 approximately.

Distributed among the creditors of the petitioners are lumber firms through the state and in the south. Several banks with large amounts are also named as creditors.

MARRIES A COUNT.

Grand Rapids Girl Weds a German of Title.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 30.—An interesting international romance culminated in the wedding here of Count Adolf Montgelas, first secretary of the German embassy in Tokio, to Miss Fanny Dickinson Hazeltine, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. Hazeltine.

The marriage ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents by Fr. John A. Schmitt, pastor of St. Andrew's cathedral.

Count Montgelas and his bride left for San Francisco. They will sail from San Francisco for Tokio on Jan. 23. Count Montgelas met his bride while he was visiting Ambassador T. J. O'Brien in Tokio.

PHYSICIAN DIES.

Man With War Record Passes Away In Three Rivers.

Three Rivers, Mich., Dec. 30.—Dr. Lawrence Darding Knowles, for years one of the leading physicians of this city, is dead at his home, of angina pectoris.

At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war he was recruiting surgeon for the Thirty-first Michigan, enlisting in that regiment with the rank of major. He was later promoted to the rank of brigade surgeon with the rank of lieutenant colonel. At the time of his death he was a member of the state board of pension examiners.

Judges Are In Session.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 30.—The Association of Michigan Judges is in session here. Judge West of the supreme court delivered the president's address at the opening. Judge Sedon Miner of Owosso read a paper on the "Master and Servant," and Dr. George E. Rooney of this city spoke on the "Doctor As a Witness." Today's session will close the meeting.

Had dyspepsia or indigestion for years. No appetite and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me. — B. H. Walker, Sunbury, Ohio.

To save your faith from formalism translate every article into an act.

If your Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are weak, try at least a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When those nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Highways of happiness are never out through with pain and tears.

It requires a proper combination of certain acids with natural digestive juices to perfect a dyspepsia cure. And that is what Kodol is—a perfect digester that digests all the food you eat. If you eat. If you will take Kodol for a little while you will no longer have indigestion. You then couldn't have indigestion. How could you have indigestion if your food were to digest? Kodol digests all you eat. It is pleasant to take, acts promptly. Sold by all druggists.

There is a world of difference between willing a deed and simply being willing to do.

A Religious Author's Statement.

For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and last winter I was suddenly stricken with a severe pain in my kidneys and was confined to bed eight days unable to get up without assistance. My urine contained a thick white sediment and I passed same frequently day and night. I commenced taking Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the pain gradually abated and finally ceased and my urine became normal. I cheerfully recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy. Sold by all druggists.

No religion has much power over us that does not make some great appeal to us.

Don't let the baby suffer from eczema, sores or any itching of the skin. Doan's Ointment gives instant relief, cures quickly. Perfectly safe for children. All druggists sell it.

It's just as easy for a woman to tell her husband what to do as it is for him not to do it.

This is just the time of the year when you are most likely to contract a severe cold, and you should always have Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup handy, especially for the children. It tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. It cures the cold by gently moving the bowels through its laxative principle, and at the same time it is soothing for throat irritation, thereby stopping the cough. Sold by all druggists.

A man's anxiety to marry begins to brink when he discovers that the woman of his choice is willing.

Many little lives have been saved by Foley's Honey and Tar for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. It is the only safe remedy for infants and children as it contains no opiates or other narcotic drugs, and children like Foley's Honey and Tar. Careful mothers keep a bottle in the house. Refuse substitutes. Sold by all druggists.

If physicians did not magnify the little ills of their patients they would lose about half of their practice.

For health and happiness DeWitt's Little Early Risers—small, gentle, easy, pleasant little liver pills, the best made. Sold by all druggists.

If you think the rents are too high in your neighborhood hire an amateur cornet player to move in.

Roberts of New York.

Don't expect your wife to know where all the things are which you leave lying about. Remember, she does not possess second sight, though there are many times when she needs it.

"THE FIRST VIOLIN"

The appearance in this city of "The First Violin" at the New Bradley on Wednesday Jan. 6th is worthy of much comment, and consideration, both by book lovers and theatre goers.

A little research shows us that the novel of "The First Violin" by Jessie Fothergill, is the most extraordinary book ever written or published, from the fact that, it has been the steadiest selling novel in the book world, and really holds the worlds record in numbers sold.

For twenty years it has been running new editions constantly issued, in all forms and prices, never is it allowed to run out; volumes can be found, ranging in price from ten cents to five dollars, all over the English speaking world and in Germany, where the story is laid.

This is the first time this play has ever appeared in any but the largest cities, and local theatre goers should not overlook so good an opportunity to see a favorite play.

We observe that some of our exchanges are telling "how the farmer's wife can earn money," just as though she was not every day earning a great deal more than she gets.

Herald Office Open.

The HERALD office will be open every Saturday night at 7 o'clock for the remainder of the evening to accommodate those who desire to pay for the HERALD. All accounts must be paid at once. Those who are in arrears kindly call and settle.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE CALENDAR.

The Herald is in receipt of a calender which has just been issued by the Michigan Agricultural College, showing many views of the buildings and campus.

This institution has enjoyed a wonderful growth and development in the last decade. From a total enrollment in 1889 of 528 students, with a faculty numbering 52 and a fixed income of less than $100,000, the present records show an increase in student enrollment of over 150 per cent, with over 90 professors and assistants and a permanent income of $325,000, while during this period $700,000 has been spent in permanent improvements.

HOW TO CURE SKIN DISEASES.

The germs and their poisons must be drawn to the surface of the skin and destroyed. Zemo will do this and cure any case of skin or scalp disease, no matter from what cause or of how long standing. Write for sample. E. W. Rose Med. Co., St. Louis, Mo. See photos of cures and window or show case display at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store.

Gratz-Bordner.

The marriage of Mr. C. J. Bordner and Miss Ida Gratz was solemnized at Auburn on Wednesday. Mr. Bordner is one of the most popular young men in Butler and owns a farm south of town. His bride was a former well known young lady of Butler, but for several years has been a successful teacher in the Garrett public schools. Mr. and Mrs. Bordner will reside in Butler. The great host of friends of the newly married extend best wishes.—DeKalb County Herald. Miss Gratz is the daughter of Daniel Gratz of this place and her many friends in Tecumseh extend congratulations.

Dabbling in stocks and leaving the farm to run itself is not a good way to do business. It is the surest way to trouble and loss. Money out of pocket every time for the man who follows it.

The first lesson in fence breaking may come from a little neglect on the part of the farmer to keep the boards or rails all whole. One board off and the mischief has been commenced. Look out for the beginning of such things.

1909 PROSPERITY

The quarantine is lifted as we prophesied. The coming year will be a "HUMMER." Do not wait until you want to use an article before buying. Make your plans for the year NOW, the manufacturers and we made our contracts months ago. Prices are now as fully established as the day you will want to use article.

Look over your fencing and posts, get them on hand in order to get your fence up at the first opportunity, we are making deliveries almost daily.

Think about that field that you will not have enough manure to cover. Tell us the soil and we will sell you fertilizer for that particular field, that will bring results far beyond your expectations. We have the finest lines known to the modern farmer.

It is not the one sale we want, we want your busines year in and year out. Based on Quality, Price and Cordial Treatment on these lines we have grown from nothing to one of the largest in the county. We appreciate your business and want you to realize it. We want to get closer to you for the coming year for our mutual benefit and prosperity. New goods are coming almost every day, come in and look them over.

MR. AND MRS. PAUL MULL OF TECUMSEH.

Who Celebrated the 56th Anniversary of Their Marriage last Monday.

Both enjoy good health.

Paul Mull was born in Franklin county Pennsylvania, Feb. 6, 1832 Margaret Sharp was born in the same county May 4, 1834. They were married December 28 1852. They celebrated their golden wedding Dec. 28 1902 and on Monday last they reached the 56th. milestone on their journey since they started out to travel together They are facing toward the setting sun now but they are in good health and with minds and memories clear, they are enjoying their latter years in their pleasant home on Mill Street.

Like the other Paul who lived so long ago, Mr. Mull has always been a hard worker, no part of his earnings has ever gone for tobacco or whiskey He says that if other men were all like himself saloon keepers would either starve or go to work.

Eight children have been born to them Mrs Cassie Rockwood who died March 31, 1908, Mrs Susan Handy whose home is on the the Coon farm in Raisin township, Oliver and Jacob who own and occupy good farms near Wamplers lake, Adam who runs an oil wagon in Adrian. In their quiet way Mr. and Mrs. Mull are useful and respected citizens of the "The Biggest little town on earth" and their friends unite in hoping that together they may enjoy many returns of their wedding anniversary.

HON. WILLARD STEARNS

Died at his home in Adrian Monday after week's illness.

Hon. Willard Stearns died at his home, No 17 East Butler street, Adrian last Monday, and his death cast a gloom over the entire community where for many years he has been a respected resident.

At the age of 35, he was the partner of Gov Greenley in an increasing law practice. At that time a mortgage on the Adrian Press had been foreclosed and left the democratic party without representation in this county. Mr. Stearns dropped the practice of law and took up the work on the Press. Year after year he conducted the paper so that it was regarded as the strongest Democratic paper in the state. The last few years of his life he gave up the work on account of his poor health.

Willard Stearns was born in Cherry Valley, N Y., Oct. 3, 1838. His father died the July preceding, leaving the young wife to battle alone along life's journey. To a loving mother's devoted care and training is due his education and success in life. Mr Stearns leaves to mourn a wife and four children. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Baptist church.

CURE IT IN ONE DAY

Coughs and Colds Disappear Like Magic When Hyomei is Used.

If the thousands of people who suffer from hacking coughs and agonizing colds would arouse themselves sufficiently to follow this advice, they would cease to complain within 24 hours.

Here is the advice, if you take it and you are afterwards sorry that you did, it won't cost you a penny:

Go to C A Wright & Son, the druggist, and purchase from him a Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) outfit. It will only cost you $1 00. Take it home; use it according to directions, and if it does not cure your cough or cold, take it back and C A. Wright will refund the purchase price.

When you use Hyomei you don't swallow nauseating drugs. You simply breathe in the soothing, pleasant and antiseptic Hyomei air through the little pocket inhaler that comes with each outfit. As this medicated air passes over the inflamed parts, relief comes almost at once, and cure follows.

Mary E Bennett, Peru, Ind., writes: "I cannot speak too much in praise of your Hyomei treatment for catarrh. I have been using your remedy for about two weeks, and I have found more relief in that than anything that I have ever tried. I have spent dollar after dollar getting medicine of the doctor for a troublesome cough which I had, and have tried all kinds of cough syrups and cough tablets, and Hyomei is the only remedy that reached the spot I had given up in despair, but I feel so much better now that I feel as though I have a new lease on my life."

Hyomei is also guaranteed by C. A. Wright to cure catarrh, croup, grip and asthma, and all diseases of the nose and throat

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First—Don't Delay—Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache, headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Tecumseh residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Tecumseh citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

John B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For several years I suffered a great deal from rheumatism and backache. My kidneys were badly disordered and I knew that they caused all my trouble. About two years ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time I was relieved. I have had no serious attacks of the trouble since. Shortly after using Doan's Kidney Pills I told of my experience through the local papers and at this time I am glad to verify that statement and again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50c. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole Agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

It can always be stopped—in the beginning. The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous.

Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself and at home. Take

TO DIE BY INCHES.

Port Huron Assyrian Planned Gruesome Death.

Port Huron, Mich., Dec. 30.—Relatives of Louis Anter, an Assyrian, twenty-seven years old, prevented him from killing himself. Anter, however, may yet die from a bullet wound in his left leg.

The foreigner had planned to kill himself by inches and had purchased a new revolver to carry out his purpose. He intended shooting himself in each leg and each arm and then finally end his sufferings by sending a bullet through his brain.

The cousin heard the report of the revolver and summoned other relatives. They succeeded in wresting the weapon from the grasp of Louis, thus preventing him from doing himself further harm.

The man is now in the hospital.

ANOTHER SUM FOR REFUGEES.

National Red Cross Again Cables $100,000 to Rome.

THIS CONSIDERED BEST PLAN.

President of Italian Red Cross Points Out Feasibility of Sending Money Instead of Attempting to Send Shipload of Supplies — Ship Will Be Chartered and Stocked at Genoa.

Washington, Jan. 4.—To assist the American people in their efforts to extend relief to the stricken Italian earthquake sufferers, Secretary Root has made public a cablegram received from Ambassador Griscom pesenting the first feasible plan of meeting the present great emergency. There is no time to spare in awaiting the arrival on the scene of distress of battleships now in the Suez canal or of naval supply ships crossing the Atlantic. The need for help is immediate, and how that help can be rendered is told in the cablegram, dated at Rome, which follows:

"January 2nd.

"I have today drawn on you for seventy thousand dollars, and I paid equivalent to Italian Red Cross in two sums, fifty thousand from the American Red Cross and twenty thousand from Christian Herald.

"I have seen president Italian Red Cross, who desires me to inform the American Red Cross as follows:

Much Money Needed.

"'Problem of relief very vast. Includes feeding, clothing destitute on scene immediately and quickly removing nearly whole surviving population from the stricken district to other parts of Italy. Transportation involves special difficulties. Much money is needed, but if America desires to offer a practical aid immediately a ship could be chartered by telegraph at Marseilles or Genoa and loaded with blankets, clothing, linen, preserved meats, condensed milk, medical supplies and similar useful materials. One or more such ships under the direction of the Italian Red Cross would be useful as transports and at the same time could deposit stores where needed along the coast. The Italian Red Cross has not yet clearly worked out how all the difficulties of relief are to be solved. Supplies are now needed in Sicily and Calabria, but in about two weeks, when the destitute have been removed, will be needed in Naples, Roma, Florence and other cities where the sufferers are being distributed.'

"I will be personally glad to cooperate with our Red Cross to carry out any plans. There are many Americans in Rome anxious to assist in relief measures. (Signed)

"GRISCOM."

In response to this suggestion the American National Red Cross has cabled $100,000, with the suggestion that it could be used by the Italian Red Cross society for the purpose of fitting out a ship with provisions and medical supplies. This amount is in addition to the $100,000 and the $70,000 previously sent by the American Red Cross.

By sending the money instead of undertaking to provide for the shipment of supplies the American Red Cross adopted what it regards as the best method for meeting the emergencies that face the Italian Red Cross.

Represents United States.

In order that the American Red Cross might have a personal representative on te scene of the earthquake, Vice Consul Bayard Cutting, at Milan, is now in the earthquake region, having been sent there by Ambassador Griscom.

Baron Mayor des Planches, ambassador from Italy, has received instructions from his government to express to President Roosevelt the sincere thanks of the government of Italy for the generous aid and sympathy extended by the president and the people of the United States to the Italian nation in this great calamity.

The message to the ambassador makes no reference to a proffer of the services of the American fleet, now at Suez, the exchange of communications on that subject being conducted through American ambassador at Rome.

A requiem mass for the victims of the earthquake was held this morning at St. Aloysius Catholic church in this city and was attended by the Italian ambassador and members of the Italian embassy.

PREPARING HOSPITALS.

Rome Makes Ready to Care For the Injured.

Rome, Jan. 4.—Great advance has been made in the preparations for the relief work here in connection with the bringing of sufferers from the devastated districts. The hospital which is being prepared within the Vatican will contain 300 beds. The pope has undertaken the entire expense of the charity.

The Press club has also opened a hospital, while many ladies of the aristocracy will receive in their private houses a certain number of the wounded. Princess Borghese is the leader of the latter movement.

Funeral masses for the victims have been celebrated in the churches. Official figures give the number of injured transported from the earthquake zone to various ports up to Saturday by the Italian warships as 10,370; by the British warships, 1,209; by the German warships, 900, and by the Russian warships, 890.

A censorship has been established at the important points in the south, and the foreign correspondents are being greatly hampered in the forwarding of their dispatches.

STENCH IS TERRIBLE.

That From Decomposing Bodies Hinders Work of Rescue.

Catania, Jan. 4.—The system of rescue work in Messina has been greatly augmented by the arrival of troops. The movement of refugees from the nearby villages is daily increasing in volume, and large numbers of persons are leaving the devastated region. Of the victims under the ruins, comparatively few have been rescued alive.

It is now clear that the enormous number of casualties in Messina were due to the suddenness with which the first shock came, giving but little time to the people to escape from their homes. The damage done by fire was comparatively insignificant.

The first earth shock literally threw down the city. Then came the tidal wave, and the living and dying were caught like rats and drowned and killed.

The stench of the decomposing bodies hinders greatly the rescuers in their work.

The American consulate is a complete ruin. It is most doubtful if the rescuers will be able to recover the bodies buried beneath the debris for a few days.

The officials say that the original esitmate of the fatalities in the city probably was not exaggerated. The lower part of the city is practically totally destroyed.

KING LEAVES FOR ROME.

Wires Troops Are Arriving and Order Being Restored.

Rome, Jan. 4.—Premier Rigolitti has received a long dispatch from King Victor Emmanuel, dated Messina, saying that he was leaving for Rome. As to the conditions in the earthquake district, the king said:

"Today (Sunday) I visited the Calabrian coast south of Reggio. I found Pellaro literally destroyed, but Melito seems to have been but slightly damaged.

"It has stopped raining. At Messina the municipal archives were burned. Troops are arriving, and little by little order is being restored and the public services re-established.

"As I have seen the worst damaged points and have arranged for the work of rescue, and as the wounded requiring attention are diminishing in numbers, I shall leave tonight for Rome.

"I again recommend to you the isolated villages on the Calabrian coast."

Mr. Griscom, the American ambassador, has selected a committee of Americans here to which will be entrusted the work of carrying out his plans of relief work, Mr. Griscom himself will be president of the committee.

QUEEN PREVENTS PANIC.

Quiets Crowd In Hospital That Became Frightened at Fresh 'Quake.

Messina, Jan. 4.—Queen Helena went about among the sick, wounded and homeless, administering medicines.

While in an improvised hospital, a slight shock caused a great panic among the patients. The queen was first to realize the danger, not in the shock, but in the panic. She suddenly was transformed from the nurse into a commanding figure dominating the hysterical crowd of sufferers. With shining eyes, with truly regal gestures, she called, 'Be calm,' actually placing her own persons as a barrier to prevent a mad stampede.

The stream of frightened people was already rushing toward the exit, but the outstretched arms of the queen for a moment stayed its advance. A score or more of the patients drew back, but others, blinded by fright and unable to control themselves, threw themselves upon the queen, who was hurled to one side. Her commanding action, however, gave others present an opportunity to rush to her aid, and the panic was quickly overcome. The queen was bruised about the chest, but, fortunately, not seriously.

POPE WON'T SEND HIM.

Archbishop Ireland Will Remain In Rome.

Rome, Jan. 4.—A report to the effect that the pope intended to send now in Rome, to Messina is denied. The pope has in both devastated districts a sufficient number of clergy to carry out his desires. Archbishop Ireland, speaking of the disaster, said:

"It is simply a terrible thing. One must be near the scene of any disaster to have any conception of it. All Italy is simply in consternation. To the credit of Italy it must be said that everything humanly possible is being done for the relief of the sufferers.

"If there could be compensation for such terrible miseries, these are to be found in the marvelous uprising of universal charity towards Italy. The best possible impression has been made in Italy by the offerings coming from the United States."

TEN MORE BAPTIZED.

Church of God Members Received Plunge Into Icy Waters.

St. Joseph, Mich., Jan. 4.—An act of endurance prompted by the sincere christian belief as members of the Church of God was exemplified in this city Sunday afternoon before a curious audience of 1,000 people who were grouped together on the snow and ice clad shore of Lake Michigan.

Rev. August F. Schmitz, local pastor of the Church of God, marched from the nearby beach, followed by ten converts, out over the ice fields to a hole in the ice about 100 feet from the shore, and all were baptized.

YOUNG BANK TELLER IS IN DETROIT JAIL.

Admits Taking Money and Squandering It.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 4.—Edward A. Earnshaw, until recently paying teller of the Dime Savings bank, has been arrested for alleged embezzlement of the bank's funds. Officials of the bank declare that they do not know the exact amount of the indebtedness, but the police aver that it is considerably more than $1,000.

Earnshaw, so the detectives say, admits that he has "gone wrong" and declares that the money he took from the bank was mostly spent in gambling in a Monroe avenue saloon.

"I would prefer not to discuss the matter at present," said William Livingstone, president of the bank, "Earnshaw had been with us for a number of years, and we always believed him to be entirely trustworth". He was a marvel at figures, and the only complaint ever made against him was that he had been drinking quite heavily of late. He has admitted to us that he is behind in his accounts."

He is thirty-one years old and married.

RAISE $1,000.

Big Meeting Held In Light Guard Armory.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 4.—Nearly 1,500 citizens, mostly Italians, gathered in the Light Infantry armory in response to appeals for aid on behalf of the earthquake survivors in southern Italy. When the meeting closed $1,000 had been contributed. Speeches were made by many prominent men of the city.

Towards the close of the meeting a motion was made by Sidney T. Miller, president of the Michigan Red Cross society, for the appointment of a committee of 100 by Mayor Tompson to plan a system for the collection of relief funds as expeditiously as possible. The motion was well taken, and a committee was appointed at once.

LOADS OF PLUNDER

Found In Boy's Home, and He Confesses Robbery.

Muskegon, Mich., Jan. 4.—One of the biggest wholesale robberies known in this city has come to light, and the sheriff has the thief and his complete confession to place before the court.

The young man charged is Charles Bovee, the nineteen-year-old lad who a few days ago confessed to forging checks. The officers, upon going to the home of William Riley, the boy's father-in-law, found clothing, household effects and other articles of value enough to fill two spring wagons.

When confronted with the goods, Bovee broke down and admitted that he had stolen part of the goods. The officers are working on a theory that incriminates several playmates.

EARTH ROCKS.

Stromboli Islands Experience Severe Earthquake.

Rome, Jan. 4.—A violent earth shock, lasting three seconds and during which the Stromboli volcano began eruption, has occurred on Stromboli island.

The houses on the island were badly damager, and the populace fled to the streets in panic, but no one was hurt.

SHOT PARENT FIVE TIMES.

Reggie Clifford of Lansing Defends His Mother.

FATHER WAS ABUSING HER.

Boy Ran to Police Station and Surrendered—Tells Father, at Hospital, That He Didn't Feel Sorry—Parent Tells Son He Did Just Right—Lad Is Student In High School.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 4.—Reggie Clifford, seventeen years old, is locked up in jail here, while his father, J. H. Clifford, aged fifty-two years, is in the city hospital with five bullet wounds inflicted by the boy. He may not recover.

The father went home in an intoxicated condition and soon began to abuse his wife. He started in to beat her, when Reggie, who was occupying a bed in his mother's room, awakened and, seeing what his father was doing, pulled a 32 caliber revolver from under his pillow and fired at his intoxicated parent. The bullet entered the man's scalp and sent him to the floor. Four more shots were fired by the boy, they taking effect in the father's left lung, left leg, right arm, and just below the heart, respectively.

The lad, without stopping to robe himself in more than his underclothing, ran from the house to the police station, a distance of several blocks, and notified the police of what he had done. He was immediately locked up. The father was taken to the hospital.

Alleged Woman Was Abused.

The accident, which may develop into a tragedy owing to the critical condition of the father, is the climax, it is said, of weeks of abuse practiced on Mrs. Clifford by the father. Several nights ago he returned to his home, it is alleged by his wife, and, while intoxicated, he tried to force her to take carbolic acid and kill herself. Another time he is said to have attempted to strangle her to death.

The boy told the officers that when he shot his father he was cool and collected and knew what he was doing.

Before being taken to the hospital Clifford asked to see his son. Reggie was brought before him, and here a strange but pathetic occurrence took place.

"You did just what was right," said Clifford as he held the hand of the boy, "but you are sorry for it, aren't you, Reggie?"

"No, father, I am not. You didn't get enough," replied the lad, half crying.

Young Clifford is a student in the Lansing high school. The injured man is a foreman at a gasoline engine manufacturing plant here, and he is well known.

Boy Drowns Through Ice.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Jan. 4.—Edward Tonscany, ten years old, was drowned in the Clinton river here while on his way to fish. The boy was skating. While crossing a weak spot he broke through and drowned before assistance could arrive. The body was recovered.

May Get His Wish to Die.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 4.—Louis Anter, the Assyrian who tried to end his life by shooting himself in the right leg, is in a serious condition at the county jail and, it is said, may not recover. Blood poisoning has set in.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Mayor Custer of Eaton Rapids has started war against the nickel-in-the-slot machines. Prosecutions may follow.

Ralph Prince, supervisor of the town of Spalding, a prominent merchant and one of Menominee's pioneer settlers, is dead.

Dave McLeod, a popular young man of Iron Mountain, and brakeman on the St. Paul road, was badly injured by a falling log at Wausaukee, Wis. He is not expected to survive.

Bert Peck of Charlotte has been elected major of the Second Michigan battalion, Second regiment, Patriarchs Militant, comprising the cantons of Grand Rapids, Jackson and Charlotte.

Hyman Rivkin's store at Linwood, south of Standish, has burned. Rivkin built a fire in his store and went home for breakfast. The store caught fire during his absence. The loss will reach $9,000.

The parents of Louis Gonyaw, aged fifteen years, of Bay City are grief stricken because of his absence from home. The police believe the child drowned. He was going skating when last seen.

The parents of Louis Gethlin of Haliner avenue, River Rouge, a suburb of Detroit, both more than eighty years old, found the dead body of their son stretched across his bed with a bullet hole in his head. A revolver was in

Up Country.

By ALICE LOUISE LEE.

Copyright, 1908, by Alice Louise Lee.

SHE boarded a Broadway car at Fourteenth street, New York, being blown and jerked through the doorway and into the only empty seat space left.

It was an exceedingly narrow space, encroached upon on one side by a big red faced man and on the other by a dark hued son of Hungary.

Joy, being small, occupied the edge of the middle ground and stood her dripping umbrella in front of her. Then she leaned over the load of schoolbooks hugged under one arm and surveyed the hem of her skirt. It was damp.

"Oh, dear," she mourned inwardly, "I can just see it shrink, and it's the one Jim liked best!"

She squeezed herself farther back on the seat with a feeling of guilt. Three months before she had not had Jim's preferences so clearly in mind, but three months in New York had altered Joy's standpoint.

"OH, DEAR, I CAN JUST SEE IT SHRINK!"

She choked back the tears—they lay so near the surface now—and opened a book, but her thoughts would wander back to the "up country" which she had left, not content to settle down in the village school—or in a village home either, for that matter—after graduating from a normal college.

"Twenty-third street!" called the conductor.

Joy looked forlornly out into the early wet darkness and gave a sudden exclamation:

A car from the West Twenty-third street ferry had disgorged a crowd of transfers that were making a rush for her car. These the conductor met by the monotonous command, "Let 'em off—let 'em off!"

The crowd paused, held in check by a young man with a general appearance of squareness. His shoulders were square. So were his firm lower jaw and his tanned forehead.

As to his dealings, Joy could testify that they also were square, too square sometimes in that he had taken her at her word and for three dreary months remained silent.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "it's Jim!"

Fortunately neither the large man nor the son of Hungary understood the English language or the language of tones or they would have suspected that a Klondike had suddenly been rolled to the feet of the damp little public school substitute between them.

Impulsively she struggled to her feet under the impression that she was going to meet Jim and as impulsively sat down again, remembering that she could not. Would he see her? She waited breathlessly, with parted lips, when he entered.

In looking for a seat his eyes traveled straight past the now trembling little substitute without seeing her. A big lump rose in her throat. Perhaps he did not wish to see her. Perhaps he had been in the city for weeks and had not looked her up. It was just as well, she reasoned, that he had not, because her landlady had recently rented the parlor, so there would have been no place for him to sit, but—but she wanted to be remembered just the same.

The lump in her throat increased in size, and the lights blurred. "Up country" she had been of too great importance to be overlooked.

The square young man had found a seat on the same side of the car, and nothing of him was visible from Joy's position save the hand bag at his feet. Joy had not noticed this before. It proclaimed the fact that he had just arrived, and she was suddenly enabled to swallow the lump in her throat.

At Thirty-first street an old colored mammy boarded the car and, after one look at the full seats, clung to a strap. There was an instant's pause, and then Joy's eyes glowed softly and Joy's heart beat warmly.

"That's like Jim," she whispered to herself. "That's the way they do up country," for the square young man was clinging to the strap and the colored mammy was seated.

His back was toward Joy now—his straight, square shouldered back. It rested her just to look at it. She had not realized before how tired she was. Being only a substitute, she was the natural prey of every grade in the great school building where her task was the uneviable one of taking the place of absent teachers, one day in this room, one day in that, a stranger to every pupil, who celebrated her advent by a display of all the tricks known to the east side youth.

"Forty-second!" called the conductor.

Joy arose, trembling. She wondered if she could speak to Jim without crying. She had such a silly desire to cry. Jim solved her problem unexpectedly by reaching over, picking up his hand bag from between his feet and pushing his way out ahead of her, little dreaming for whom he was making a path.

He did not know until he stood on the curb and raised his umbrella. Then he discovered that it sheltered two, and the other was looking up with an adorable expression of timidity in her face and a little timid quaver in the voice which said, "How do you do, Jim?"

"Joy!" cried Jim.

Down went the hand bag hard on the wet pavement, and Joy's damp gloved hand was enveloped in a big dry one and held there tightly while Jim's eyes, thrown off their guard by the unexpectedness of the meeting, said things he had resolved they never should repeat, while he answered her greeting with an emphasis which brought the color to her pale cheeks.

"I'm doing very well—now—thank you."

Then they both laughed, Joy with a little girlish giggle which sounded strange to her own ears. It had been so long since she had laughed out of sheer happiness.

Some one pushing against them brought them back to a realization of time and place. Jim released her hand, asking vaguely, "And is everything well with you, Joy?"

Joy hesitated. Could she answer the question without giving way to the pent up feeling of three months?

"Oh, I"—she began and paused, looking away.

Jim, glancing down at her averted face, suddenly remembered things. There was an abrupt change in his manner. Stooping, he picked up his grip, saying dryly, "A foolish question to ask after hearing some of your letters read."

Then, without looking at her, he asked, "Which car do you take?"

"Crosstown east," she replied in a muffled tone.

As Jim signaled a car he volunteered the information stiffly, "I'm in the city on business."

"Oh!" faintly from Joy, but she smiled.

Within the car there was but scant seating room, and Joy snuggled back behind Jim's shoulder, saying to herself: "Such a foolish boy! Such a dear, foolish boy!"

Aloud she asked quietly, "Jim, what did you mean about my—my letters?"

Jim sat bolt upright, looking through the opposite window. "Your aunt read me some of them that told how you were enjoying yourself down here and how much liveller New York life is than our 'up country' life. I believe you wrote that the people here called it 'up country?'"

"Yes," came in a low tone from behind his shoulder. Joy's pride had dictated those letters.

"And then you wrote about the school—what a magnificent building you were in and how fine it is to be part of a school with fifty teachers instead of an insignificant six."

"Oh!" exclaimed Joy. "Did I say that?" But she knew without asking. She had been so determined that no one up country should suspect her regret.

Jim nodded, staring persistently out of the opposite window, and continued steadily. "Then she read one, the letter about your boarding house and what nice people are there"—

"Oh," interrupted Joy, "did she read you that letter?"

Jim squared his shoulders defiantly. "She did."

Behind his arm Joy was smiling faintly, while into her eyes crept an expression of mischief as she peered around the aggressive shoulder at the face set aggressively toward the window.

"Let's see"—Joy's tone was softly speculative—"what else did I write in regard to the boarders?"

No reply.

"I think it was in that letter I told about the lawyer who sits opposite me at table, but perhaps auntie didn't read you that part," demurely.

Only an indistinct affirmation from Jim.

"A very bright man," observed Joy.

"So you said in the letter," grimly.

"Rather nice looking."

If Jim had not been so intent on the opposite window he would have detected the smile in Joy's tone.

"Handsome, the letter said."

"He addresses his remarks almost exclusively to me."

"Exclusively, the letter said."

"Madison avenue!" called the conductor.

A moment later Jim and Joy stood on the curb under one umbrella waiting for a blockaded car. Jim stood straight and stiff, holding the umbrella high over their heads, admitting the cold, wet world to their conference.

"Jim!" said Joy softly, glancing up. "Jim!"

His face relaxed at her tone, but his voice was still grim and the umbrella held high. "Well?"

"The schoolhouse is a handsome building on the outside, just as I wrote; but, Jim, the pupils up country are so much nicer. Because I'm only a substitute they act—oh, you never saw such actions!"

Jim's muscles stiffened suggestively.

"I'd just like to get at 'em," he muttered.

"And, Jim"—Joy's tone was fainter and her face hidden—"it's true, of course, that life here is livelier than it is up country for some, but not for me. All I do is to go to school in the morning and go back to my hall bedroom at night. Oh, I hate it!" with suppressed vehemence.

The umbrella wavered and dropped lower over their heads. Jim's face was eager, but his voice sounded a jealous note as he prompted, "But there are all the nice people at the boarding house."

Joy shook her head. "It takes so long to make acquaintances here, Jim. I don't really know any of the boarders—that is, any one worth knowing."

Again the umbrella wavered, dropped a little lower, but rose again as Jim hesitated jealously. "That lawyer, Joy?"

Joy smiled and glanced bravely up, although her eyes were moist. But behind the tears gleamed the mischief as she replied:

"I—I didn't tell all the truth about the lawyer, Jim. He—he has a wife out west suing for a divorce, and I don't blame her a bit."

The umbrella wavered no longer, but dropped promptly close above their heads. A car, escaping the blockade in front of the Grand Central station, came groaning around the curve and stopped. All the waiting transfers save two scrambled on board. Those two were not aware of the existence of that car or the one which followed, so successfully did the big umbrella from "up country" shut out the cold, rainy world.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child. If there is feverishness, night or day. Herein probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 25c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 43 Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

The Complete Alpinist.

The young millionaire had climbed the Jungfrau, Monck and Eiger.

"It is more dangerous work than motoring," he said, "and, dear me, how the climber is loaded down. He resembles a peddler more than anything else. He carries wood to make a fire with. He carries nails for his boots. He carries a lamp. He also has an ax wherewith to cut steps for himself in perpendicular ice walls, and he has a cord wherewith to rope himself to his companions, and he has a staff to help him up and down the steeps. In the sack on his back there are all sorts of things—tubes of concentrated soup, tea, coffee, candles, socks, extra shirts, gloves, plus brandy, meat extract, smoked glasses. And dangling between his shoulders is a pair of snowshoes, without which in the hot August sun he would sink in the soft snow quite up to his knees at every step."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Wanted the Other One.

A handsome and neatly dressed young woman was walking down the street the other day, followed by her favorite dachshund pup. It was market day, and the pavement being somewhat crowded caused the dog to get some distance behind its mistress. Fearing it would lose sight of her, she called, "Come along, sir!"

A would be wit who was near stepped up to her and with great politeness said, "Certainly, miss."

"Ah!" she exclaimed as her pet came running up, "you have made a mistake! This is the puppy I called."—London Tit-Bits.

Know Them at Once.

The vicar appointed to a living in an old English village was anxious to restore his church. On either side of the porch were grotesque, not to say hideous, faces that had become almost hidden. The vicar had these ancient faces worked up until their features were made distinct. Then he took a very old lady of the parish to see them and jokingly asked if she could tell him who they were. "Why, bless my heart, sir," said she, peering at the old ornaments, "it's you and your good lady!"

Pear Shaped Balloons.

Pear shaped balloons are the fashion in Belgium. The point is upward; the base of the balloon is spherical. It is claimed th t balloons of this shape pierce the air vertically with far greater speed than the ordinary spherical balloon. Consequently they are steadier.

The Mere Formality Won.

"Yes, sir," said the pale, youthful suitor; "I have come to ask you for your daughter's hand. She is fair as lilies, charming"—

"Is that Mary you're talking about?" asked papa.

"Yes, sir. It is a mere formality, I know, this asking for your daughter's hand, but we thought it would be pleasing to you if it were observed."

Mary's papa stiffened.

"And may I inquire," he asked, "who suggested that asking my consent to Mary's marriage was a mere formality?"

"You may, sir," replied the young man simply. "It was Mary's mother."

Paraguay's Sweet Plant.

A herb called by the natives caa ehe, but botanically Eupatorium rebaudianum, grows wild in Paraguay. It is remarkable for its sweetness. Indeed, the native name means the "sugar plant." It grows along the borders of the river Amambahi and attains a height of only about five inches. The smallest bit of this plant when placed upon the tongue produces a surprisingly sweet flavor, which, it is said, lasts for hours. The saccharine power is much greater than that of sugar.—Youth's Companion.

Poverty Has Its Advantages.

A man on the wane of life observes that poverty has advantages and adversity its uses. If you are poor you can wear out your old clothes. You are excused from calls. You are not troubled with many visitors. Bores do not disturb you. Spongers do not haunt your tables. Brass bands do not serenade you. No one thinks of presenting you with a testimonial. No storekeeper irritates you by asking you, "Is there anything I can do for you?" Begging letter writers do not bother you. Flatterers do not flatter you. You are saved many debts and many a deception. And, lastly, if you have a true friend in the world you are sure to know it in a short space of time by him not deserting you.—Huntsville (Tex.) "THE FIRST VIOLIN."

"The Sweetest story ever told" really expresses the sentiment one feels when closing the book upon the last chapter of "The First Violin."

For twenty years, this delightful story has charmed many thousands of readers and holds the worlds record as having the largest sale of any book even written.

The same delightful story is now set forth as a Drama, and all the same sympathetic, amusing and interesting characters drawn by Jessie Fothergill become moving and speaking individuals.

The company enacting this play have been carefully selected that each might fulfill the ideal drawn by the author.

The play is full of good music, and tells a dramatic story. The appearance of this attraction is set for Wednesday, Jan 6th at the New Bradley.

Dabbling in stocks and leaving the farm to run itself is not a good way to do business. It is the surest way to trouble and loss. Money out of pocket every time for the man who follows it.

The first lesson in fence breaking may come from a little neglect on the part of the farmer to keep the boards or rails all whole. One board off and the mischief has been commenced. Look out for the beginning of such things.

FOR CONSTIPATION

A Medicine that Does Not Cost Anything Unless It Cures.

If you suffer from constipation in any form whatever, acute or chronic, we will guarantee to supply you medicine that will surely effect a cure if taken with regularity and according to directions for a reasonable length of time. Should the medicine fail to benefit you to your entire satisfaction, we promise that it shall cost you nothing.

No other remedy can be compared with Rexall Orderlies for the easy, pleasant and successful treatment of constipation. The active medicinal ingredient of this remedy which is odorless, tasteless and colorless, is an entirely new discovery. Combined with other extremely valuable ingredients, it forms a preparation which is incomparable as a perfect bowel regulator, intestinal invigorator and strengthener. Rexall Orderlies are notable for their agreeableness to the palate and gentleness of action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience, and may be taken at any time, day or night.

We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children, delicate or aged persons because they do not contain anything that could possibly injure the most delicate organism. They are just as easy to take as candy, and unlike other preparations for a like purpose they do not create a habit, but instead they overcome the cause of habits acquired through the use of ordinary laxatives; cathartics and harsh physic, and permanently remove the cause of constipation or irregular bowel action.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. We know that there is nothing that will do you so much good, and we will refund your money without argument if they do not do as we say they will. They are prepared in tablet form in two sizes of packages; 36 tablets, 25c, and 12 tablets, 10c. B. J. Pulver, the druggist.

OBITUARY

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH.

Mrs. Adelaide Smith a well and favorably known resident of Macon departed this life Sunday morning, December 20th, at the home of her brother Eugene L. Burdett.

She was a member of the Macon M. E. church at which place the funeral services were held conducted by Rev. Halliday assisted by Rev. Scarlett of the D. R. church, Macon.

Deceased was born in Macon, Sept. 30, 1846, always residing here.

On the 28th of August, 1889, she was united in marriage to Melankton Smith who preceded her to the better land Jan. 22nd, 1905. Since then she has made her home with her brother.

She was always loving and loved by all, ever ready to lend a helping hand in the time of need. Thus a large number of relatives and friends together with the brothers and sisters and dear nephew are left to mourn her departure:

After the night of darkness,
The shadows all flee away;
After the day of sadness,
Hope sheds her brightest ray;
After the warfare and struggle,
The victory is won;
After the work is over,
The Masters own word, "well done."
After the pain and sickness,
The tears are all wiped away;
After the flowers are gathered,
No more of earths decay;
After the deep heart sorrow,
An end of every strife;
After the daily crosses;
A glorious crown of life.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the Revs. Halliday and Scarlett, the quartet, those who furnished beautiful floral offerings, kind friends and neighbors who so willingly rendered their sympathy and very kind assistance during the illness death and burial of our dear sister, we, the undersigned, extend our deepest heartfelt thanks.

MR AND MRS. EUGENE BURDETT AND SON ERNEST.
MR AND MRS. JAMES BURDETT.

MARY BUCK.

Mary Buck was born in Seneca, Co., N. Y., January 14, 1824. She was one of a family of nine children, two of whom, Sylvanus Howell of Clinton, Mich., and Mrs. Elizabeth Tarne of Nunda, N. Y., survive her.

She was married to John F. Buck April 12, 1848. They came west to Michigan soon after their marriage and settled in the township of Keeler, Van-Buren Co. In 1863 they left Keeler and removed to Washtenaw Co., where they continued to live until about nine years ago, when, on account of the failing health of Mrs. Buck, they came to live with their daughter, Mrs. Isaac Ganoung. Here, surrounded by loved ones and ministered to by husband and children, Mrs. Buck continued to reside until her death, on the 29th of Dec., 1908.

The deceased was the mother of three children, all of whom survive her. These are Charles of Lansing, Frank of Saline, and Delpha of Macon, who, together with the father and numerous other relatives, mourn their loss.

Mrs. Buck was a woman of sterling Christian character. Her confidence in God continued steadfast to the end; she was ever conscious of his presence and support. On the Sabbath immediately before her depature she expressed herself to her pastor as ready and anxious to go. To her daughter, Mrs. Ganoung, she said: "You cannot help me, and I cannot help myself, but Jesus can make a dying bed feel soft as downy pillows are, while on his breast I lean my head and breathe my life out sweetly there." And thus, leaning on the breast of her Savior, she entered the valley of the shadow of death.

The funeral services were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs Ganoung on Dec. 31st, conducted by Rev. J. D. Halliday of Clinton, with burial in the cemetery at Macon.

Mrs. Sarah Sanford.

Sarah Cornelia Merrill was born Feb. 28, 1820, in the town of Barry, Geneva Co., N. Y., and departed this life Saturday, Jan. 2, 1909. She moved to Michigan in the year 1836 and settled in Saline township where on Dec. 7, 1842, she was united in marriage to Ezra Sanford. To this union were born eight children, seven sons and one daughter, of which four remain to mourn their loss, Webster L. of Seattle, Wash., Merril P. of Tecumseh; Chas. E. of Swanzville, Minn., and Sheldan, known as Doc of Raisin Valley.

Mrs. Sanford was converted when quite young, and on coming to Tecumseh she united with the Presbyterian church, but for the last five years has worshiped with the Free Methodists. She has been a faithful attendant at all religious meetings of her chosen church and her presence will be greatly missed. The life just closed has been a useful one; her great and sympathising heart, and helping hand, have ever been open to assist a less fortunate sister or brother.

The funeral was held from the home Monday afternoon with Rev. Larkins of the Free Methodist church officiating assisted by Rev Chaney of the Friends church. There was a large attendance. Those who bore the body to its last resting place in Brookside cemetery were Miles Baldwin, John Welch, John Boland, Elijah Ames, Henry Nyland, and Henry Keyser, all of the gentlemen being over 80 years of age.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank the friends who assisted and aided me during the sickness and death of my mother. I wish to especially thank Mrs. Beckley, who assisted me in many ways.

Nothing had ever been seen of the papers amounting to $1,800, until Friday, when the workmen on the farm of Robert McHennie, who lives about three miles east of the village were clearing some of the land, when the papers were discovered in an old tree Postmaster Freese was sent for and identified the notes.

BUSY BUSINESS MEN

Science Helps Them Out After Recklessly Abusing the Stomach.

The most reckless man in regard to health is the busy business man. At noon he rushes out for a bite to eat. He bolts his food without proper mastication, and heaps on his stomach an extra burden greater than it is able to carry without breaking down.

His overworked stomach is crying for help; it appeals to him for relief in various ways: Expulsion of sour gas; heaviness after eating; shortness of breath; bad breath, etc.

A Mi-o-na tablet taken before each meal will help any sufferer from dyspepsia wonderfully. It prepares the stomach for the work of digestion which it must perform.

Mi-o-na tablets are sold by C. A. Wright & Son at 50c a large box, with a rigid guarantee to cure dyspepsia and all stomach troubles, or money back. They make eating a pleasure.

"A stomach complaint had bothered me many months, when I heard of Mi-o-na. I procured a treatment and used it a short time. This remedy did me good in many ways, as it not only relieved the stomach trouble, but made me much better in my general health. The trouble I had was from a heavy and distended feeling in my stomach, pains and distress, and generally in the morning, I would feel like vomiting but could not. Mi-o-na acted fine on my ailments, and has my endorsement." G. R Gillespie, Potonotomie St., Tecumseh, Mich., Oct. 15, 1908.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First — Don't Delay — Second — Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Tecumseh residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Tecumseh citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

John B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For several years I suffered a great deal from rheumatism and backache. My kidneys were badly disordered and I knew that they caused all my trouble. About two years ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time I was relieved. I have had no serious attacks of the trouble since. Shortly after using Doan's Kidney Pills I told of my experience through the local papers and at this time I am glad to verify that statement and again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole Agents for the United States.

Insomnia and Alarm Clocks.

The patient complained of insomnia. "You must get an alarm clock at once," said the physician.

The patient stared.

"I mean it. What time do you waken usually in the night?"

"Two o'clock lately."

"Set the alarm for fifteen minutes before 2. As soon as it strikes, get up, dress for the day and take a walk of not less than two miles. Do not go to bed again that day under any circumstances, nor take a nap, even sitting in your chair.

"The next night set the alarm at a quarter past 2. You will sleep until it wakens you. Get up as before and take another two mile walk.

"The third night you can venture to set your alarm at 3. Repeat the walk. If you are not cured by that time, you will be a more difficult case than any I have had heretofore, but if the habit of lying awake is not broken begin back at 2 o'clock again and repeat."—New York Press.

Wonderful.

Two sailors noticed that a shark was following their ship. Not knowing how to get rid of it, they threw a chair overboard.

The shark swallowed this, but still followed.

The sailors then threw a box of oranges overboard to it.

The shark swallowed this and still followed.

The men seemed completely beaten for a moment what to do until one of them said that those on board should draw lots for who had to satisfy the shark.

It fell to an old woman. So the sailors tossed her overboard, and the shark ate her at one bite.

This did not content the fish, which still followed. So the sailors harpooned it and dragged it on board.

On opening it they found to their surprise the old woman sitting on the chair selling oranges "three a penny."—Pearson's Weekly.

Fresh Water From the Ocean.

Manama, the principal port of the Bahrein Islands, the center of the pearl fisheries, gets its fresh water from the ocean. Visitors often note boats anchored a few hundred yards from the shore, the boatmen engaged in drawing fresh water from springs at the bottom of the sea. These springs well up strongly at a considerable depth, and the entire water supply of the town is obtained from them. The fresh water is procured in two ways—either in a goatskin water bag, which a diver takes down with him and carefully closes before bringing it to the surface, or by letting down long hollow pipes of bamboo, weighted at the lower end, through which the water rises up uncontaminated to the surface.—Argonaut.

A Life Note.

"Life is what we make it," said the philosopher.

"Alas," exclaimed the practical one, "that we can't make it a million!"

We ask Providence to make us thankful for what we receive and then go to figuring on just how much Providence is going to send us.—Atlanta Constitution.

A Present.

"That's a very fine purse you have, Henry."

"Yes. My wife gave it to me on my birthday."

"Indeed! Anything in it?"

"Yes; the bill for the purse."

One Exception.

The Husband (during the quarrel)—You're always making bargains. Was there ever a time when you didn't? The Wife—Yes, sir; on my wedding day.

Turn thyself to the true riches and learn to be content with little.—Seneca.

It soothes pain, it is cooling and healing. Good for cuts, burns, bruises and scratches, but especially recommended for piles—DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve. Sold by all dealers.

Sleep

Sleep is nature's rebuilding period, when the energy used by the brain, muscles and organs is renewed. If you lose sleep, your system is robbed of the strength sleep should give. Continued loss of sleep multiplies this loss until you become a physical wreck. Dr. Miles' Nervine quiets the irritated nerves and brings refreshing, invigorating sleep. Nervine contains no opiates, and therefor leaves no bad after-effects.

"For over two years I suffered untold agonies; my friends thought I was going crazy. I could not sleep nor rest at all. I tried different doctors, but failed to find relief. My head would ache all the time; I was like one drunk; could not concentrate my mind, and was so restless and worried that sleep was out of the question. After taking one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine I felt wonderfully changed. I am now on my third bottle and am gaining all the time. I can lie down and sleep like a child, and am able to do my work."
MRS. MAY SCOTT, English, Ind.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

England's Mother Church.

The oldest frequented church in England is probably St. Martin's, at Canterbury, and you may call it the mother church of England. Walk up from the outskirts of the city and you will pass the font which gave baptism to King Ethelbert 1,300 years ago. The font still stands, the worshipers still mount the slope, and one considers whether it was Augustine or Bertha who dragged the king and husband to that font.—London Chronicle.

World's Cleanest Soldiers.

The Japanese soldier considers it a disgrace to be dirty. Soldiers of other nationalities are not always overparticular, but, as Mr. Kipling has sung: Oh, east is east, and west is west, and never the twain shall meet.

However, the Japanese military man is not provided by a grateful and beneficent government with a portable bath, so when on active service he has to set his wits to work in order to obtain the necessary adjuncts to his ablutions.

The Chinese, for reasons of their own, manufacture long and large jars, whose diameter is that of a western main drain. It occurred to a bright Japanese that one might just as well have a bath standing up as lying down.

Accordingly he and his comrades interred a jar, built a furnace beneath it and filled it with water. Soon a boiling hot bath bubbled before them. Imitators sprang into being and subsequently into similar baths.—Bystand-

Stomach Muscles In Old Age

How Old People May Retain or Restore Good Health

Usually the bowels are not so active in middle or advanced years as in youth. Just as the eyes grow dim, the skin wrinkled, the hair gray, the muscles dabby, so do the internal organs show their age if we could but see them.

However we sometimes find a person whose age is near the meted three-score and ten and yet his step is sprightly, his eye keen, his flesh firm, his appetite good and his bowels regular, and upon close questioning you will find a life's history of right-living, good food, keen appetite, perfect digestion and regular bowel action.

Regular bowels and proper digestion of the food we eat is absolutely necessary to the enjoyment of good health by old or young. If the readers of this article are interested, we are glad to tell them how they can restore good health and prolong their lives.

Step into a drug store and purchase a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It will cleanse the bowels of any waste matter that has clogged them up and restore to them strength and nerve force for regular natural daily action. It aids digestion by stimulating the stomach and digestive glands to a proper and sufficient secretion of the fluids necessary to perfect digestion. It acts on the liver and kidneys in a mild, quiet yet effective manner. Rev. A. J. Fletcher, of Rutherford, Tenn., is 80 years old, and it cured him of 60 years of dyspepsia. W. W. Sterling, Sioux City, Ia., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best medicine I ever used and I am 88 years old." B. F. Thompson, Shenandoah, Ia., says: "I suffered 15 years with dyspepsia and it cured me." It is certain and effective in the most obstinate old cases, and yet mild and safe for the most delicate woman or child. All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 304 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill., is glad to send a free sample to any one who has never used it and will give it a fair trial.

HELD MANY OFFICES.

Frederick J. Dowland of Ludington is Dead.

Ludington, Mich., Jan. 4.—Frederick J. Dowland, ex-county treasurer, is dead here, the result of a stroke of apoplexy suffered two weeks ago.

Deceased was one of the earliest settlers in Mason county and had a hand in the developments and prosperity of this region since his arrival in 1867. He was made secretary and general manager of the Pere Marquette Lumber company in 1878, which position he held at his death. Probably no man in Mason county or Ludington held so many offices of public trust as he.

Smyrna Figs.

Smyrna figs ripen by the beginning of August. They are not picked, but when they reach a certain maturity they begin to dry, and consequently they drop on the ground. In the morning everybody on the plantations goes around with buckets gathering the fruit, which they carry to a certain place where the ground is covered with dry leaves and straw (sergel) and on which they spread the fruit, exposing it to the sun, allowing it to remain there from two to three days. It takes about three days to dry the fig if north winds prevail, as the atmosphere is then very dry. If, however, westerly winds are blowing, which means heavy dew at night, the fruit must remain exposed to the sun from five to seven days. This is a dangerous period, as rain or even a shower might ruin hundreds of tons of fruit lying on the ground. Heavy dews sometimes are just as detrimental. The proper atmospheric conditions to insure a crop of large, sound, rich figs are west winds in June and July, followed by north winds in August, and from then on an occasional west wind every five or six days.

Not a Nursery.

"Before I got this job I had no idea so many funny things happened on street cars," said a new conductor, according to the Denver Post. "Every day I see and hear things that are amusing. For instance, a woman with a baby about two years old boarded my car and rode downtown. When we reached Fifteenth and California she rose to get off. The baby was tucked snugly in the corner of the seat. The woman hesitated in the aisle. 'Say,' she said to me, 'I'd like to ask a favor of you.'

"'What is it?' I asked.

"'I've got some shopping to do,' she said. 'Would you please take baby around a trip with you? I don't want him with me. I'll be back when you return to this corner and take him.'

"'Madam,' I replied, 'I can't take care of your baby. Suppose he should get to crying, as he undoubtedly would?'

"'Well, goodness me,' she said, 'you could slap him, couldn't you?'"

The Sleepless Seven.

"There were seven of the twelve," said one of the discharged jurors in speaking of the matter next morning, "who didn't want to sleep themselves and wouldn't let the rest of us sleep. Whenever we dropped into a doze they came around and shook us till we were wide awake again."

"And you had to submit, I suppose, for they constituted the majority?"

"Yes. They were a rousing majority," said the hollow eyed juror, with a pensive attempt to be facetious.—Chicago Tribune.

ON ITS WAY THROUGH CANAL

Atlantic Fleet Now Making Journey Through Suez.

FIRST SHIPS STARTED TODAY.

Very Short Stop Made at Suez—Enthusiastically Welcomed—Two Vessels Laden With Supplies Start For Messina to Aid Earthquake Sufferers—Entire Fleet May Go.

Suez, Jan. 4.—The United States Atlantic battleship fleet, completing two days ahead of its schedule, the next to the longest run of its world girdling cruise, has arrived here from Colombo, a distance of 3,440 knots, and is now on its way through the canal. The first group of vessels started at 6 o'clock this morning.

The weather was splendid when the vessels arrived, and the bay was crowded with craft, the occupants of which gave an enthusiastic welcome to the ships. The warships looked smart and trim.

The Egyptian and canal authorities went aboard the flagship Connecticut and welcomed Rear Admiral Sperry.

Universal regret was expressed here that the visit of the battleships will be so brief.

The converted cruiser Yankton with a number of doctors aboard and the supply ship Culgoa with a large supply of provisions and stores will go to Messina at full speed. The fleet will pass through the canal as quickly as possible and coal at Port Said, where 25,000 tons of coal are stored. The crews will coal the ships with all possible speed, so as to be in a position to go quickly to Messina if it is finally determined to send them there.

New Year's day was passed by the men of the fleet in a continuous round of fun.

The news of the disaster in southern Italy was received with profound sorrow by officers and men. In a reply to a message from the navy department, Rear Admiral Sperry said that he had supplies available for distribution to the Italian earthquake sufferers as follows:

Beverages, 50,000; bread, 690,000 pounds; cereals, 80,000 pounds; fruits, 90,000 pounds; fresh meat, 90,000 pounds; other meats, 100,000 pounds; vegetables canned, 80,000 pounds; milk, 50,000 pounds, and numerous other items.

The Culgoa will distribute these provisions.

LIVELY CONTEST LIKELY.

Missouri Legislature to Elect Senator and Lieutenant Governor.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 4.—The legislature of Missouri, which convenes on Wednesday, faces the task of settling the election of a United States senator and of the lieutenant governor of the state. Indications are not wanting that bitter struggles will precede each selection, and rumors of the breaking of party lines are numerous.

The lieutenant governorship carries added interest because of reports that Governor Elect Hadley, who assumes office on Jan. 12, contemplates retiring from the governorship before his four year term is finished, this decision being contingent on the ultimate selection of Jacob F. Gmelich as lieutenant governor. It is said to be Mr. Hadley's desires to have a place on the federal bench. The governor has refused to discuss these reports for publication.

CORBETT LIKELY SINCERE.

With Six Months' Training Believes He Can Defeat Johnson.

Denver, Jan. 4.—Apparently James J. Corbett is sincere in his announcement that he will re-enter the prize ring and endeavor to bring back to a white man the world's heavyweight pugilistic championship won by Jack Johnson of Galveston, who recently defeated Tommy Burns in Australia for the title.

Given six months in which to train properly for the contest, Corbett said that he felt supremely confident that he could defeat Johnson.

Corbett is now forty-two years old, but he appears to be in perfect physical condition.

"I've always kept up my exercise," said Corbett, "and physically I know I am in better condition than Jeffries or any of the others, outside of these young fellows who would not have a chance on earth anyway with Johnson. I feel bad to see a colored man champion."

While Harry and Dewey Carpenter were skating on Higgins lake, near Standish, they saw a big fish directly under the ice, near the surface. They secured a spear and axe, cut a hole in the ice and speared the fish. It was a big muscallonge and weighed thirty-five pounds.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First — Don't Delay — Second — Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but forerunners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Tecumseh residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Tecumseh citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

John B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For several years I suffered a great deal from rheumatism and backache. My kidneys were badly disordered and I knew that they caused all my trouble. About two years ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time I was relieved. I have had no serious attacks of the trouble since. Shortly after using Doan's Kidney Pills I told of my experience through the local papers and at this time I am glad to verify that statement and again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

Insomnia and Alarm Clocks.

The patient complained of insomnia.

"You must get an alarm clock at once," said the physician.

The patient stared.

"I mean it. What time do you waken usually in the night?"

"Two o'clock lately."

"Set the alarm for fifteen minutes before 2. As soon as it strikes, get up, dress for the day and take a walk of not less than two miles. Do not go to bed again that day under any circumstances, nor take a nap, even sitting in your chair.

"The next night set the alarm at a quarter past 2. You will sleep until it wakens you. Get up as before and take another two mile walk.

"The third night you can venture to set your alarm at 3. Repeat the walk. If you are not cured by that time, you will be a more difficult case than any I have had heretofore, but if the habit of lying awake is not broken begin back at 2 o'clock again and repeat."—New York Press.

Wonderful.

Two sailors noticed that a shark was following their ship. Not knowing how to get rid of it, they threw a chair overboard.

The shark swallowed this, but still followed.

The sailors then threw a box of oranges overboard to it.

The shark swallowed this and still followed.

The men seemed completely beaten for a moment what to do until one of them said that those on board should draw lots for who had to satisfy the shark.

It fell to an old woman. So the sailors tossed her overboard, and the shark ate her at one bite.

This did not content the fish, which still followed. So the sailors harpooned it and dragged it on board.

On opening it they found to their surprise the old woman sitting on the chair selling oranges "three a penny."—Pearson's Weekly.

Fresh Water From the Ocean.

Manama, the principal port of the Bahrein islands, the center of the pearl fisheries, gets its fresh water from the ocean. Visitors often note boats anchored a few hundred yards from the shore, the boatmen engaged in drawing fresh water from springs at the bottom of the sea. These springs well up strongly at a considerable depth, and the entire water supply of the town is obtained from them. The fresh water is procured in two ways—either in a goatskin water bag, which a diver takes down with him and carefully closes before bringing it to the surface, or by letting down long hollow pipes of bamboo, weighted at the lower end, through which the water rises up uncontaminated to the surface.—Argonaut.

A Life Note.

"Life is what we make it," said the philosopher.

"Alas," exclaimed the practical one, "that we can't make it a million!"

A Present.

"That's a very fine purse you have, Henry."

"Yes. My wife gave it to me on my birthday."

"Indeed! Anything in it?"

"Yes; the bill for the purse."

Sleep

Sleep is nature's rebuilding period, when the energy used by the brain, muscles and organs is renewed. If you lose sleep, your system is robbed of the strength sleep should give. Continued loss of sleep multiplies this loss until you become a physical wreck. Dr. Miles' Nervine quiets the irritated nerves and brings refreshing, invigorating sleep. Nervine contains no opiates, and therefor leaves no bad after-effects.

"For over two years I suffered untold agonies; my friends thought I was going crazy. I could not sleep nor rest at all. I tried different doctors, but failed to find relief. My head would ache all the time; I was like one drunk; could not concentrate my mind, and was so restless and worried that sleep was out of the question. After taking one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine I felt wonderfully changed. I am now on my third bottle and am gaining all the time. I can lie down and sleep like a child, and am able to do my work." MRS. MAY SCOTT, English, Ind.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

England's Mother Church.

The oldest frequented church in England is probably St. Martin's, at Canterbury, and you may call it the mother church of England. Walk up from the outskirts of the city and you will pass the font which gave baptism to King Ethelbert 1,300 years ago. The font still stands, the worshipers still mount the slope, and one considers whether it was Augustine or Bertha who dragged the king and husband to that font.—London Chronicle.

World's Cleanest Soldiers.

The Japanese soldier considers it a disgrace to be dirty. Soldiers of other nationalities are not always overparticular, but, as Mr. Kipling has sung:

Oh, east is east, and west is west, and never the twain shall meet.

However, the Japanese military man is not provided by a grateful and beneficent government with a portable bath, so when on active service he has to set his wits to work in order to obtain the necessary adjuncts to his ablutions.

The Chinese, for reasons of their own, manufacture long and large jars, whose diameter is that of a western main drain. It occurred to a bright Japanese that one might just as well have a bath standing up as lying down.

Accordingly he and his comrades interred a jar, built a furnace beneath it and filled it with water. Soon a boiling hot bath bubbled before them. Imitators sprang into being and subsequently into similar baths.—Bystander.

There is no case on record of a cough, cold or la grippe developing into pneumonia after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it cures the most obstinate deep seated coughs and colds. Why take anything else. Sold by all druggists.

Stomach Muscles In Old Age

How Old People May Retain or Restore Good Health

Usually the bowels are not so active in middle or advanced years as in youth. Just as the eyes grow dim, the skin wrinkled, the hair gray, the muscles flabby, so do the internal organs show their age if we could but see them.

However we sometimes find a person whose age is near the meted three-score and ten and yet his step is sprightly, his eye keen, his flesh firm, his appetite good and his bowels regular, and upon close questioning you will find a life's history of right-living, good food, keen appetite, perfect digestion and regular bowel action.

Regular bowels and proper digestion of the food we eat is absolutely necessary to the enjoyment of good health by old or young. If the readers of this article are interested, we are glad to tell them how they can restore good health and prolong their lives.

Step into a drug store and purchase a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It will cleanse the bowels of any waste matter that has clogged them up and restore to them strength and nerve force for regular natural daily action. It aids digestion by stimulating the stomach and digestive glands to a proper and sufficient secretion of the fluids necessary to perfect digestion. It acts on the liver and kidneys in a mild, quiet yet effective manner. Rev. A. J. Fletcher, of Rutherford, Tenn., is 80 years old, and it cured him of 60 years of dyspepsia. W. W. Sterling, Sioux City, Ia., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best medicine I ever used and I am 82 years old." B. F. Thompson, Shenandoah, Ia., says: "I suffered 15 years with dyspepsia and it cured me." It is certain and effective in the most obstinate old cases, and yet mild and safe for the most delicate woman or child. All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 304 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill., is glad to send a free sample to any one who has never used it and will give it a fair trial.

HELD MANY OFFICES.

Frederick J. Dowland of Ludington is Dead.

Ludington, Mich., Jan. 4.—Frederick J. Dowland, ex-county treasurer, is dead here, the result of a stroke of apoplexy suffered two weeks ago.

Deceased was one of the earliest settlers in Mason county and had a hand in the developments and prosperity of this region since his arrival in 1867. He was made secretary and general manager of the Pere Marquette Lumber company in 1878, which position he held at his death. Probably no man in Mason county or Ludington held so many offices of public trust as he.

Smyrna Figs.

Smyrna figs ripen by the beginning of August. They are not picked, but when they reach a certain maturity they begin to dry, and consequently they drop on the ground. In the morning everybody on the plantations goes around with buckets gathering the fruit, which they carry to a certain place where the ground is covered with dry leaves and straw (sergel) and on which they spread the fruit, exposing it to the sun, allowing it to remain there from two to three days. It takes about three days to dry the fig if north winds prevail, as the atmosphere is then very dry. If, however, westerly winds are blowing, which means heavy dew at night, the fruit must remain exposed to the sun from five to seven days. This is a dangerous period, as rain or even a shower might ruin hundreds of tons of fruit lying on the ground. Heavy dews sometimes are just as detrimental. The proper atmospheric conditions to insure a crop of large, sound, rich figs are west winds in June and July, followed by north winds in August, and from then on an occasional west wind every five or six days.

Not a Nursery.

"Before I got this job I had no idea so many funny things happened on street cars," said a new conductor, according to the Denver Post. "Every day I see and hear things that are amusing. For instance, a woman with a baby about two years old boarded my car and rode downtown. When we reached Fifteenth and California she rose to get off. The baby was tucked snugly in the corner of the seat. The woman hesitated in the aisle. 'Say,' she said to me, 'I'd like to ask a favor of you.'

"'What is it?' I asked.

"'I've got some shopping to do,' she said. 'Would you please take baby around a trip with you? I don't want him with me. I'll be back when you return to this corner and take him.'

"'Madam,' I replied, 'I can't take care of your baby. Suppose he should get to crying, as he undoubtedly would?'

"'Well, goodness me,' she said, 'you could slap him, couldn't you?'"

The Sleepless Seven.

"There were seven of the twelve," said one of the discharged jurors in speaking of the matter next morning, "who didn't want to sleep themselves and wouldn't let the rest of us sleep. Whenever we dropped into a doze they came around and shook us till we were wide awake again."

"And you had to submit, I suppose, for they constituted the majority?"

"Yes. They were a rousing majority," said the hollow eyed juror, with a pensive attempt to be facetious.—Chicago Tribune.

ON ITS WAY THROUGH CANAL

Atlantic Fleet Now Making Journey Through Suez.

FIRST SHIPS STARTED TODAY.

Very Short Stop Made at Suez—Enthusiastically Welcomed—Two Vessels Laden With Supplies Start For Messina to Aid Earthquake Sufferers—Entire Fleet May Go.

Suez, Jan. 4.—The United States Atlantic battleship fleet, completing, two days ahead of its schedule, the next to the longest run of its world girdling cruise, has arrived here from Colombo, a distance of 3,440 knots, and is now on its way through the canal. The first group of vessels started at 6 o'clock this morning.

The weather was splendid when the vessels arrived, and the bay was crowded with craft, the occupants of which gave an enthusiastic welcome to the ships. The warships looked smart and trim.

The Egyptian and canal authorities went aboard the flagship Connecticut and welcomed Rear Admiral Sperry.

Universal regret was expressed here that the visit of the battleships will be so brief.

The converted cruiser Yankton with a number of doctors aboard and the supply ship Culgoa with a large supply of provisions and stores will go to Messina at full speed. The fleet will pass through the canal as quickly as possible and coal at Port Said, where 25,000 tons of coal are stored. The crews will coal the ships with all possible speed, so as to be in a position to go quickly to Messina if it is finally determined to send them there.

New Year's day was passed by the men of the fleet in a continuous round of fun.

The news of the disaster in southern Italy was received with profound sorrow by officers and men. In a reply to a message from the navy department, Rear Admiral Sperry said that he had supplies available for distribution to the Italian earthquake sufferers as follows:

Beverages, 50,000; bread, 690,000 pounds; cereals, 80,000 pounds; fruits, 90,000 pounds; fresh meat, 90,000 pounds; other meats, 100,000 pounds; vegetables canned, 80,000 pounds; milk, 50,000 pounds, and numerous other items.

The Culgoa will distribute these provisions.

LIVELY CONTEST LIKELY.

Missouri Legislature to Elect Senator and Lieutenant Governor.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 4.—The legislature of Missouri, which convenes on Wednesday, faces the task of settling the election of a United States senator and of the lieutenant governor of the state. Indications are not wanting that bitter struggles will precede each selection, and rumors of the breaking of party lines are numerous.

The lieutenant governorship carries added interest because of reports that Governor Elect Hadley, who assumes office on Jan. 12, contemplates retiring from the governorship before his four year term is finished, this decision being contingent on the ultimate selection of Jacob F. Gmelich as lieutenant governor. It is said to be Mr. Hadley's desires to have a place on the federal bench. The governor has refused to discuss these reports for publication.

CORBETT LIKELY SINCERE.

With Six Months' Training Believes He Can Defeat Johnson.

Denver, Jan. 4.—Apparently James J. Corbett is sincere in his announcement that he will re-enter the prize ring and endeavor to bring back to a white man the world's heavyweight pugilistic championship won by Jack Johnson of Galveston, who recently defeated Tommy Burns in Australia for the title.

Given six months in which to train properly for the contest, Corbett said that he felt supremely confident that he could defeat Johnson.

Corbett is now forty-two years old, but he appears to be in perfect physical condition.

"I've always kept up my exercise," said Corbett, "and physically I know I am in better condition than Jeffries or any of the others, outside of these young fellows who would not have a chance on earth anyway with Johnson. I feel bad to see a colored man champion."

While Harry and Dewey Carpenter were skating on Higgins lake, near Standish, they saw a big fish directly under the ice, near the surface. They secured a spear and axe, cut a hole in the ice and speared the fish. It was a big muscallonge and weighed thirty-five pounds.

Smart Set English.

The speech of the smart man and woman sufficiently betrays the modern attitude. To speak good English is middle class. The modern vocabulary is very small, and the greater part of it is composed of slang.—Black and White.

"COUNT" HAMON QUITS PARIS.

Man Who Dazzled and Mystified Society Had to Flee.

WANTED FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

Man With Meteoric and Mysterious Career, Known in America and Europe as "Cheiro, the Palmist," Alleged to Have Squandered Money of Two American Women.

Paris, Jan. 7.—"Count" Louis Hamon, formerly known in America and Europe as "Cheiro, the palmist," and before that as plain John Warner, is a fugitive from France, and the entire American and English colony is discussing one of the most meteoric and mysterious careers which ever dazzled Parisian society.

Hamon is charged with embezzlement, and his sumptuous offices, where he edited a newspaper called The American Register and conducted a bank and other enterprises, to which Americans loaned capital, are bare and empty, scores of creditors having descended and seized everything.

The complainants against Hamon are Mrs. Julia P. Newell and Miss Josephine Pomeroy, formerly of New York, but now residents of Paris, who declare that they turned over to Hamon stocks to the market value of $500,000, on which Hamon agreed to raise a loan through London banks of $150,000. They allege, however, that Hamon neither negotiated the loan or returned the stock, in consequence of which they began a criminal action against the Hamon bank.

An examining magistrate opened an investigation, after which, according to Hamon's secretary, Hamon, learning that a warrant was about to be issued for his arrest, left for London.

Since he arrived in Paris in 1902, when he transformed himself from "Cheiro, the palmist," to "Count Hamon," he has been a dashing figure, and he had easy access to society. Everybody talked of the mysterious "Count Hamon," his beautiful apartments, his horses, his vast business ventures.

But Hamon's life before he came to Paris was a great mystery. Hamon is now penniless, according to his secretary.

The case against him, it is said, does not come under the jurisdiction of the French laws, as the negotiations have been entirely placed in England, from which country Hamon is determined to defend himself.

HAULS DOWN FLAG.

Goodrich, Navy's Ranking Admiral, Retires From Active Service.

New York, Jan. 7.—Rear Admiral Caspar F. Goodrich, commandant of the New York navy yard and since the retirement of Admiral Evans the ranking rear admiral on the active list, was placed on the retired list today under the age limit. Admiral Goodrich, who is recognized as one of the ablest officers in the service, when he hauled down his flag today had been in active service nearly forty-four years, during which time he held some of the most important assignments, both ashore and afloat, in the gift of the navy department. As commander of the Pacific fleet he rendered signal service to the stricken people of San Francisco at the time of the earthquake that wrecked that city.

Admiral Goodrich will probably continue in command of the navy yard until the end of President Roosevelt's administration at least.

Report May Rebuke President.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The special committee considering the reference to congress and the secret service in the president's annual message is to report to the house on Friday. It is understood that the report will rebuke the president.

mony was performed in St. Paul's cathedral by Bishop Canevin, a warm friend of the Vilsack family. The couple will live in New York.

Miss Vilsack first met Mr. Mulcahy at St. Louis during the Louisiana Purchase exposition, where he posed for the statue "Strength and Power" because of his magnificent physique. He is a graduate of Fordham university and has won international fame as an oarsman.

NOT ANXIOUS TO TAKE CASE.

Landis and Bethea Decline to Hear Standard Oil Re-Trial.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—The distinction of hearing the retrial of the Standard Oil case in which Judge Landis' fine of $29,240,000 went to pieces in the United States appellate and supreme courts has gone begging.

District Attorney Sims went before Judge Landis and announced that he would like to begin a new hearing of the case on Monday. Judge Landis answered that in view of his convictions in the case (fundamentally that each carload constituted an offense) he did not care to sit again in the case. "But," continued the court, "I will ask Judge Bethea about it; maybe he will take it."

But Judge Sol H. Bethea of the district court pleaded some slight connection with the matter even before it reached Judge Landis and asked to be excused.

"Well," Judge Landis pursued after his telephone conversation with Judge Bethea, "Judge Anderson is coming here to try a case for me soon; wait till he arrives, and we'll see what can be done."

And there the subject was allowed to rest for the present.

Boston, Jan. 7.—With all due and solemn ceremony, as befits so ancient a commonwealth as the state of Massachusetts, Eben S. Draper of Hopedale was proclaimed governor of the state and commander of its forces in the statehouse here today.

The ceremonies of inauguration were performed as usual in the presence of the members of the state legislature, convened under their title of "the great and general court" of the state. The oath of office was administered to Governor Draper and Lieutenant Governor Frothingham by President Treadway of the state senate. After Governor Draper delivered his inaugual address he retired with his suit, and the convention dissolved.

JUDGE CALLS DOWN LAWYER

Wouldn't Stand For Charges Against Governor.

IN THE "NIGHT RIDER" CASE.

Attorney For Defense Accused State's Chief Executive of Trampling on Rights of People and Bribing Witnesses—Case Will Go to Jury Before Day is Over.

Union City, Tenn., Jan. 7.—After a bitter attack on the governor of the state and an attempt to bring the killing of former United States Senator Edward Carmack into the case, Rice Pierce, senior counsel for the eight alleged "Night Riders" on trial for the murder of Captain Quentin Ranken was reprimanded by Judge Jones.

Mr. Pierce was preparing to close his argument for the defense and was discussing the testimony of Febringer, Hogg and Morris, "Night Riders" who turned states evidence. He launched into a violent denunciation of Governor Patterson.

"The governor of the state," he said, "after sending an army into Obion county to trample on the rights of the people, to snatch honest men from their homes and bully them and abuse them, then offered a reward of $10,000 for the arrest of Ranken's murderers."

Then several times the attorney repeated charges of bribery against the governor. Judge Jones then said:

"The court does not believe that the judiciary should permit to pass unnoticed this assault on the chief executive of the state. Mr. Pierce, these remarks are highly improper, and the court will not permit you to make them. Gentlemen of the jury, there is nothing in evidence upon which the charge against the governor can be based."

The case will likely go to the jury some time today.

JURY DELIBERATES.

Trial of Mrs. Erb and Her Sister Near to End.

Media, Pa., Jan. 7.—The fate of Mrs. Catherine Beisel and Mrs. M. Florence Erb, charged with the murder of Captain J. Clayton Erb, at his country home, Red Gables, on Oct. 6, hangs in the balance. The case has been given to the jury.

There was little of interest in the final proceedings. B. Frank Rhodes of counsel for the defense, in his closing address, ridiculed the commonwealth's case and said not one scintilla of evidence had been advanced to show that Mrs. Erb was in any way connected with the murder of her husband and that Mrs Beisel, the other defendant, had shot Erb that her own life and that of her sister might be spared. District Attorney MacDade spoke for the commonwealth.

CRIMINAL LIBEL.

Grand Jury Brings Charge Against New York American.

New York, Jan. 7.—A grand jury indictment charging criminal libel has been filed here against the Star Publishing company, which prints the New York American. The complaining witness was John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The complaint is based on a newspaper article connecting Mr. Rockefeller's name with the alleged practice of peonage in a stockade near Chicago. Mr. Rockefeller's individual complaints against Messrs. Crawford, Merrill and Clark of the Star company are now pending.

KILLED HIS COMRADE.

One Soldier Shoots Another at Fort Brady.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Jan. 7.—Private John McManus was shot and instantly killed by Corporal John E. Gibson, in the squad room of Co. K, at Fort Brady.

Gibson entered the room, where several men were congregated, and, stepping up to McManus, said: "You think you are d——d smart, don't you?" He then shot him.

The cause of the trouble is a mystery, as the officers have been unable to get a statement from Gibson. The dead man came from Summerset, Ky. Gibson has no parents. The department commander at Chicago has been notified and will decide whether the prisoner shall be turned over to the civil authorities.

ADRIAN GETS FRANCHISE.

Baseball Rights Held by Tecumseh Go to Neighboring Town.

STATE OFFICIALS HOLD RECEPTION.

Largely Attended Function in State Capitol.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 7.—Last night there was a reception in the executive suit of the capitol. It was the most pretentious and largely attended function of the kind that has ever been given on a like occasion. While the attendance of Lansing people was not conspicuous, there was a notably large attendance of men from various parts of the state.

In the receiving line were the following: Governor Warner and wife, Lieutenant Governor Kelley and wife, Chief Justice Blair and wife, Circuit Court Justice Moore, Supreme Court Justice Ostrander, Supreme Justice McAlvay and daughter, State Treasurer Sleeper and wife, Auditor General Fuller and wife, Secretary of State Martindale and wife, Attorney General Bird and Superintendent of Public Instruction Wright.

In the house special committees have been appointed to revise the rules so they will conform to the new constitution.

Attorney General Bird is framing a bill so that members of the legislature can draw $5 a day while the legislature is in session and then draw the balance of the $800 allowed them by the constitution for their term when the session shall have closed. There is row but $5,000 cash in the state treasury with which to pay their mileage bills that are already due.

LOCAL OPTION COMES UP.

Jackson and Hillsdale Counties Will Vote on Question.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 7.—The question of local option will go before the people of Jackson county at the spring election in April for a decision. This is the determination of the board of supervisors.

Hillsdale, Mich., Jan. 7.—Hillsdale county supervisors have voted to put the local option proposition before the electors at the spring election.

Marshall, Mich., Jan. 7.—The supervisors had a red hot session when the local option proposition was brought up. The saloonists maintain that they have the right to compel the board, before submitting local option to the voters, to compare the names on the petitions with the poll books. The reformers say they have not and back their contention by a supreme court decision.

Must Stop Dice Shaking.

Allegan, Mich., Jan. 7.—An edict has been issued by Prosecutor Clare E. Hoffman, notifying proprietors of the several pool rooms and saloons where card playing and dice shaking is permitted that such practices must cease.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.—take the advice received and be well.

Postponed Funeral.

By Curran Richard Greenley.

Copyright, 1908, by Curran R. Greenley.

OVER ridge and swamp and along the reaches of the Barraclaw the buds were swelling on the topmost branches of oak and cypress, and the lush grasses that stand up straight and tall in the dark red pools later on in the year began to send their first green shoots to herald the spring. There was a troublesome rumor going the rounds, ominous and dread. Men said that the new levee was treacherous, that it might hold, but all knew that a mighty river was sweeping down from the north, jealous of its ancient prerogatives over the valley. Would the narrow line of earth hold out against it?

Jake Alders heard the news when he was doing his trading down at Wash Evans' store. On the way home he fell in with little groups of men who jogged along discussing the probability of an overflow, not that it was a new thing on the Barraclaw, for many times and often had the Father of Waters swept his royal way across the land, but their little holdings had been heavily taxed to build the levee that was to protect them, and now, thanks to the gods of red tape, Father Messasabe had challenged it and the levee was not.

Jake rode along slowly. He was turning a problem over in his mind. Amanda, his wife, had been one of the annual victims to the dread swamp fever, dying in the early winter. She had made him promise to have her funeral preached in the spring "when the woods is a-gittin' green an' things is a little mite more cheerful." Jake had just made arrangements for the funeral and that day had received a message from the parson to the effect that he would be on hand the following Sunday, and now, if the water came, there was no telling when the funeral could be preached.

Jake swung along the yellow ribbon of road, around the big bend and across the long bridge over the bayou thinking deeply. The first bluebird of the year fluttered ahead of him into a nearby cotton field. Over his head a robin wheeled, chattering to his mate. Against the dark gray green of the winter woods the red bud blazed its crimson banners and the nipping wind ruffled the brown breast of the river to scales of golden armor. He gathered himself together, gave the mule a sharp cut and began to whistle—he had made up his mind.

Miss Josie Derr whisked the broom sharply over the steps, shook out her starched purple calico skirt and settled herself on the gallery to enjoy the morning sunshine. There was some little appearance of thrift around the comfortable little log cabin of two rooms and the lean-to kitchen at the back, its well fenced yard and clapboarded outbuildings. Miss Josie herself, spare, gray haired and active as a well intentioned hornet, was known throughout the Barraclaw as a "hustlin' woman, if she is an old maid." Her sixty acres of land were well managed, and, though contrary to custom, she never worked in the cotton herself, at the end of the year she was usually ahead of those who did.

As Jake Alders came in sight, a limp and dejected figure astride of the patient mule, she stood up and peered under her hand. "Why don't the fool straighten up and use the back his God give him? He'd be right decent lookin' if it wan't for his slouchy ways." And Miss Josie pulled her own shoulders a trifle straighter as she walked slowly down the path.

"Howdy, Jake? How's the children and what's the news from the water?"

The mule came to a halt. "Well, now, Miss Josie, I was jes' a-sayin' to myself as how I was a-goin' to ask your advice this very mornin' along of the children. You heard tell how Mandy was a wantin' her funer'l preached in the spring? Sorter foolish. Lord! Wimmen folks has their notions, an' I'm a man what believes in humorin' 'em, dead or alive. Parson Arms, he 'lowed he'd get here a-Sunday, an' we was a-layin' off to have the funer'l preached down at the bayou; but, Miss Josie, them kids ain't got one rag what's decent to wear to their ma's funer'l, an' what I'm a-goin' to do 'twixt now an' then God knows!" Jake paused and looked hopefully at Miss Josie; then he went on, "Seein' as you be such a fine manager, I was a-thinkin' you might kinder help me out, and if"—

"Now, see here, Jake Alders! Do you think I'm a woman or a Christmas tree? How do you reckon I can make clothes grow on them six kids 'twixt now an' Sunday, an' this heah's Tuesday? Man, you've plum lost your senses."

Jake fidgeted with his rope bridle. "I didn't know but what you was"—

"Shut up, Jake Alders. You know you've been plannin' all along the road as how you was a-goin' to dump them kids an' their fixin's on my conscience, an' now you've been an' gone an' done it. Yes, I'm a fool for meddlin', but I'll get 'em ready, but don't you ask me nothin' more, 'cause I ain't goin' to do it." Miss Josie trailed this last over her shoulder as she disappeared into the house, and Jake grinned knowingly as he jogged down the road.

During the remainder of the week he made himself as scarce as possible about the straggling two room cabin that owned him as master. Miss Josie took possession of it and the six small Alders, whose tow heads were subjected to a process of yellow soap and rainwater and later to innumerable little rolls of paper. Meanwhile Miss Josie's machine clattered unceasing miles of pink calico and domestic, and her energetic tones stirred the Alders progeny to something like industry, so that the cabin shone with unwonted cleanliness as Saturday afternoon deepened into twilight.

The parson was to spend the night, and Jake had gone to the station to meet him. Miss Josie was preparing to go home, having completed all the arrangements, even to laying out the finery in six little heaps on the bench that ran along the walls. There were rolls of light bread and a jelly cake, two roasted fowls and some of Miss Josie's own pies, all destined to do duty as the funeral baked meats.

Miss Josie started down to the gate, trailing a torrent of minute instructions to the forlorn little group in the doorway. Away up the road she heard the clatter of hoofs and the rattle of the ancient buggy that Jake had borrowed from the squire, and it was coming faster than Jake Alders' old mare mule had ever traveled that road before. Jake was leaning over the dashboard in the effort to hurry old Mag along. He shouted something—nearer—and Miss Josie stood stock still. "The water's a-comin'! Levee's broke at Carter's end, Bend Nigger Wool swamp's plum full! She'll be here by daylight!"

Jake tumbled out, and the parson, a thin, active man, jumped to the ground and began to unharness the mule. Miss Josie started down the road in a run, but Jake yelled after her: "Don't be skeered. I'll be down there 'fore mornin'. You ain't got no men folks to be a-nallin' and a-liftin'. Them shiftless niggers will be a-lookin' out for their own fool necks. I'll put your chickens an' things in the loft an' your stock on my mound an'"— But the dark had swallowed Miss Josie.

Jake was roused from his careless ease. Other years had left their lesson. Aided by the parson, he drove his cattle into the field where the old Indian mound afforded a refuge. A dugout that had done duty as a trough in front of the cabin was wrenched from its posts and a pair of paddles hastily rived out. From under the cabin Jake dragged out an old bateau that with a little patching was made passably safe. Then a pile of rough planks was transferred to the front gallery from the corner of the yard where Jake had "lowed" to build a crib in readiness for the building of a false floor should the necessity arise. They piled firewood in every inch of available space, even upon the flat part of the roof. "She'll be in the Barraclaw by mornin'," said Jake as he toiled in with the last load.

The hush of dawn was in the air when they ceased their labor. The parson straightened up. "It is the Sabbath morning, Brother Alders, but truly the ox is in the ditch before us. Sister Derr needs our help."

"B'gosh!" Jake slapped his thigh. "If I didn't go and forget all about that woman clear as a whistle, an' me a-promisin' so big. Come on, parson."

She was waiting for them, her preparations all made. She had collected her cattle into the barnyard, tied the chickens by the legs ready to be transferred to the barn loft, and her trunk stood locked and strapped.

"How deep you reckon it will go?" she questioned.

Jake scratched his chin. "Can't say, Miss Josie. Last water I had to put a false floor in my house, an' they do say this'll beat that holler."

Miss Josie collapsed helplessly into the splint bottomed rocker. "If I'd the sense God gave geese I'd stayed back in them old red hills of Georgy 'stead of comin' to live in a frog pond."

The parson shook his head. "Now, my sister, you're tasking the Almighty with shortcomings. Every country has its drawbacks, but the Barraclaw folks never failed a stranger in trouble yet. Here's Brother Alders willing to take care of you and"— Jake coughed and looked at the parson, and the parson understood. He went to the door and stood peering into the brightening east.

"Miss Josie"—Jake twirled the ragged hat between his fingers and moved a step nearer to the sobbing woman in the chair—"parson heah has jes' about put into words what I been a-tryin' to say all this week. I'm a-needin' you terrible bad, me an' the chillun, an', though I 'low I ain't much to look at, Mandy was mighty fond of me, an' you know there never was nuthin' I wouldn't do for Mandy. Miss Josie, this ain't no time for a woman to be livin' alone with God A'mighty's ragin' floods comin' over her head. Can't you make up your mind to come along with me?"

The sobs had hushed, but the apron still sheltered Miss Josie, when the parson turned. "Brother Alders, I would suggest that you send Lem to the station as soon as he gets back and telegraph the clerk to issue the license. It's a little irregular, but I ran make the return next time I go to Grayson. I'm here now, and it is not a time to stand on ceremony as to the manner of doing things."

Miss Josie jerked the apron down. "You two men are a-fixin' the whole thing an' a-plannin' it out without me gittin' a word in, as if a woman didn't have the right to settle about her own marryin.' Go ahead. But there's one comfort. I'll be on hand when the time comes to see that Mandy's funer'l goes off all right."

"Thanky, Miss Josie. There's comfort in them words, an'"— Jake's mouth hung open and his eyes widened as he tore out the door. One look at the river whispering, bubbling and creeping visibly up the bank. "She's here! Hustle with your traps, Miss Josie. There ain't no time to lose." And he fell to work.

As an example of muscular Christianity the parson was no laggard and the gospel of works was fully demonstrated that March Sunday when he laid down rod and staff to help Jake Alders rescue cattle and hogs.

The sun was climbing over the cypress brakes when they arrived at Jake's cabin. The children, breakfastless and forlorn, were huddled upon the doorstep. At sight of Miss Josie and her leather trunk on Jake's shoulder they came swarming about her skirts. "Oh, goody, she's goin' to stay!" announced Jemina, Jake's eldest, as she planted the baby in Miss Josie's arms with a gesture of finality.

All day long the muddy tide crept over the land. It entered the dusty road in thin streams, widening until road and dooryard, barnyard and pasture disappeared. Jake stood eying the pile of lumber as the water sucked and gurgled beneath him. The parson squared his shoulders. "Yes, Brother Alders, there is no time like the present," and the sound of hammer and saw rang over the rippling tide as the parson wrought for these sheep of his pasture. Ten o'clock saw the last nail as the high March wind sent the first wave over the cabin sill. Miss Josie settled the children and the household belongings with some degree of comfort, but the parson and Jake could not stand upright under the low rafters.

The irregular beat of dugout paddles came around the bend, and the parson stepped outside, while Jake stood fingering his hat and glancing sidewise at Miss Josie where she sat in the low rocker, bending over the drowsy baby. The other children slept upon the mattress. She lifted her head as the parson paused in the doorway, a bit of yellow paper between his fingers, and behind him, peering over his shoulder, the station agent and Jake's young brother Lem.

"Brother Alders, the clerk wires me that he has issued the license."

Miss Josie arose, the sleeping baby against her shoulder. The warm little body nestling there in drowsy helplessness stirred and woke the primal woman, virginal and shy, that slept below the crest of years. Her keen gray eyes softened with a new light above the sallow cheek, where the long banished blushes burned beneath Jake's ardent brown gaze. At her feet his children slept.

The parson raised his hand, and Jake blundered to Miss Josie's side, his tall head stooping to avoid the rafters. Over the lap-lap of the waves beneath them, over the keening of the wind in the cypress brakes, the parson's voice rose in solemn sentences, and then he was saying goodby, and the faces were gone from the doorway. Miss Josie took refuge behind the sleeping baby as she knelt to place it with the other children, and down the road she heard the parson singing as he paddled into the main.

And when the long May days came to the Barraclaw, newly risen from the chrism of the waters and teeming with the gifts of Father Messasabe, the first Mrs. Alders received due meed of song and service, thoroughly ordered by Mrs. Alders the second.

A SURPRISED CAT.

Gautier's Pet and Its Experience With a Parrot.

Of all cat stories the best is one told by Theophile Gautier, the French novelist. He kept many cats, the favorite being "Madame Theophile," and she was his constant companion by day and night. One day a friend, who was going away a short time, brought Gautier a parrot, to be taken care of during his absence. The bird, finding itself in a strange place, climbed up to the top of its perch in a rather frightened manner. Madame Theophile had never seen a parrot before and regarded the creature with manifest surprise.

After a period spent in profound meditation, summoning up all the notions of natural history she had picked up in the yard, the garden and on the roof, she plainly came to the conclusion that the newcomer was a green chicken. This result attained, the next proceeding of Madame Theophile was to lay herself flat on the floor, like a panther, watching her prey. The parrot did not like this at all; it ruffled its feathers and rattled its chain uneasily. Then Madame Theophile came creeping nearer, her nose quivering, her eyes half closed, while slight thrills of pleasure ran along her backbone at the idea of the meal she was about to make. Another moment and she sprang upon the perch.

The parrot instantly straightened up and said in a deep bass voice, "Have you breakfasted, Jacko?"

This utterance so terrified the cat that she sprang backward. All her ornithological ideas were overthrown.

"And on what?" continued the parrot gravely. "On sirloin?"

The cat cast a glance at her master as if to say: "This is not a bird. It is a gentleman. It talks!" And then she promptly hid herself under the bed, and from that refuge she could not be induced to stir during the whole day.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Heavy Load.

Pop (looking up from the paper)—I see there's a new baby hippopotamus at the zoo. What are you laughing at, Johnnie? Johnnie (who is almost as bright as he looks)—I was jus' laughin' to think of the stork carryin' a hippopotamus!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Horrible Hold-Up.

"About ten years ago my brother was "held up" in his work, health and happiness by what was believed to be hopeless Consumption," writes W. R. Lipscomb of Washington, D. C. "He took all kinds of remedies and treatment from several doctors, but found no help till he used Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles. He is a well man today." It's quick to relieve and the surest cure for weak or sore lungs, Hemorrhages, Coughs and Colds, Bronchitis, LaGrippe, Asthma and all Bronchial affections. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. KILLED IN HIS LITTLE CHURCH.

Preacher Hacked to Pieces and Body Stuffed in Stove.

AWFUL CRIME AT RATTLE RUN

Indications Are Fierce Struggle Took Place—Man Believed to Be From Adair Was Seen in Vicinity and Inquired Way to Church—Robbery Not Motive of Murder.

Richmond, Mich., Jan. 7.—Cut in pieces, the head cleanly severed, the body of Rev. John H. Carmichael of Adair was found packed in a stove in the isolated little Methodist church at Rattle Run, two miles south of here. The body was identified by means of a case for cards and eyeglasses, which bore the name of the minister. He was probably killed Tuesday night.

Myron Brown, a farmer who takes care of the church and who lives a short distance away, went there to meet a friend. The latter failing to arrive at the stated hour, Brown stepped into the doorway. He noticed a window broken and the door unlatched.

Gruesome Scene in Church.

Calling to a neighbor who was passing, he got him to enter the church with him. On the floor laid a pair of trousers, blood stained, and nearby was a long butcher knife and a dagger. Both were covered with blood partially dried. In one corner was several pieces of clothing, and there were signs of a fierce struggle having taken place.

In the old fashioned wood stove, leading to which were blood stains, was found pieces of the body. The interior of the stove was splattered with blood.

Brown reported his gruesome find, and news of the tragedy spread rapidly. Crowds soon gathered on the spot. Sheriff Wagensell of Port Huron was notified and, with several deputies, was soon on the scene. After a hurried examination he started scouring the country for suspects.

Rev. Carmichael, who was pastor of the churches at Adair, China and Rattle Run, left his home Tuesday morning about 10 o'clock to make a visit to his parishioners in the vicinity of the latter church. He had planned to hold revival meetings, beginning Wednesday night.

Probably Had Appointment.

None has been found who saw him Tuesday, and it is not known where he spent the afternoon. Why he should have gone to his church, if he did, is not known, but some have advanced the theory that he probably had an appointment with someone, and that while there he was set upon and killed.

Robbery could not have been the motive for the crime, as something over $2 was found in his trousers' pockets. This amount, it is said, is all that he had when he left home in the morning.

At Hickey, Tuesday afternoon, a man who is said to live at Adair and within a few doors of Rev. Carmichael arrived in on the Grand Trunk train from Port Huron. He wore a heavy fur coat and was apparently fifty-five or fifty-six years old.

He seemed to be in an angry mood and acted in a sulking manner. He inquired of C. O. Conat, a mail carrier, the location of the Rattle Run church, and was told. A short time later he accosted Thomas Gavin and August and William Upleger, the latter cousins, who were standing in a group, and asked the same information.

Directed Stranger to Church.

Conat came along, and he and Gavin consented to walk part of the way to the church with the stranger. The three left the station, going in the direction of the church. When about a mile distant from the building the stranger said he could find the way and told his informants that they need accompany him no farther.

Before Conat and Gavin left him, the man said he had an important appointment with a man at the church. This was the last seen of him.

The visitor from Adair, who is thought to be known, will be placed under arrest as soon as he can be located.

The horse and carriage which Rev. Carmichael had when he left his home have been located near Port Huron, it is said. At the church signs were found which would indicate that the animal had been tied up and later driven away.

Adair, Mich., Jan. 7.—When the announcement was made here of the finding of the badly mutilated body of Rev. John H. Carmichael in the M. E. church at Rattle Run the villagers were almost frantic.

Several villagers had known that Mr. Carmichael had gone to Rattle Run the day previous to visit with his parishioners and that he did not return that night, but no anxiety was felt up to yesterday. Mrs. Carmichael, wife of the minister, was notified.

Rev. Carmichael was fifty-five years of age and was well known and highly respected by all who knew him. He was of athletic build and weighed 175 pounds.

MERRIMENT IN HOUSE.

Legislators Discussed President's Proposed African Hunt.

Washington, Jan. 7.—An incident in the proceedings of the house of representatives Wednesday caused a good deal of amusement. It was a discussion of the forthcoming African hunting trip of President Roosevelt. Incidentally there was a reference to the famous so-called "Ananias club."

The whole debate hinged on the newspaper story stating that Major Edgar O. Mearns of the army was to accompany the president, and in order to do so he had been put on the retired list with increased rank.

The senate Wednesday ratified arbitration treaties with the Argentine Republic and Salvador.

They are arranged and maintained for your benefit, and to give you an opportunity to be helpful to others in the cause of Christ. Let us, each and all, make it a point this year to attend them regularly, without flimsy excuses, and thereby get and give the blessing promised to the faithful. Reverently remember the Savior's lesson in regard to "excuse makers" in the parable of the "Great Supper," Luke 14: 15-24. Make use of his appointed means to "grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ." A divided service does not count with Lord. We must all "work out our own salvation with fear and trembling." May the year 1909 richly crown all our lives with eternal blessings.

CATARRH CURED

Not Cure, No Pay, is a Most Generous Offer.

To get an antiseptic strong enough to kill catarrh germs, and not destroy the tissues of the membrane at the same time, has been a problem which was never solved until the discovery of Hyomei (pronounced Hiah-o-me)

Hyomei is prepared from eucalyptus, the most powerful yet healing antiseptic known Breathe it through the inhaler over the inflamed and germ ridden membrane four or five times a day, and in a few days the germs will disappear.

The inflamed condition will go, too, and the snuffling hawking and offensive breath, and the discharge of mucous and crusts in the nose will cease.

Then why should any catarrh sufferer hesitate, when C A Wright & Son has such faith in Hyomei that he offers to return your money if after a fair trial Hyomei does not cure catarrh.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including the inhaler, costs $1.00, and extra bottles, if afterwards needed, cost but 50 cents. Hyomei also cures asthma, croup, sore throat, colds or grip.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First — Don't Delay — Second — Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Tecumseh residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Tecumseh citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

John B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For several years I suffered a great deal from rheumatism and backache. My kidneys were badly disordered and I knew that they caused all my trouble. About two years ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time I was relieved. I have had no serious attacks of the trouble since. Shortly after using Doan's Kidney Pills I told of my experience through the local papers and at this time I am glad to verify that statement and again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

Ask any fair-minded doctor and he will tell you that golden seal, cubebs and oil of copaiba (contained in Pe-ru-na) are valuable remedies in the treatment of catarrhal diseases. And every honest doctor will concede that collinsonia canadensis, corydalis formosa and cedron seed (contained in Pe-ru-na) are tonic remedies of high value. GAMBLING SYSTEMS.

The Chances Are Always Vastly Against the Player.

Just a word about systems of gambling followed by various players. Their name is legion—some plausible, some ridiculous, some based on elaborate calculations, some giving wonderful results on paper, and all failing woefully at the tables.

"After fifteen years of experience at Monte Carlo," writes a newspaper correspondent, "costing a sum I should be ashamed to name, after a thorough investigation of more than 400 different systems and progressions, after having employed a mathematician, I can say with certainty that it is absolutely impossible for any system to win at Monte Carlo. Sir Hiram Maxim is wrong when he says the chances are ten to one against the player. I say they are a hundred to one against the player."

This is rather an overstatement, for a few players do win, by luck, not by system, or by a system based on luck, as when a man backs the number of his hotel room or a woman backs her age. Perhaps 2 or 3 per cent of the players win occasionally, and the rest lose, not only because of the bank's percentage and the restraining maximum, but because this is a struggle between a man and a machine—a man with nerves and emotions, a machine with no nerves and no emotions. Let the system be ever so perfect, the gambler with strength of will to follow it has not yet been born. If he had such strength of will, he would not be a gambler.—Cleveland Moffett in Success Magazine.

Rather Ambiguous.

When Weber and Fields were playing together a couple of husky western visitors, seeing New York for the first time, dropped into the Weberfield Museum of Drama to see the show.

"Which is Weber and which is Fields?" asked one, who forgot what a programme was for.

"Derned if I know," replied the other. "But whichever is which, I'd rather be the other one."—Bohemian Magazine.

The Call of Egypt.

Egypt calls even across the space of the world, and across the space of the world he who knows it is ready to come, obedient to its summons, because in thrall to the eternal fascination of the "land of sand and ruins and gold," the land of the charmed serpent, the land of the afterglow that may fade away from the sky above the mountain of Libya, but that fades never from the memory of one who has seen it from the base of some great column or the top of some mighty pylon; the land that has a spell—wonderful, beautiful Egypt.—Robert Hichens in Century.

INSANE MAN IS CAPTURED.

Rev. Carmichael Believed to Have Been Found.

WANDERING NEAR TORANTO.

Answers Description of Alleged Preacher-Murderer—Police Search Chicago With No Results—Women Declare They Say Carmichael and Browning on Train Going to Port Huron.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 11.—Word has been received here that a demented man, answering in every way to the description of Rev. Mr. Carmichael, wanted at Rattle Run, Mich., was found wandering on the Canadian Pacific tracks near Claremont, about twenty-five miles east of Toronto.

He was locked up in an oil house and the authorities notified.

The man, who weighs over 200 pounds, wears a closely clipped brown beard, walks with a decided limp, and one of his toes turns out. He was incoherent in his replies when questioned.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 11.—Misses Anna and Clara Wagner, sisters, have startled the officers here with the statement that they saw two men on the Grand Trunk train coming into Port Huron from Chicago Thursday evening whom they believe was Carmichael and Browning.

Both of the young women are acquainted with the men, having seen them while visiting relatives at Adair.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Every nook and corner in which it was thought Rev. J. H. Carmichael might be in hiding in Chicago has been visited by the police without success. Chicago police have come to the conclusion that Carmichael passed beyond Chicago, if he came that far.

Cedarburg, Wis., Jan. 11.—A man believed to be Rev. John W. Carmichael of the Rattle Run (Mich.) church, who is wanted to throw light on the killing of Gideon Browning of Adair, Mich., spent Thursday night and Friday morning in Cedarburg. The man objected to several hotel rooms because of double storm windows, which would prevent a hasty exit in case of an emergency. He finally lodged in a back room of a boarding house. He left Friday noon on a northbound electric car.

Adair, Mich., Jan. 11.—Porter Carmichael, son of Rev. J. H. Carmichael, has turned over for publication what he declares is the letter his father was so anxious to get at the local postoffice last week Monday morning. The letter is as follows:

"Omer, Mich., Jan. 1.

Dear Brother:

"I wrote to you twice regarding the Advocate subscription list, and had you heeded my letters your 'task' wouldn't have been so 'unsavory.' I told you I had lost my memorandum and could not tell which one had paid. If there have been any 'unsavory' reflections cast on it it is your fault, as I asked you twice to inquire of the subscribers which had paid, and said that if anyone had not been reported as paid I would settle with the Advocate. You did not answer my letters, so I concluded that the list was O. K.

"I will write immediately to the Advocate and pay it, as I concluded that the money was paid to me. That's what I wanted to know a year ago.

"Yours, A. O. HAMMOND."

Preceded Carmichael.

Rev. A. O. Hammond is the Methodist Episcopal minister who preceded Rev. Carmichael as pastor of China, Adair and Columbus M. E. churches. Rev. Hammond was reported missing from Omer about the date of the murder, but according to reports turned up later at Standish.

The son of Rev. Carmichael told a reporter that he had but just found the letter among his father's effects. The Adair postmark is Jan. 4.

Rattle Run, Mich., Jan. 11.—Miss Calla Carmichael, daughter of the missing Rev. J. H. Carmichael, has made a trip over the same route her father took on the date of the mysterious murder at the Columbus M. E. church. Among the discoveries she made which are thought to have an important bearing on the case are: That two men left the little shed where the horse and buggy thought to have been that belonging to Rev. Carmichael was tied and crossed the road in the direction of the church; that two more lines of footprints lead back from the church to the shed; that some papers had evidently been burned in a deserted house, in front of which Rev. Carmichael is supposed to have picked up Gid. Browning.

Inquired Along Route.

It was a rainy day on which Rev. Carmichael left his home and made his way over muddy roads in the direction of Columbus church. But Tuesday night the weather turned colder, and Miss Carmichael found the highways rough and almost impossible to traverse.

Not a farmhouse or rig were passed but which Miss Carmichael stopped and asked questions regarding her father's movements on the day which he disappeared. To few she revealed her identity. In fact, no one asked her the reason for the strange questions she put.

To all she stopped for information she appeared but a young girl desirous of some new phases on the mystery. In her eagerness she would forget that she did not want people to know who she was, and she would mention Carmichael as "my father."

Wouldn't Enter Church.

Miss Carmichael, on reaching the church, refused to enter it, but she did examine the footprints leading to and from the church shed, with the resulting conclusions as above stated.

A large crowd, drawn by morbid curiosity, was gathered about the church.

Miss Carmichael later drove to the farmhouse of William Pierce, owner of the vacant house near where Carmichael and Browning are thought to have met, and she asked permission to make an investigation of the deserted place. On the floor in a room at the western side of the house she found a small pile of ashes. Almost on top of the pile was the crisp remains of what was probably once a piece of paper. No writing was visible. Miss Carmichael directed that the paper be left on the pile, that the pile be undisturbed and the house locked until further investigation.

Miss Carmichael made the following statement to the reporter who had accompanied her:

"Since seeing those footprints I am fully convinced that there is a third party in this affair. Two men left that shed for the church; two men left the church for the shed; a third man, possibly a woman, judging from the discovery of that long hair, was left behind.

Long Hair Found.

In gathering some blood for anaylsis from the large spot in front of a broken window which is located at the front of the church, a long hair, undoubtedly one from the head of a woman, was found just where the authorities say the murdered person lay when the fiend who committed the crime was wielding either knife or hatchet.

No woman has been admitted to the church since the crime, and, as the hair, which is over a foot in length, was found in about the center of the clot of blood, the discovery appears to make the mystery all the deeper.

Riot in Church.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 11.—Local Assyrians and Greeks some time ago organized a Catholic church and engaged Fr. Aboosiay of Chicago to take charge of the place of worship. Sunday was the opening day, but before the services had gone very far a near riot took place, and the trouble may result in the disruption of the church.

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 11.—As a sort of prelude to the great doings at Atlanta on Friday of this week Augusta will entertain at dinner tonight its distinguished temporary fellow townsman, President Elect Taft.

Mr. Taft will be the guest of the Augusta Bar association at its annual banquet. Numbered among the guests will be most of the prominent residents of the city and surrounding country.

O'Donnell May Seek Senatorship.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 11.—James O'Donnell, ex-congressman and retired editor and publisher of Jackson's only Republican newspaper, the Citizen, is considering seriously becoming a candidate for the United States senatorship to succeed J. C. Burrows, according to a statement he has given out.

NO AMERICAN IS PRESENT.

United States Represented by Englishman—Winning of Recent International Balloon Race and Control of Flying Machines by Automobile Clubs Among Questions on Tap.

London, Jan. 11.—Of immense interest to all who are watching the progress made in flying by human beings is the meeting of the International Aeronautic federation which began here today. Delegates from every European country in which aviation is a subject of daily news interest have assembled here to discuss some of the important questions that have arisen in regard to the sport, or science, as its ardent followers prefer to term it.

In view of the prominence of the Wright brothers and other Americans in this field, regrets are expressed that no American is attending the conference. The United States has, however, a representative in the person of Roger William Wallace, the Englishman selected by the Aero Club of America to look after its interests.

To Decide Winner of Race.

Probably the question of greatest popular interest to be decided at the federation's meetings is the determination of the winner of the international balloon race which started from Berlin Oct. 10. The greatest distance was covered by Schaeck, in the Swiss balloon Helvetia, but he violated the rules of the contest by landing at sea on the deck of a steamer. The rules declared that landings must be made on terra firma, and the awarding of the prize to Schaeck has been protested by the English club.

Another matter to be taken up is the attempt control of aviation by automobile clubs, which claim the right to supervise flying contests in which the motor is a factor. Flying machines with motors include "heavier than air" machines and dirigible balloons, and the aeronautic clubs declare that the upholding of the automobile clubs' contentions will leave to them only gas bags without motors.

LABOR MEN TALK OF SENTENCES.

Cases of Leaders Before Federation Council Today.

Washington, Jan. 11.—One of the most important assemblages in the history of union labor in the United States is the meeting today of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, called to consider the sentencing of three leaders of union men to jail for contempt of court.

Just what action the federation will take in the cases of Samuel Gompers, its president; Frank Morrison, its secretary, and John Mitchell, its second vice president, is not definitely known. It is safe to say, however, that a vigorous protest will be made against the imposition of the jail sentence pronounced by Judge Wright of the District of Columbia supreme court.

All the labor leaders gathered here for the meeting repeated their former declarations that the sentences were unjust and in contravention of the rights of free speech guaranteed by the federal constitution. None of them would forecast in advance the action of the council, but they were unanimous in the opinion that the language to be used would be forcible.

In connection with the meeting of the federation council there will be held at the department of commerce and labor the conference of important labor leaders, prominent publicists and directors of big industries to consider several questions of importance throughout the country, called by Secretary Straus.

WHAT JESUS WOULD DO.

Cleveland's Test Exceeds Expectations of Promoters.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 11.—The movement begun last week Sunday by eighteen hundred young people of this city to live for two weeks as Jesus would has assumed a scope far beyond the expectations of its promoters.

It now is citywide and is spreading to nearby towns. Fully ten thousand volunteers have unofficially joined the movement by attempting the test and pledging themselves to walk in his steps.

St. Louis, Jan. 11.—The acute attack of "marathonitis" from which the Mound City is suffering will come to a head tonight when the starter's pistol sends Percy Smallwood, the Welsh runner, and Dorando Pietri, the famous Italian, off on their long run.

The race will be in the Coliseum and will be for the full Marathon distance, 26 miles and 385 yards. The track is ten laps to the mile and has been built especially for tonight's race. Both of the runners have met Tom Longboat, the champion professional Marathon runner, Smallwood having beaten him in a ten mile race in Philadelphia and Dorando having lost one Marathon race to him in New York and another in Buffalo.

OHIO INAUGURATION TODAY.

Buckeyes Have Democratic Governor. Burton's Election Tomorrow.

Columus, O., Jan. 11.—With the inauguration here at noon today as governor of Ohio of Judson Harmon, Democrat, who will preside over a state government that will be Republican in its legislative end, lively times are predicted in the politics of the Buckeye State. The Democrats of the senate, who are outnumbered by the Republicans by only six members, have already served notice on their opponents that they expect to receive more consideration than is usually accorded to a legislative minority.

Tomorrow the two houses in joint session will elect Theodore E. Burton of Cleveland to the senate seat which will be vacated by Joseph B. Foraker on March 4. Mr. Burton will serve out his congressional term, ending March 4. As he was re-elected last fall, a special election will be called in Cleveland soon after March 4 to determine his successor in the house of representatives.

If your Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

1809—The Year of Genius—1809

The Centenary of Edgar Allan Poe

Part First—Poe's Birth, Early Career and Marriage. Supreme Master of the Literary Art.....

By Oliver Leigh

Copyright, 1909, by the American Press Association

EDGAR WAS ADOPTED BY A SCOTCH MERCHANT.

A MORE perplexing service, pleasing and painful, than the faithful representation of Poe in the compass of this study can scarcely be imagined. The man himself is puzzle enough for the keenest analyst of character. His history of body and mind is only understandable by the few who have had kinship with the brotherhood of the predestined "failures" who have been floated on life's stormy sea in frail rowboats, with genius and ambition as oars, but denied rudder and ballast.

This is not the whole difficulty. More perplexing still is the strange but general ignorance of his countrymen of their one supreme master of the literary art, except as the acknowledged unrivaled originator of a type of poems and tales. And it was only a few months ago that a popular vote in a literary publication excluded Poe's name from the list of America's ten foremost authors and barred him out from the New York university's new Hall of Fame.

Poe was not only an artist-poet, but a pioneer of imaginative story tellers; a born master in criticism and literary genius (no lesser word will do); an ideal journalist for the intellectual; a satirist and wit, far outside the sawdust ring of the supposed "humorist;" a mordant etcher of character portraits and of so profound and lofty a philosophic mind that his own people know nothing of its noblest expression, "Eureka." In a labored attempt to obscure the brilliance of this wrestle with the mystery of the universe one biographer only reveals more clearly the marvelous range of Poe's mind in circumstances fatal to ordinary intellectual strength, a range of thought and a power of vision that anticipated Lord Kelvin's vortex theory and some of the views of Herbert Spencer's philosophy.

"The child is father of the man," and we shall see what shaping the mature Edgar Poe got from the fates who watched him floundering from his cradle to his expulsion from West Point. His Irish grandfather was brought here when only six weeks old. He fought in the Revolution with Lafayette and was quartermaster general in Baltimore. His son, David, Edgar's father, developed the gypsy temperament, forsook his law work at twenty-five and married Elizabeth Arnold, the pretty young widow of the comedian in the company of strolling players of which she was the popular star. David Poe joined the troupe. The pair figured as the "Virginia comedians" and roamed the country from Boston to Richmond.

The marriage was in October, 1805, and Edgar was born in Boston, Jan. 19, 1809. His sprightly mother was singing and dancing, as usual, within three weeks. Edgar had a brother two years older and a sister, who came when their poor wornout mother was dying of consumption and heartbreak, for her husband had died some months before. This third baby was born in Richmond, and the infants were orphaned by the death of their mother in December, 1811. The poor creature was herself fated to be born at sea and adopted by some one who trained her for the stage. Poe's nurse fed—or poisoned—him on bread soaked in gin.

A public appeal had been made for the doomed favorite of the stage, from which resulted the adoption of Edgar by a Scotch merchant at the instance of his childless wife, who admired the pretty boy, whose name, Allan, was thus given him, and his sister Rosalie was taken up by a neighbor. From his seventh to his twelfth year Edgar had the good luck to be schooled in London and reveled in the charms of old England's scenery, poetical and historic associations, an experience for such a wonder loving mind as his which enlarged his view, lifted his romantic nature forever above the plane of task work by which he had to live and gave him standards other than those of the market place he had to tread. On their return to Richmond Allan inherited a fortune which in ordinary course would have passed on to Edgar. The overpetted and flattered boy became the proud and envied youth of the University of Virginia. His brilliant talents provoked envy, and his seathing retorts in satirical verses and lofty isolation from the crowd bred a not unnatural crop of sneers at the origin of this unchummy comrade. His scholar tasks fell more lightly on his faculties than these slings and arrows on his pride. He had the pocket money to be a leader of the revels, wine and dinner parties, excursions and card gambling, and when pay days came the stern Scotch soul of Allan was stirred, not to paternal grief, but to foster parental indignation. At last, when Edgar's sporting debts amounted to $2,000, the severely just guardian paid the bill and disinherited the prodigal offender.

Poe had graduated in Latin and French before he left the university and at Mr. Allan's wish entered his office as clerk. More causes than one led to the youth of nineteen quitting this dry work to launch into poetry. "Tamerlane and Other Poems, by a Bostonian," appeared in Boston in that year, 1827. The solitary copy of this forty page booklet fetched $2,550 at auction in 1900. If that sum had come to Poe in 1827 it would probably have prolonged his life and enriched his reputation and his country's literature. So poor was the prospect of a bare livelihood by pen work he enlisted at Boston as a private in the army under a changed name and the false age of twenty-two. The author of "The Raven" and "Annabel Lee" must have squirmed when greatness was thrust upon him in his appointment as sergeant major. When he applied to enter West Point as a cadet at twenty his honorable discharge was indorsed, "Habits good and entirely free from drinking." His second book was "Al Aaraaf, Tamerlane and Minor Poems," published in Baltimore shortly before he went to West Point, July, 1830, with a salary of $28 a month and board. He had passed the legal age of twenty-one, so reported his age as nineteen years and five months.

In scholarship he stood high and was regarded as a brilliant fellow with his pen, but he soon tired of the discipline of West Point and by intentional defiance of rules was court martialed and dismissed in 1831.

Now appeared his third volume in New York, dedicated to the cadets, who expected it would contain his satirical and humorous pieces, and they resented what are among the finest poems the national literature can boast. He sought work in Baltimore as reporter, as usher in school, and there is a legend that he was glad to be a carrier of bricks. A new weekly paper had appeared, the Saturday Visiter. He won its $100 prize with his story "A Manuscript Found In a Bottle."

One of the judges in the competition was John P. Kennedy, a writer of merit who was secretary of the navy in President Fillmore's administration. He gave Poe a letter which led to his becoming editor of the Southern Literary Messenger.

While Poe was living on very short commons in Baltimore his aunt, Mrs. Clemm, was struggling with poverty in that city, assisted by her daughter, Virginia, a pleasing girl of thirteen, her cousin Edgar being twenty-six. It was natural that he should live with and help them and not less so that he should become Virginia's lover. Against the counsels of some relations in the city they decided to marry. A marriage license was taken out in September, 1835, and a second one in May, 1836, followed by a regular marriage ceremony. Mrs. Clemm left no explanation.

In 1835 they removed to Richmond for the work of the Messenger, which had received a budget of the now famous "Tales." His salary as editor was $520 a year, rising to $800, and was to be $1,000, but the proprietor had occasion to caution Poe against "drinks before breakfast." To his honored friend Kennedy the troubled editor wrote: "I am suffering under a depression of spirits such as I have never felt before. I have struggled in vain against this melancholy. * * * You will believe me when I say I am still miserable in spite of the great improvement in my circumstances. Console me, for you can. But let it be quickly or it will be too late." Had the voluntary or involuntary marriage any share in casting this shadow over the first gleam of sunshine in his broken career?

For the detailed chronicle of Poe's ups and downs from his leaving the Messenger in 1837 until his death in 1849 the interested student must consult the latest and the most satisfactory biography in the Virginia edition, by Professor James A. Harrison, whose seventeen volumes contain more of Poe's unfamiliar writings than are accessible without the labored search of old magazines. Several passages quoted in this article are from the Virginia edition.

POE DISMISSED FROM WEST POINT.

Up to the date of the marriage the testimonies of those who knew Poe best are highly honoring to a young man whose prospects of at least a competence and a fair start in life had been suddenly ruined. The first editor of the Messenger was Lambert A. Wilmer. We quote from our copy of his remarkable book, "Our Press Gang," his tribute to Poe, with whom he had serious quarrels from time to time. Writing after the lapse of years, he says:

> The late Edgar A. Poe has been represented by the American newspapers in general as a reckless libertine and a confirmed inebriate. I do not recognize him by this description, though I was intimately acquainted with the man and had every opportunity to study his character. I have been in company with him every day for many months together, and within a period of twelve years I did not see him inebriated—no, not in a single instance. I do not believe he was ever habitually intemperate until he was made so by grief and many bitter disappointments. And with respect to the charge of libertinism I have similar testimony to offer. Of all men that I ever knew he was the most passionless, and I appeal to his writings for a confirmation of this. * * * Poe never wrote a line that gave expression to a libidinous thought. The female creations of his fancy are all either statues or angels. His conversation at all times was as chaste as that of a vestal, and his conduct while I knew him was correspondingly blameless.

Decadent writers of France, England and America have more or less successfully imitated Poe's creations in every feature but their purity. Only in Woodberry's biography do we recall any such attempt at defamation as his covert innuendo in his remark on "the speed with which Poe established a habit of intimacy with married women."

Sarcasticus and his wife were going to the theater.

"Will you please go in and get my goats off the dressing table?" said Mrs. S.

"Your goats?" queried the puzzled Sarcasticus. "What fangle have you women got now?"

"I'll show you!" snapped the wife, and she sailed away and soon returned, putting on her gloves.

"Are those what you mean? Why, I call those kids."

"I used to," replied Mrs. Sarcasticus, "but they are getting so old I am ashamed to any longer."

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

WILKINS-KENNETT.

From the Gratiot County Herald, December 31.

Wednesday, Dec. 23, a very pretty wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Wilkins of Emerson, when their daughter Blanch was united in marriage to Ervan L. Kennett.

As the clock was striking 12 the bridal party led by Rev. Mr. Sisler of Coleman, entered the parlor which was beautifully decorated with holly.

There a few simple words were said that bound the young people for life. The bride was beautifully attired in brown and white and carried holly. Her cousin Miss Ora Stewart of Tecumseh, who acted as bride's maid wore blue silk and carried holly. The groom wore brown and was attended by Ernest Rhynard. After congratulations were given amid showers of rice, all were invited to the dining room, which was decorated with holly, and all partook of a two course dinner. The catering was in charge of Mrs. Wm. McCarbery and served by Mrs. Isaac Ringle and Misses Ruth and Marie Walker.

The gifts were many and beautiful thus emphasizing the high regard in which the bride and groom were held.

About forty relatives and friends were present, among those from away were: Mrs. Louise Parker and son Leonard and Rolla Wilkins of Mason; Mr. and Mrs. McCarbery, son Ralph and daughter Reah of Britton; Miss Ora Stewart of Tecumseh; Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. Fox and family of Breckenridge; Mr. Walker and two daughters Ruth and Marie of Ithaca; Miss Laura Smith of Saginaw; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kennett, son Vernon and daughter Boyens, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kennett, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kennett, son Clayton and Ernest Rhynard of Ashley; Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Ringle, daughter Olive and son Charles McDonald of Sickles.

Mr. Kennett is one of Gratiot's most respected young farmers, and Mrs. Kennett a well known and popular young lady. A host of friends join in wishing them a long and happy life.

They will be at home to their friends on their farm near Ashley after April 1.

Mrs. Kennett was a former Macon girl, well known in Tecumseh.

William Grey.

The death of Will Grey occurred at his home on west Logan street Saturday night at six o'clock. Mr. Grey was 78 years of age. The funeral will be held from the house at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Rev. J. W. Dunning of the Presbyterian church officiating. The Odd Fellows Lodge of which Mr. Grey has been a member for the past fifty years, will conduct the services at the grave. Burial at Brookside cemetery. He leaves one daughter, Miss Edith Gray, to mourn the loss of a loving father.

ACTUAL STARVATION

B. J. Pulver, the Druggist, Give Facts Regarding Dyspepsia.

Although Indigestion and Dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not thoroughly understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating every good-looking, good-smelling and good-tasting food, because it does not agree with them.

Dieting cannot cure Dyspepsia. If we refuse every article of food that disagrees with us, before long we have nothing left, and find ourselves chronic dyspeptics.

We can cure Dyspepsia. We are so confident of this fact that we guarantee a cure, and promise to supply the medicine free of all cost to everyone who will use it, who is not perfectly satisfied with the results which it produces. We exact no promises, and put no one under any obligation whatever. Surely, nothing could be fairer. We are located right here in Tecumseh, and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want everyone in Tecumseh who is troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and get a box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial, according to directions. They are very pleasant to take; they soothe the irritable stomach, strengthen and invigorate the digestive organs, promote a healthy and natural bowel action, immediately relieve nausea and all stomach irritation, produce perfect and healthy digestion and assimilation, and promote nutrition.

A 25c. package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets furnishes 15 days' treatment. In ordinary cases, this is sufficient to produce a cure. In more chronic cases, a longer treatment, of course, is necessary, and depends upon the severity of the trouble. For such cases, we have two larger sizes which sell for 50c. and 89c. B. J. LETTER TO POPE

Intended for James Pope at Rome, Italy, but Goes to Pope Pius.

THE YOUNG MAN IS THE SON OF REV. AND MRS. POPE IN MONROE, FORMERLY OF TECUMSEH.

Mr. Pope is a Successful Newspaper Writer.

A letter addressed to James Pope, Rome, Italy, sent by his parents, Rev. and Mrs. William B. Pope of this city, was by mistake delivered to Pope Pius at the Vatican, never reached the person addressed and was finally returned to the senders.

When opened at the Vatican, the mistake was at once discovered, but the envelope had been destroyed and the letter gave no clue as to the young man's address in Rome. Secretary of the Vatican, Manuel Bidwell, sent the letter, which included negotiable paper, to Rt. Rev. Bishop Foley of Detroit, explaining the mistake and informing him that the addressed could not be traced. Bishop Foley at once attended to the matter and a few days ago Rev. Fr. Marron presented the letter and papers at the Pope home on Monroe street, together with the letter from the secretary of the Vatican. Rev. and Mrs. Pope rejoiced at the news, for the loss of the letter and paper had caused them much anxiety. They naturally were delighted at the thought of having as a souvenir the letter from the secretary of the Vatican, but were disappointed to learn from Fr. Marron that according to the rules of the Vatican, all communications sent out by it must be returned.

This return of the letter to the senders was of course not done in a day and night. James Pope was expecting the letter in Rome and his parents, after a suitable interval, looked for an acknowledgment from him. Both were disappointed. Fearing that somebody might attempt to cash the paper, a tracer was sent from New York to Italy to stop payment, and at the same time James Pope, in Italy, was stirring up American representatives over the matter, with nothing but disappointment for all, until Rev. Fr. Marron cleared up the matter. However, one thing that is not yet clear, is why the secretary did not, upon discovering the mistake, return the letter to the post office and let them trace the addressee. He could have been easily located, as he had been getting his mail through the general delivery for some time.

When Fr. Marron arrived to return the letter, he began the conversation by asking Rev. and Mrs. Pope if they had a son in Italy. Coming, as he did, soon after the news of the earthquake, Rev. and Mrs. Pope were stricken with the fear that Fr. Marron was the bearer of sad tidings but in half a minute their fears were allayed.

James Pope, to whom the letter had been addressed, has been very successful as a newspaper writer and for some time had been at Rome for an American newspaper syndicate. Since the episode of the wandering letter, word has been received from him that on December 23rd he sailed from Naples for Egypt.—Monroe Democrat.

RECEPTION

Given New Year's at the Home of Rev. and Mrs. Burn's in Monroe.

The New Year reception held at The Manse was one of the most attractive social affairs of holiday week. The drawing room where Rev. and Mrs. Burns received their guests was festooned with ground pine and this was thickly studded with red bells. In fact the red bell and green drapery figured every where through the house and here and there masses of evergreen and hemlock boughs helped in giving a seasonable effect. The dining room was very tastefully done and wreaths of holly finely supplemented the delicate strands of smilax which were chosen as principal decoration for this room and for the table. Appropriate for the occasion were the candle shades of red and silver. There were over one hundred guests who called between the hours of three in the afternoon and nine in the evening and several of them from out of the city. Mrs. Lynott Bloodgood, Miss Louise Bloodgood and Mrs. A. M. Long invited the callers into the dining room where the table was presided over by Mrs. J. P. Hogarth and Mrs. G. M. Landon in the afternoon and by Mrs. E. D. Chapman and Mrs. James Martin in the evening. The waitresses were the Misses Lucile Fink, Cyntha Weis and Beatrice and Claribel Landt. Miss Bernice Weiss answered the door.

We clip the above from the Monroe Democrat. Rev. and Mrs. Burns are well known in Tecumseh, Mrs. Burns being a daughter of Mrs. Mary A. Vincent of this place.

On Christmas Day the ladies of the church presented Mrs. Burns with a fine set of china dishes.

GREAT AUTHORS.

All theatre goers are are interested in a great play, written by a great author, one which has been played by such artists as the elder Sothern, Goodwin, Willard and Charles Wyndham, before the crowned heads of Europe and the elite of America. So all the scenic artist, the actor, stage manager, costumer musicians and electrician can do, has been done to equip the eminent actor, Mr. Clifton Mallory for his appearance this season in the great English comedy "David Garrick." Each actor in Mr. Mallory's support has been chosen with but one idea, he must look the part as drawn by the great author, T. W. Robertson. This production will be at the Bradley opera house Tuesday, Jan. 19.

HISTORY

Early History of the Schools of Tecumseh.

BRIEF SKETCH DATING FROM 1824 TO 1857.

Telling of the Branch of the State University that was Located Here.

In writing a History of our schools, one has necessarily to dip into our early village history, and of how much interest this is to each one of us.

As we study the history of these early settlers of Tecumseh, we cannot but be impressed with the fact, that the women of those days, had their time so fully occupied that it did not require a new "cult" in order to cure them of nervous troubles and imaginary ills, for we read of their large families, five children in the Brown family, five in the Evans, and seven in Abner Spoffords and etc.

The idealistic philosophy of Christian Science, New Thought, Emanuel Movement would not appeal to them, but materialistic philosophy was something they could understand, as illustrated with a Birch-whip and the gospel of Hell fire and brimstone; they required strong food, and if this generation has improved on these early times, it remains for history to show.

The establishment of a school seemed the first thing of importance for them to which they turned their attention This first school-house was constructed of tamerack poles and was twelve feet square, stood not far from the Red Mill in Brownville; here Mrs Mary Spafford, wife of George Spafford taught the first school ever organized in Lenawee county in the winter of 1824-25.

The village school and only school until 1832 was built by the efforts of a few individuals in 1826, was a frame house about 18 ft. by 20 ft. and stood a little south of the old Presbyterian church on Maumee street; this school was taught by Col. E Wood whose school was celebrated for its exhibitions.

In 1832, Mr. LeBaron then a young man returned to Woodstock, Vermont, and married Miss Maria Tribou, and brought her here and lived in the house afterwards known as the Dr. Baldwin place Mr LeBaron assisted by his wife started a private school in the Old Court House, [then new] this school was very popular.

Mr. Benjamin Workman, a superior scholar, established the first classical school in Tecumseh.

Then came the prosperous administration of Perley Bills; wishing an assistant, he sent east for a Miss Brown, who seemed to please him so well in this capacity, that she held this position through life, under the name of Mrs. Perley Bills

In 1839, a branch of the State University was opened in Tecumseh, in the Court House, which was called University Branch Building; this University Building stood on the square now occupied by the Standpipe; the Principals were appointed by the Regents of the University.

Mr. Harvey, a fine scholar, assisted by Wilson Gray of Dublin, Ireland, were the first ones appointed. B. L. Baxter was principal then for three years, and they had what they called a Female department; this was kept seperate from the rest of the school and was presided over by a very talented lady Mrs. J Q A. Wood of Ann Arbor; then followed in quick succession Mr Green, F. O Marsh, then Prof. Esterbrook of Grand Rapids, who was one of the most popular instructors in the State of Michigan.

Following him, J. E. Bateman, C. W. Nash in 1854, it was during C. W Nash's time that a Union school organization was affected, it embraced the entire village and some adjoining territory. Up to this time, the high school had been kept in the Court House, but having out grown these quarters in 1854, the subject of a new High school was agitated At a public meeting $3,000 was voted In 1855 a site was purchased on the northwest corner of Ottawa and Shawee streets opposite Military square, then $6,000 more was voted to be borrowed on the bond of the district; the following year it was completed in 1856 at a cost of $16,000.

It is somewhat amusing to read the description of this building written at that time, with what pride they point to this comodious three-story building, with its towers on each side the fine chapel on the third floor, and above all, it was warmed by a furnace, a great luxury in those days.

We, who condemn this building as inartistic, ill, arranged, poorly ventilated, a firetrap, its three stories, and old fashioned appearance should not speak too harshly of it, for with what care and thought and hard work this building was erected; to them, it was perfect and beautiful, to us, it is not all that could be desired; the difference lies only, in our point of view.

James E. Baldwin.

The deceased, James E Baldwin, son of Miles and Lucy Baldwin, was born in Raisin township Jan. 10, 1856 and died at his home in Madison Sunday, Dec. 27, 1908, making him 52 years, 11 months and 17 days Sept. 6, 1894, he was united in marriage to Miss Lilly Raymond, who with their three children, Raymond, Bertine and Mildred, survive him

He was of a genial and cheerful disposition, ever ready to lend a helping hand to those around him and was well liked by all who knew him. Although he has been in poor health for some time and has suffered greatly for the past three years, he has borne all his suffering with patience marvellous to all. He leaves, besides the immediate family, a mother, father, two half sisters and two half brothers besides other relatives

There were days of patient sorrow,
E'er he left this changeful life,
There were hours of deepest agony,
There were hours of mental strife.

As he longed for death to claim him,
E'en the tears unbid wound fall,
For the waiting to be free,
Seemed the hardest of it all.

Yet when came the looked for summons,
To his last and final rest,
Just a silent change came o'er him.
And his suffering ceased at last.

The first lesson in fence breaking may come from a little neglect on the part of the farmer to keep the boards or rails all whole. One board off and the mischief has been commenced Look out for the beginning of such things.

HOW TO GROW FAT

A Large Stomach the Cause of Thinness, Nine Times in Ten.

If you are thin or lean, have scrawney arms and neck, you can't grow fat unless you improve your digestion.

People take on flesh in proportion to the nutritious matter which the organs of digestion absorb and pass into the blood.

Just as long as this nutritious matter passes along without being absorbed, just so long will you remain thin.

Perhaps your stomach, bowels and liver need a tonic If your digestion is not perfect, Mi-o-na tablets will make it perfect

Mi-o-na will cure indigestion and every conceivable ailment of the stomach promptly. It is not a digester; it cures by building and toning up not by encouraging a lazy stomach to continue its lazy and health destroying habits.

C A Wright & Son sell Mi-o-na for 50 cents a box, and guarantees it to cure all stomach diseases and distress, or money back

"Mi-o-na used by me for dyspepsia, gave fine relief and has my endorsement" James Silver, Ottawa st, Tecumseh, Mich., Oct. 15, 1908.

The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

SAVED FROM THE GRAVE.

How a Dream Rescued Woman From a Terrible Death.

Mr. Jones was a popular young business man in the city of B. His wife was a woman of strong emotion and most delicate perceptions. Between them there existed a rare sympathy which extended to all the faculties.

Mrs. Jones fell ill, and after a few weeks' agony, during which her husband waited on her with a constancy not often seen, she died—that is, she appeared to be dead. There was no question about it in the doctors' mind. A certificate was issued and an undertaker called in. But for the fortunate circumstance that Mr. Jones was opposed to embalming there would be no story to tell unless it were of another person apparently dead who was revived for a moment under the lunge of the embalmer's knife.

Saved from that fate, Mrs. Jones was laid out in her burial robe, placed in a coffin and on the third day was buried in a cemetery some distance away.

Her husband was greatly affected, so much that his relatives feared an attack of melancholia. His uncle, wishing to arouse his spirits and divert his attention, remained in the house the night after the funeral and was a valuable witness, as it proved, of an event so astounding as to be almost beyond belief.

For an hour or two that evening they talked chiefly about the dead and then went to bed. Mr. Jones, after tossing upon his pillow for a long time, fell into a troubled sleep. In the middle of the night he heard a voice calling his name, "George, George!" The tones were not familiar to him; they did not recall the voice of his wife.

Still conceiving himself the victim of a dream, he again went to sleep. It was daybreak before the voice was heard again, and this time it could not be ignored. He recognized it at last as the voice of his wife in sore distress calling upon him. She cried:

"George! Save me! Save me, George!"

He sprang out of bed, trembling all over. That despairing cry still rang in his ears. So real was it that, although he was awake and remembered perfectly the death, the funeral and all that happened in the preceding four days, he searched the room for her who had thrice called him by name.

Finding that he was alone, he rushed into his uncle's room crying: "Get up! Get up! We must go to the cemetery! She is alive! She is calling me!"

The uncle, skeptical as he was by nature, was carried away by Jones' impetuosity. Both men threw on some clothing, and, while one harnessed a horse to a light buggy, the other procured spades. Thus equipped, they drove to the cemetery at a gallop. The sun rose as they leaped out at the grave and began to dig.

Mrs. Jones had been buried the previous afternoon. Her husband shoveled away the earth in a frenzy of energy. It was firmly fixed in his mind that she had been buried alive and that he might yet be in time to save her. Inspired by his nephew's excitement, the uncle dug with a vigor almost as great as Jones'.

Begrimed and disheveled, they at last reached the coffin and wrenched off the lid. Jones shrieked. His wife was moving. She was trying feebly to turn over in her narrow bed. She gazed at him with eyes that saw not. She was unconscious of her situation.

He passed his arms about her and lifted her out. The two men removed her from the grave, placed her in the buggy and drove home. Physicians were called in. Under close medical care she slowly recovered. Every precaution was taken to guard her from the knowledge of what had happened, and all who were in the secret pledged themselves to silence lest the shock of that revelation of her burial and resurrection might prove fatal to her, but the story leaked out later, when Mrs. Jones got about again.

It soothes pain, it is cooling and healing. Good for cuts, burns, bruises and scratches, but especially recommended for piles—DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve. Sold by all dealers.

I had almost given up in despair, but knowing the virtue of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for sick headache, I concluded to try the Nervine. During June, 1906, I gave him a teaspoonful three times a day, then in July I gave it as directed, and I could see that he was improving, and he has not had a spell since August 23, 1906, and has taken no medicine since Jan.-07. I am writing the case just as it is hoping it will induce others to try it."

Don't Get A Divorce.

A western judge granted a divorce on account of ill-temper and bad breath. Dr. King's New Life Pills would have prevented it. They cure Constipation, causing bad breath and Liver Trouble the ill-temper, dispel colds, banish headaches, conquer chills. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store.

How to Cure Constipation

Simple Home Remedy That Is Safe and Pleasant

Few people escape constipation. Catching cold, over eating, worry, lack of exercise, failure to answer promptly the calls of nature, diseased or weakened system or strong medicines may cause it. The too common practice of taking salts, or pills or some such violent cathartic has always done more harm than good. They make the bowels act quickly and violently simply because they irritate them, and leave them in a worse condition than before.

What is needed is a mild easy herb laxative, that gives regular daily movements in all cases, yet does not pain, or gripe, and which will strengthen the bowels and tone up the system instead of depleting it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin taken at night before going to bed will bring an easy pleasant natural movement in the morning even in the most obstinate cases and without any bad effects. No pain, no gripe and it is so safe and pleasant to take, mothers give it to their babies with splendid results. It is an aid to digestion and tones up the system as well as cures bowel trouble. Dr. L. E. Covey, Savannah, Tenn., writes: "I get better results from it than any Pepsin I ever used." Dr. T. Jones, Osceola, Mo., says: "I consider Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the best of all laxatives." Mrs. Almon Willis, Jamaica, Vt., says: "I truly believe it saved my little boy's life." Rev. A. J. Fletcher, Rutherford, Tenn., says: "I am 60 years old and your Syrup Pepsin has cured me of dyspepsia and bowel trouble."

W. D. Jackson, Burns Station, Tenn., says: "I was afflicted with constipation and dyspepsia for nine years, and found no relief until I used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin." All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

We are glad to send a free sample to any reader of this paper who has never used it and will give it a fair trial. Write today to Pepsin Syrup Co., 303 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

BOUNDING THE INFINITE.

Are the Number of Stars In Space Without Limit?

How many stars are there? It is not known, but most astronomers believe the number is not unlimited. The argument is that with an infinite universe of stars the heavens would be one uniform blaze of light. The more distant stars are, of course, dimmer; some are too far away to affect the naked eye at all, but no matter how slight the units an infinite number of them would produce the effect described.

As there is no uniformly blazing sky, the number of stars, though possibly immensely great, must be limited. This argument is supplemented in a recent astronomical paper by a similar one drawn from gravitation. Every star, no matter how distant, exercises its own power of attraction on every other heavenly body, including our earth.

However, as the earth's center is farther away from the attracting body than its surface is, particles on the earth's surface are attracted with greater force than those at the center, and the practical result is to lessen the force with which the earth's mass is held together.

Now, if the number of stars is infinite, this decrease would be so great that weight on the earth would practically cease to exist. Moreover, the same conditions would prevail everywhere throughout a boundless universe and probably all masses would be disrupted. That this result does not occur is a proof, we are told, that the number of heavenly bodies in existence is not infinite.

These arguments make certain assumptions that may or may not be granted; they can neither be proved nor disproved. The argument from light assumes that light waves are transmitted through space without loss; that from gravitation assumes that the same thing is true for gravitational attraction.

If light or gravitation is absorbed or lost in some way when passing from star to star, the number of stars may be infinite after all. At its best the speculation is more curious than conclusive.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Adages of Morocco.

In an article on the people of Morocco a writer in Paris Figaro says: "They have some queer adages and some that closely resemble ours. Thus they say, 'The camel cannot see its hump, but plainly sees the one of its neighbor;' 'He who depends on his neighbor will go to bed hungry;' 'A wise enemy is better than a stupid friend!' 'Cross the rushing stream, but beware of the quiet, noiseless one;' 'In this world there are three things not to be trusted—luck, women and horses;' 'Mounting a horse, loosing the hunting dogs and hearing earrings rattle drive dull care away.'"

Compensation.

"Speakin' of de law of compensation," said Uncle Eben, "an automobile goes faster dan a mule, but at de same time it hits harder an' balks longer."—Washington Star.

J. Palmer, aged sixteen years, when hunting with a rifle on the property of S. Daniels of Twining, was ordered off from the place by Mrs. Daniels. He refused to go and opened fire on her, shooting her three times. The first shot went through her dress, the second hit her in the arm and the third went through her leg. He was overtaken and arrested.

TWENTY-FIVE MEN DEAD.

Frightful Explosion of Letter Mines at Zeighler, Ill.

ELECTRIC SPARK IGNITES GAS

Eight Bodies Remain to Be Recovered. Joseph Leiter Personally Conducts Relief Party—Men Were Entombed While Clearing Away Debris From Recent Fire.

Duquoin, Ill., Jan. 11.—A disastrous gas explosion in which twenty-five men lost their lives has occurred in Joseph Leiter's famous colliery at Zeigler. A spark from a trolley pole of an electric motor coming in contact with a pocket of gas is assigned as the cause of the explosion.

Americans killed by the explosion include Foreman Willis Warner and Albert Kerr.

Eight bodies yet remain in the mine, but they will be recovered before many hours, it is thought.

Joseph Leiter personally conducted the first relief party that descended into the mine to recover the bodies. The lone survivor of the explosion was an Italian youth, who escaped unharmed.

An expert, who had been experimenting with the gas in the mines at Zeigler, left last Wednesday, confident that he had placed the mine in safe condition to be operated.

The men entombed were engaged in clearing away the debris caused by the recent fires in the mine, and it was expected that operations would be resumed this week, after two months' suspension.

NAPLES REACHED.

Four of Sperry's Battleships Arrive at Italian City.

Naples, Jan. 11.—The United States battleships Connecticut, Kansas, Vermont and Minnesota, under Rear Admiral Sperry, the commander of the Atlantic fleet, have arrived here.

Messina, Jan. 11.—Balmy weather has prevailed for the past two or three days at this place, and it is a great blessing, making it possible for the troops and survivors of the earthquake to live more or less comfortably in the open. Occasionally there are earth shocks, but the people have become accustomed to them.

General Mazza, who is in supreme command, has adopted stringent measures in order to protect the people, and the people's property. In addition to establishing a police service around the city, he has issued orders that any person found excavating without a permit shall be shot.

General Mazza explained that the preventing of looting entailed most rigorous measures. He declared that under the guise of rescuers many thieves were going about committing robbery.

Work of excavating is now under way in some places.

Sanitary conditions have been greatly improved, and it is now believed there is little danger of the spread of disease.

The American relief ship Bayern, flying the Red Cross flag, is still here. Ambassador Griscom has returned to Naples for the purpose of presenting Rear Admiral Sperry to the king. The United States supply ship Cufgoa, which has also arrived here from Port Said, carried great quantities of stores and provisions.

Mental Hygiene

The Principles That Underlie All Forms of Mental Therapeutics—Pain Not an Unmixed Evil—It Is Nature's Signal. Hygienic Thoughts.

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.

As is well known, the "mind cure" movement has spread amazingly of late years. It is not only the central feature of Christian Science, Mental Science and the so called New Thought; it has also been taken up by clergymen of orthodox religious denominations, and among medical men there is a steadily growing interest in the treatment of disease by mental methods. Every phase of the movement—from the ultra religious type found in Christian Science to the ultra scientific type represented by Pierre Janet, Morton Prince and other psychopathologists—has features peculiar to itself, but at bottom all of them rest on two great principles.

These are the power of faith and the power of suggestion. The former has long been recognized as of incalculable importance in the cure of disease. But the influence of suggestion has been appreciated only within modern times, and it in turn depends for its efficacy on the power of faith. Whatever the method by which the beneficial suggestions are given, their success depends upon the belief in the mind of the patient that they are likely to bring about the desired result, or, as Dr. Elwood Worcester puts it, a curative suggestion is an effect obtained through the conviction that it is about to take place.

Of course, however, faith and suggestion are not enough if the disease is of such a character as to require physical rather than psychical methods of treatment, as in the case of a broken limb or a malignant growth. Nor will they always avail unless the suggestionist has at least enough scientific training to diagnose the nature of the malady he is called upon to treat. Otherwise he is as likely as not to make harmful instead of beneficial suggestions. It is because these requirements have been so largely ignored that mental therapeutics is still to a large extent a "hit or miss" system of treating diseases. Many of its practitioners have gone on the principle that nothing is needed but faith and that suggestion will cure a case of tuberculosis as it will a nervous headache.

Fortunately there are signs that a more rational point of view is being reached. In the psychotherapeutic clinics established at Emmanuel church, Boston, every patient is required to submit to a thorough examination by competent physicians and if found suffering from some disease which does not lend itself to treatment by mental means is candidly informed of that fact and advised as to the best course to pursue in order to obtain a cure. This is entirely as it should be. Much precious time will be saved patients who may happen to require immediate surgical or medical attention, and, on the other hand, time will be gained for the treatment of those in whose cases faith and suggestion properly applied will indeed work wonders.

Nature's Signal.

If you put your finger on a redhot stove you are certain to receive a burn. You are also certain to feel a sudden pain and to withdraw your finger instantly. If you did not feel any pain you would not take your finger away, and the result would be a deep, extensive injury incapacitating you for weeks and perhaps having fatal results. The pain you feel is nature's way of telegraphing to the brain news of the catastrophe that threatens.

This unquestionably is the real meaning of pain, making it in many respects a blessing rather than a curse. The only drawback is that nature keeps on telegraphing until the trouble is wholly rectified, whether it is a burn that has to be healed or an inflamed organ which requires the surgeon's knife before relief can be obtained. But if there were no pain, if the bodily organism were so constituted as to be without sensation, there could be no life, for the agencies that cause death would have free, untrammeled swing, and before a person knew it he would cease to be alive.

The obvious moral is to pay attention to nature's signal and profit by it. Many a disease—notably cancer and tuberculosis, for which no absolutely certain specific remedies have been found when they are in an advanced stage—could be arrested if the victim only paid heed to the little premonitory discomforts that attend their onset. Pain always means that something is wrong. Quite frequently nature alone is sufficient to repair the damage done. But it is by no means wise to rely too implicitly on the unaided powers of nature.

Hygienic Thoughts.

As a man thinketh in his heart so is he.—Old Testament Scriptures.

Every right action and true thought sets the seal of its beauty on person and face.—Ruskin.

Self reverence, self knowledge, self control—these three alone lead life to sovereign power.—Tennyson.

If in a hurry, go around. Such is the Japanese proverb, and American girls would do well to take it to heart. Meet the next nervous flurry that blows up in your vicinity with this bit of wisdom.—Emma E. Walker.

CHURCH AFFAIRS

WORK BEING DONE IN OUR CHURCHES.

What is accomplished through the Social Life.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

Rev. Blanche Young, minister — No morning service Sunday school at 11:30. Y. P. C. U. devotional meeting at 6 p. m. Leader Mrs. Ethel Mathias; Topic, "The Good Samaritan." Evening worship at 7, subject of the sermon; "Getting together, Unity not Uniformity. Bible study at the parsonage Thursday evening.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

C. C. Kemp, rector—Service Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Sunday school at 11:30.

Midweek service Friday evening at 7, followed by choir practice.

The parish has decided to remodel the rectory and to use it for a Parish House instead of building a choir room as at first intended, a passage connecting the two will be built. Work on the alterations will commence in the early spring.

FRIEND'S CHURCH.

There will be the regular Sunday morning service at 10 followed by Sunday school. The junior Endeavor at 3 p. m. C. E. at 6. Evening service at 7. All are welcome.

The Thursday circle met at the home of Miss Swan this week.

Sunday evening the Christian Endeavor will take up the first of a series of lessons on Pilgrim's Progress.

Next Thursday will be the meeting of the missionary society, and it is desired that there will be a large attendance. The place of meeting will be announced Sunday.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morse visited friends in Ida the last of the week.

Mrs. Chas. Williamson took Mrs. Harry Moore's place at the organ last Sunday morning.

Mrs. Lydia McIntyre is spending the week with her daughter Mrs. Ned Wood.

Mr. A. O. Bryan was called to Kansas Tuesday morning by the serious illness of his father.

The ladies monthly missionary meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Pulver Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Anna Morse had charge of the program on Utah.

There was quite a little disappointment last Sunday when the gold pins were presented, in a very pretty way, because some who were deserving had been overlooked, the matter will probably be adjusted in a week or two.

Miss Gladys Gripton is quite sick with scarlet fever.

Mr. Ben Roberts has been absent from the store for a number of days, on account of sickness.

Sunday morning worship with preaching at 10 o'clock. The pastor will speak upon "The gift of power." Bible school at 11:15 a. m. B. Y. P. U., prayer meeting at 6 p. m. Union evangelistic service at the Methodist church at 7.

METHODIST CHURCH.

10 a. m. Preaching service Sunday. Sermon theme "First Things First." 11:30 Sunday school. Men's class, theme "The Man Who Fed His Soul With Corn." Young men's class, theme "The Young Man in The Church." 6 p. m. Epworth league, topic: How we know the Father: one way of getting acquainted with God." 7 p. m. Union Service at Presbyterian church.

The Union Evangelistic Services will be continued all next week. There is an ever increasing interest manifest, attendance is good and the results gratifying. Sunday was a day not soon to be forgotten. The men's meeting in the afternoon addressed by Major Cole was well attended in spite of the rain. It was truly inspirational and several men placed themselves on record as beginning the practice of the Christian life. Major Cole conducted an after meeting in the evening and as usual it was not only unique in method but telling in effect. During the week the pastors have taken turns in preaching in the following order. F. W. Kamm, J. W. Dunning, W. J. Cheney and D. S. Shaw, the pastors are all young and vigorous and make a well mated double team. Prof. Lagerquist has been in charge of the music each night, leading the congregation and singing effective invitational solos. Local attractions have taken the attention of some this week, but we look for mighty things next week. All are invited.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

At a social meeting held last Friday evening the monthly reports were read, and showed all departments to be in a thriving condition. It was decided to hold the January communion service on January 24.

Major Cole gave us a delightful inspiration in our Bible school Sunday morning. He spoke to the men's class first and gave an earnest appeal to the Christian life. Afterward he spoke to the whole school, and when he asked all to stand with the pastor, who were or expected to live a Christian life, almost the whole school arose.

Sunday morning Rev. A. F. Bruske, D. D., president of Alma college will occupy the pulpit and speak about the college. He will also address the men's class on "The Christian College and the State University." Dr. Bruske is one of the ablest preachers in the state and all should hear him.

Mr. Hurst will address the young men's class Sunday and will speak on "The College Athelete."

The meetings held in the Methodist church this week have aroused great interest. There will be a third union Sunday evening service in our church Sunday evening and Rev. Kamm of the Baptist church will preach.

There was a large delegation from the boys' department of the Tecumseh Y. M. C. A. Ovid Marsh presented a paper in the Saturday meeting on the work of the high school boys in the Y. M. C. WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 9, 1909.

The House of Representatives has gotten back at the President and in mild language heaped coals of fire on his head for the strictures innuendos and insulting language of his annual message to Congress and for what the House calls "the evasiveness and irresponsiveness of what they hoped would be an apology or at least an explanation. The fact is that the President in "purging himself of contempt" as the saying is, was if anything more contemptuous than in the original dose. There is talk apparently serious of impeachment proceedings and frequently reference to the impeachment of Andrew Johnson the only precedent in Amerian history. But the two cases are utterly without parallelism. Roosevelt is still the most popular man in the United States and probably more popular today on account of this very incident than he was eight months ago when it took an iterated and reiterated announcement every morning before breakfast to prevent the country from nominating him by force for a third term. The President has not used the Secret Service money for the detection of the ins and outs of Senators and Members of Congress; but as is well known, he has been after undesirable citizens whether they were railroad presidents, trust magnates, or labor union boycotters and assassins. It was through the activity of one of the departments under him that the land frauds of Senator Mitchell of Oregon were discovered and that Mitchell was tried and condemned. The detective bureau received no instructions to shadow Tillman of South Carolina and he was not shadowed by Government detectives of the detective bureau but certain information regarding his alleged speculation in Oregon land grants were brought to the attention of the President through Government postoffice inspectors and at the request of Senator Hale of Maine. The information regarding Senator Tillman was sent direct to him. The President and Senator Tillman have not for a long time been on speaking terms and the senator has improved every opportunity both in and out of the Senate to denounce and characterize Mr. Roosevelt in language that was nearer Billing's gate than parliamentary.

The antipathy, or I might say, enmity between the men has become historic. It began two or three years ago when after a fist fight on the Senate floor with Senator McLaurin, the President failed to invite Senator Tillman to a White House reception to which all of the other Senators and members were invited. Senator Tillman is a man of uncultivated ability, and he is well posted in national affairs, and especially in the affairs of the Senate committees to which he is assigned. He is, however, rough, uncouth, and not precisely a representative of that legendary flower of chivalry, a Southern gentlemen. The present administration, as it is well known, has been after rascals, undesirable citizens, and whether they were railroad presidents, senators, or jail birds, it has been the effort to hunt them down. The fate of Senator Mitchell of Oregon in the land fraud cases is fresh in the memory of every reader. There was no reason why the Administration should not make an effort to investigate the alleged relations of Tillman, or any other Senator. Of course, he has denied any connection with the Oregon land frauds. Senator Mitchell, also, denied on the floor of the Senate with tears and with vociferous assertions of innocence. Senator Mitchell was condemned.

Barely fifty more days of President Roosevelt's term remains, and there is every appearance that these remaining days will be as strenuous as the President could desire, and it may be doubted if he will find among the wild beasts of Africa game more entertainment than the House and Senate are disposed to give him before the fourth of March. To the student of current history as spread before the world in the daily press the situation is entertaining and edifying. Only a few months ago it was necessary for the President to iterate and reiterate his declaration made on the evening of his election that he would not under any consideration, have a third term. The people were determined to nominate him and it was with considerable reluctance that they named the man of his choice, but having named him elected him with a great majority, mainly, or in great part at least, because he represented Roosevelt and the Roosevelt policies. Now, the newspaper headlines have the startling word "impeachment," and this procedure is actually discussed in Congress. Is Theodore Roosevelt less popular now than he was before the presidential nominating convention assembled at Chicago? Certainly not. It is probable that he is more firmly entrenched in the confidence and admiration of the people than he was then, and among other reasons because he has expressed his mind to Congress and told the naked truth.

If your Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Highways of happiness are never out through with pain and tears.

It requires a proper combination of certain acids with natural digestive juices to perfect a dyspepsia cure. And that is what Kodol is—a perfect digester that digests all the food you eat. If you eat. If you will take Kodol for a little while you will no longer have indigestion. You then couldn't have indigestion. How could you have indigestion if your food were to digest? Kodol digests all you eat. It is pleasant to take, acts promptly. Sold by all druggists.

There is a world of difference between willing a deed and simply being willing to do.

A Religious Author's Statement.

For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and last winter I was suddenly stricken with a severe pain in my kidneys and was confined to bed eight days unable to get up without assistance. My urine contained a thick white sediment and I passed same frequently day and night. I commenced taking Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the pain gradually abated and finally ceased and my urine became normal. I cheerfully recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy. Sold by all druggists.

This is just the time of the year when you are most likely to contract a severe cold, and you should always have Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup handy, especially for the children. It tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. Aaron J. Palmer.

Aaron J. Palmer, former manufacturer and retail dealer of furniture and chairs in Tecumseh, died at his home in Wolfe Creek last Tuesday morning, aged 79 years. Mr. Palmer was born in Greene County, N. Y., in the town of Hunter, Oct. 7, 1830. He received his education in the town of Hunter, attending the common schools and supplementing it with a course at a select school. He had a natural aptitude for mechanics and in order that this gift might become of practical benefit to him, he was apprenticed to a large firm in his home town to learn the cabinet maker's trade. In the spring of 1859, Mr. Palmer concluded to try his fortunes in Michigan. He located in Parma, near Jackson and finally moved to Tecumseh and found employment in the machine shop of H. Brewer, remaining there about ten years. In 1876 he built the store now occupied by W. W. Whiting's cigar shop and conducted a chair factory there for a number of years, giving employment to a number of men.

Mr. Palmer was married to Miss Caroline Marks of Cleveland, O., and they became the parents of four children of whom but one is living, Mrs. Francis Jacobs of Tecumseh. Mrs. Palmer died several years ago. He then married Miss Dora Moss of Pontiac and five children were born to them who are left to mourn with the wife. They are Mrs. Nellie Cilley of Adrian, John, Hattie, James and Dora at home.

In politics, Mr Palmer was a Democrat with conservative views and, although he never had any aspirations for public office, he felt it the duty of every man to regard his elective franchise with great honor. He was a man of good standing and his integrity and fair dealing were without question. The funeral was held this morning from the house in Wolfe. Burial at Brookside cemetery, Tecumseh.

A Horrible Hold-Up.

"About ten years ago my brother was "held up" in his work, health and happiness by what was believed to be hopeless Consumption," writes W. R. Lipscomb of Washington, D. C. "He took all kinds of remedies and treatment from several doctors, but found no help till he used Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles. He is a well man today." It's quick to relieve and the surest cure for weak or sore lungs, Hemorrhages, Coughs and Colds, Bronchitis, LaGrippe, Asthma and all Bronchial affections. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. GREAT AUTHORS.

All theatre goers are are interested in a great play, written by a great author, one which has been played by such artists as the elder Sothern, Goodwin, Willard and Charles Wyndham, before the crowned heads of Europe and the elite of America. So all the scenic artist, the actor, stage manager, costumer musicians and electrician can do, has been done to equip the eminent actor, Mr Clifton Mallory for his appearance this season in the great English comedy "David Garrick." Each actor in Mr. Mallory's support has been chosen with but one idea, he must look the part as drawn by the great author, T. W. Robertson. This production will be at the Bradley opera house Tuesday, Jan. 19.

HOW TO CURE SKIN DISEASES.

The germs and their poisons must be drawn to the surface of the skin and destroyed. Zemo will do this and cure any case of skin or scalp disease, no matter from what cause or of how long standing. Write for sample. E. W. Rose Med. Co., St. Louis, Mo. See photos of cures and window or show case display at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

DAIRYMEN

Meet in Tecumseh Wednesday and Thursday.

ABLE PAPERS WERE PRESENTED AND DISCUSSED.

Large number were in attendance.

The Michigan Dairymen are holding their 13th auxiliary meeting at Witherell hall, Tecumseh, with a large number in attendance

The meetings were opened Wednesday afternoon at 1:30, with prayer. J. H. Combs, president of the village gave the address of welcome, to which Sec. S. J. Wilson responded.

Colon C Lillie gave an excellent paper upon Selecting and Breeding the Dairy Cow. Mr. Lillie owns a large dairy farm near Grand Rapids, and has had considerable experience in this work, and thought that the selecting and breeding of the cow, should be done with the utmost care and attention

E S. Powers of Ravenna, O, gave a talk on What a Creamery Ought to do for the Farmer, which was extremely interesting.

Both papers were discussed at length.

The evening meeting was called at 7:30 and Dr. Floyd W. Robinson, State Analyst, of Lansing read a paper on "Tuberculosis how should the state attempt to control?" Dr Robinson thought the state could easily control tuberculosis by systematic examination, and when the first signs of tuberculosis appeared to have the animal killed at once

M. W Hensel of Bisfield Supt County schools, spoke upon "Should agriculture be taught in rural schools." Mr. Hensel spoke at length on this subject. He thought agriculture should be taught in all rural schools.

Thursday morning at 10 o'clock the meeting was again called to order. As E G. Palmer of Britton was absent in the morning, a paper on Alfalfa by A. W Mills, was transferred from the afternoon to the morning session. Mr. Mills has had a great deal of experience in raising alfalfa, and believes it much better for feeding than clover.

Colon C. Lillie read a paper on "Is dairying profitable?" Mr Lillie runs a dairy farm on a large scale, and had found the business when properly attended to very profitable.

The remainder of the morning was given over to discussing the two papers presented

In the afternoon the session opened with music by Mrs. Anna Mead and Mary Kreidler.

Prof. Robert S Shaw of Lansing was present and gave an excellent paper upon "Improving the dairy herds of the state. Mr. Shaw spoke at length, and advanced some very good ideas E G. Palmer of Britton, who was to have spoken in the morning, was present in the afternoon and read a paper on Local dairy conditions, how to improve them. Mr. Palmer's paper was extremely interesting.

It is such a remarkable cure, and so positive in its action, that C. A. Wright & Son goes so far as to guarantee it to cure catarrh or money back.

A complete outfit, which consists of a hard rubber pocket inhaler, a bottle of Hyomei, and a unique dropper for filling the inhaler, only costs one dollar, and if an extra bottle is afterwards needed, the price is only 50 cents.

Live your life so that when your obituary is written it can tell the truth without doing harm to your memory.

If our gubernatorial candidates could but remember one-fiftieth of the people "they are glad to meet" during the campaign, their minds would indeed be marvels.

THE SLEEPING SICKNESS WHICH MEANS DEATH

How many readers have heard of this terrible disease? It prevails in that far-away country—Africa—especially the Congo district. It is caused by the bite of the tsetse fly. When it bites a person, the sleeping symptoms begin and finally the sufferer sleeps until death occurs.

Contrast this with the peaceful, balmy sleep of health. Is there anything more wearing than to lie awake at night, tossing about, nervous, with cold feet, hot head and mercy knows what else? Short of letting the tsetse fly bite us we would do almost anything for relief. How can we prevent it? Mr. George Hayes, of Union City, Pa., writes: "I had lost my appetite, was all run-down, could not sleep nights. I had tried everything without relief. Vinol was recommended, and to my surprise, it helped me at once; gave me a splendid appetite, and now I sleep soundly."

What Vinol did for Mr. Hayes, it will do for every run-down, nervous and overworked person who cannot sleep.

VINOL is sold in Tecumseh by C. A. Wright & Son, Druggists.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First — Don't Delay — Second — Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Tecumseh residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Tecumseh citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

John B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For several years I suffered a great deal from rheumatism and backache. My kidneys were badly disordered and I knew that they caused all my trouble. About two years ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time I was relieved. I have had no serious attacks of the trouble since. Shortly after using Doan's Kidney Pills I told of my experience through the local papers and at this time I am glad to verify that statement and again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole Agents for the United States.

Kinnikinic.

"We ran out of tobacco while fishing in the Canadian wilds," said a clubman. "Our guides put us on to kinnikinic, and we smoked that for ten days. It wasn't bad.

"Kinnikinic is the inner bark of the red willow. You dry it, then you cut it up. It really tastes like tobacco. The Indians always use it when they can't get the real thing, and I understand that there are certain brands of Canadian tobacco that are flavored with kinnikinic."—Washington Times.

THE OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters By Using Pe-ru-na.

Mr. Isaac Brock, 119 Years Old Last Birthday.

ISAAC BROCK, a citizen of McLennan county, Texas, has lived for 119 years. For many years he resided at Bosque Falls, eighteen miles west of Waco, but now lives with his son-in-law at Valley Mills, Texas.

Some time ago, by request, Uncle Isaac came to Waco and sat for his picture, holding in his hand a stick cut from the grave of General Andrew Jackson.

Mr. Brock is a dignified old gentleman, showing few signs of decrepitude.

His family Bible is still preserved, and it shows that the date of his birth was written 119 years ago.

Born before the United States were formed.
Saw 22 presidents elected.
Pe-ru-na has protected him from all sudden changes.
Veteran of four wars.
Shod a horse when 99 years old.
Always conquered the grip with Pe-ru-na.
Witness in a land suit at the age of 110 years.
Believes Pe-ru-na the greatest remedy of the age for catarrhal troubles.

In speaking of his good health and extreme old age, Mr. Brock says:

"After a man has lived in the world as long as I have, he ought to have found out a great many things by experience. I think I have done so.

"One of the things I have found out to my entire satisfaction is the proper thing for ailments that are due directly to the effects of the climate. For 119 years I have withstood the changeable climate of the United States.

"I have always been a very healthy man, but, of course, subject to the affections which are due to sudden changes in the climate and temperature.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Pe-ru-na, I have found it to be the best, if not the only reliable remedy for these affections. It has been my standby for many years, and I attribute my good health and extreme old age to this remedy.

"It exactly meets all my requirements. It protects me from the evil effects of sudden changes; it gives me strength; it keeps my blood in good circulation. I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine.

"When epidemics of la grippe first began to make their appearance in this country I was a sufferer from this disease.

"I had several long sieges with the grip. At first I did not know that Pe-ru-na was a remedy for this disease. When I heard that la grippe was epidemic catarrh I tried Pe-ru-na for la grippe and found it to be just the thing."

In a later letter, Mr. Brock writes:

"I am well and feeling as well as I have for years. I would not be without Peruna."

Yours truly,

Isaac Brock

A letter dated July 8, 1906, written for Mr. Brock by his wife, Sarah J. Brock, states:

"Last winter I had just gotten up out of a spell of sickness, when I commenced taking Peruna. I think it improved my health very much."

In a postscript, Mrs. Brock adds: "He receives a great many letters inquiring about what Peruna will do. I do not answer them all, as I think they can get a bottle and try it."

Misses Lotta Hardcastle and Pearl Wood called in Britton Saturday.

Mrs. C. C Smith spent the last of the week in Tecumseh with her daughter, Mrs. T. M. Birdsall.

Snakes Changed Into Rods.

The Egyptian cobra is not unlike its Asiatic relative except in respect of the absence of the curious spectacle-like mark which distinguishes the latter. Although it is the most poisonous reptile known to inhabit northern Africa, it is the favorite among the snake charmers. These conjurers know how to render this serpent rigidly unconscious by pressing the nape of its neck with a finger. This act appears to throw the reptile into catalepsy, in which it is stiff as an iron rod.

A HONGKONG TYPHOON.

Doors and Windows Smashed In by the Fury of the Gale.

Boom! Boom! Boom! The signal had changed to the ominous red-green-red, and the three dynamite bombs were the warning that the typhoon was upon us. No need to hurry the servants now—every one was only too anxious to assist. The wind was tearing round the house, seemingly in all directions, but strongest from the north, and the noise of it was louder than thunder. One outside room, more exposed than the rest, seemed to be its especial butt. We stayed there for a moment to listen to the raging of the storm, but even the stoutest heart could not sleep in that pandemonium of sound. It was well shuttered and barred, but it was incredible that it stood in that tornado of wind. The doors creaked and groaned with the strain, and the windows clattered with a shriller note, while outside it seemed as though all the winds of all the ages were let loose for destruction. In the center of the house, though the noise was less, one could feel the building rocking on its foundations and hardly dared speculate how much the late heavy rains had weakened them. Every moment we expected the roof would go.

Crash! The upper part of an inner glass door had blown in. There was a stampede for that part of the house, for the wind must be kept out at all costs. Sofa cushions, sheets, blankets from the beds, all were requisitioned to stuff the broken panes. We had hardly finished before there was a terrific noise in the basement and such a shouting in Chinese that one could hear the boys above the din of the storm. It was the door of the cook's room which had burst its hinges and bolts, and once the wind had found an entry it made the most of its opportunity. Twenty-seven panes of glass clattered to the ground in the basement before they could get the door wedged back into place with great difficulty. But there was little time to think of the servants, for we had our own troubles upstairs.

The wind suddenly veered round until the full force seemed to be coming from the southwest, and the front of the house began to feel it. The hall door was straining on its hinges, and we had to improvise struts and pile heavy furniture behind it to help its resistance to the wind. Then a rush upstairs, for a bathroom window had crushed in and the door was straining. Every moment the wind was increasing in fury, but the roof held. Between 3 and 4 the typhoon was at its height, and it is impossible to describe the sense of helplessness one feels in such a wild raging of the elements. Sleep was out of the question until the wind abated toward morning, and we rested a little, a tired, sorry looking household, encamped in the safest part of the house.—Nan Peacock in Leslie's Weekly.

The Horological Revenge.

They were looking over their wedding presents. He pointed to a small bronze clock. "Seems to me," he said, "that I have seen that before."

"You have," she returned serenely. "You gave it to my first husband and me for a wedding present. When we divided the things after the divorce he kept the clock, and now he is sending it back to us."—New York Press.

A TRIPLE SURPRISE.

It Came With a Pleasant Outing In a New Auto Car.

A well known author, who for some years has been an enthusiastic admirer of the automobile, had an amusing experience, which she describes in the Bohemian. A new model always attracted her attention, she declares, and when she came out of the New York hotel where she was staying and saw a fine new car standing unoccupied by the curb she stopped to admire it:

While I examined it and gazed with envy a friend, also interested in autos, came down the steps and approached the machine.

"Isn't it stunning!" he said.

I agreed enthusiastically and added that the machine was tantalizing me, as I did so long to take a spin, that my chauffeur was ill and that I was afraid to run my car through the city.

"Why, I will take you," he said. "I haven't anything to do this afternoon. Where shall we go?"

We got in, and I suggested Coney. To make a long story short, the delightful ride gave us an appetite. We stopped for dinner and then went out to Sea Gate to call upon friends. As we were crossing the bridge on our way home at about 11 o'clock my friend inquired, "At what garage do you keep your machine?"

At the question a terrible possibility dawned upon me, and with the remembrance of a certain unfamiliarity that he had displayed at the first in regard to the running of the car the situation became instantly clear. He had thought that the machine was mine, and I had been equally secure in the belief that it was his. In other words, we had calmly gone off with some one else's property.

You may imagine our feelings. We felt confident that we would be arrested on our way uptown. We rolled up to the hotel inwardly quaking. After much inquiry and explaining we found the indignant owner. Fortunately he knew me slightly and had a well developed sense of humor, in spite of a rather forbidding expression as we first faced him with our unfortunate story. I think he believed us.

His parting remark, however, was rather puzzling, although he said it with evident cordiality:

"Whenever you'd like to use the machine again just let me know."

The Fleur-de-lis.

The origin and therefore the full heraldic meaning of the fleur-le-lis is disputed. By some the emblem is supposed to represent a lily, by others the iron head of some weapon, presumably a lance. From the claims put forth by English sovereigns to certain principalities in France, gained by inheritance or marriage, the French royal coat appeared as a quartering in the English royal arms, but it was abolished by George IV.

Taking Him Down.

"Yes, sir," said the pompous individual, "I always pay cash for everything I get." "Dear me!" exclaimed the matter of fact person. "What's the matter with your credit?"—Chicago News.

1809—The Year of Genius—1809

The Centenary of Edgar Allan Poe

Part Second—Poe's Description of Himself—His Love Affairs—Poe as Satirist—His Tragic End.

POE'S COTTAGE AT FORDHAM.

FOR many years the writer enjoyed more or less intimate acquaintance with surviving friends of Poe, including his champion, George R. Graham, owner of Graham's Magazine; John Sartain, the eminent engraver, of Sartain's Magazine, and Mrs. Nichols, the Mary Gove, who found Virginia so weak one day in what soon became her deathbed that she could not shake off the cat which was lying on her breast. This led to substantial aid being brought to the suffering family in the little cottage at Fordham.

From the recollections of these friends let us make a composite picture of Poe. As a young man he was of a singularly attractive appearance, though not strictly handsome; romantic of mien, with the pale cast of thought adding the unusual effect of pure intellectuality. His face was always pallid. The rather top heavy breadth of forehead lent an air of melancholy to the general placid expression he wore. Poe describes his nose as of "a delicate Hebrew model," but not strongly so. He continues: "An eye large, liquid, luminous; lips somewhat thin and very pallid, but of a beautiful curve; a finely molded chin, speaking in its want of prominence of a want of moral energy; hair (black) of a more than weblike softness and tenuity, left to grow all unheeded, so that it floated rather than fell about the face."

With a natural dignity of presence, deliberation of movement, a gracious smile, but only at the right moment, and a gentle, melodious voice, his entrance into any company was an impressive event. In conversation he was never a bore, but ever ready to give freely of his varied store if encouraged. He had the inherited taste for dramatic interpretation of genuine literature and was constantly delighting private and public audiences with readings or recitings of his own best liked poems. With all his austerity he was as jovial as the rest in the circles of good fellowship, sparkling with wit, humor, quip or satirical gibe.

We can understand the charm of such a combination of qualities. The poet, particularly when the aureole of fame crowns him king, is always in peril of being spoiled by adoration. So it was inevitable that Poe would always have a train of beauties, geniuses, well dowered maids, and matrons, waiting to do homage at his court. His very first charmer was a young wife whom he, in his teens, throbbing with the memories of romantic English heroines and scenes, silently worshiped as the only creature he could ever love. Of course she soon died, but never out of the ardent poet lover's soul. "Helen" (her earth name was Jane, which was too prosaic for him) hovered evermore in his pure sky, the star of his vacant heart, the inspiration of probably all his most exquisite poems.

After her came a succession of true and pure lovers of Poe the poet, women who, married or not, overflow with the affection of all compelling sympathy for congenial souls in torment. He was early married to the child Virginia, comely but uncultured daughter of a good woman, then in the crushing struggles with grimy poverty, to which the years steadily added consumption for the poor girl, cumulative miseries for the mother and corroding agonies of slow despair for the poet-victim of his outer forces. There was Sarah Royster, his first young flirt, who thirty years later in his last weeks of life was there, a wealthy widow, ready to marry and save him, but too late. That was love, and she wore widow's weeds for him. Mrs. Osgood, Mrs. Shew, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Whitman, most devoted of them all, also would have married him as his redeemer out of all the distresses of the two and three-quarter years between his wife's death and his. But what need of words seemingly apologetic for Poe's wealth of married women's loving friendship? The only saving mercies vouchsafed him were these blessed outpourings of pure sympathy, not the gushings of giddy butterflies, but the sisterly cheer of mature women, intellectual, good and pure. If ever a poor devotee of family affection and duty found his virtue a lifelong blunder, from the popular wordly wise point of view, it was Edgar Poe. If fate had not drifted him into that little household in his callow years, he might have had his choice of the queens of society in the north and in the south.

The little family moved from Richmond to New York in 1837 and to Philadelphia in 1838. Mrs. Clemm tells how he taught Virginia all she knew of books and accomplishments. The home was always the same, a simple cottage, plainly and scantily furnished, and a lodger to help pay the rent. The women had their hands full all the time. Poe kept a pet cat and an occasional bird to give a poetical finish to the sights and sounds of his "home, sweet home," which was also his workshop. Mrs. Clemm thus describes him:

Eddie was domestic in all his habits, seldom leaving home for an hour unless his darling Virginia or myself was with him. He was truly an affectionate, kind husband and a devoted son to me. He was impulsive, generous, affectionate and noble. His tastes were very simple and his admiration for all that was good and beautiful very great.

Poe became editor of the Gentleman's Magazine in Philadelphia and left it in a year to edit Graham's. He gained another $100 prize with his "Gold Bug." After four years of hard work on these lines he returned to edit the New York Mirror and in 1845 gained world fame—and $10—by "The Raven." At last, in this same year, he became editor of the Broadway Journal and owner of it in six months. In spite of his fame and brilliant labor it died in two months from weakness of the money chest.

Just when his "Literati" papers in Godey's Lady's Book had raised him to the pinnacle of popularity a line was inserted in the Evening Mirror by Thomas Dunn English, bitter rival of Poe in the rhyming business, whose literary fame rests on the melody which floated his song, "Oh, Don't You Remember Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?"

Poe won his suit, for a wonder, and, miracle of miracles, actually got a verdict of $225 damages and pocketed the cash!

Years ago the present writer while ransacking old magazines to unearth the miscellaneous prose contributed by Poe, chiefly his literary criticisms, turned up a cheaply printed booklet entitled "The Poets and Poetry of America, by Lavante," in the catalogue of the Astor library. As this was the title of the Rev. Rufus Griswold's compilation, prefaced by his toplofty distribution of laurels and damnation, which had stirred Poe to fierce sarcastic wrath and was also the title he chose for a lecture he gave first in the New York Historical society's library in February, 1845, and in other cities, I was curious to see it. It was a satire in the rhymed couplets now out of fashion. It satirized three and thirty of the poetical writers of the day. Their names were printed in capitals, and I was all excitement to see what it said of Poe, the one strong figure who towered head and shoulders above his would be rivals, who belittled when they did not hate and malign him. Poe was not among the thirty and three!

This startled me into recollecting that Poe liked and used fancy names. One was "Lenore." This satire was by "Lavante." The poem, 950 lines long, opened with a delicious burlesque of Griswold, self blown into a make believe god, reviewing and judging his inferiors, the thirty-three poets, as they humbly passed before him. This is surely the work of Poe, thought I. The treatment of the poets sounded remarkably like Poe's language in his magazine reviews and paragraphs. A thorough search, lasting some six or eight weeks, ended in the publication of a reprint of Lavante's poem, with references to parallel passages in Poe's prose, which no doubt formed the substance of his lecture, no reports of which could be found in the New York or Philadelphia papers. Anticipating the criticism or makeshift for it which the reviewers might rely on in their effort to deny Poe the gift of satirical power, I put on the title page his own dictum, "A satire is, of course, no poem." The little book was noticed in the usual slapdash way when the subject is painful and the finder of so remarkable a production is not "one of the boys." The New York Evening Post admitted that the claim was proved.

Nearly twenty years later the anonymous satire and Poe's parallel passages were republished, with other new material. A great daily helped itself to a half pageful of the original drawings of Poe's face; a monthly followed suit, and many papers gave good space to the book, but not one of our 330 poets and critics during all these years has ventured to disprove the facts or upset the argument based on them, which bears out the charge that Poe has as few friends and begrudged honors among his own people now as during his hampered life. I take it that, in proud defiance of the hostile press which suppressed his lecture, Poe rhymed and printed it in 1847, thinking that in this guise it would surely survive. But Griswold was his literary executor and destroyed many papers. There appear to be only three copies of the satire in existence. Two days after Poe died Griswold wrote this in the New York Tribune: "Edgar Allan Poe is dead. This announcement will startle many, but few will be grieved by it. * * * He was well known in all this country; he had readers in England and in several of the states of Europe, but he had few or no friends." These last words were printed in italics.

"The Gold Bug," the "Literati" papers and "The Raven" had capped his fame with a triple crown when in 1846 he took the humble frame house in the then rural suburb of Fordham. Poe was hailed as the bright particular star of the literary firmament. High society and the elect among the cultured of New York yearned to lionize him as the aristocracy of Edinburgh did Robert Burns, once lion of the tribe of Demos, but under the petting and pampering of his titled patrons soon dwindled to poodle size and tuned his bark to whine "a lord's a lord for a' that." Poe was no toady; he worshiped ideal creatures of his soaring imagination and tried to see the goddess in every woman who won his reverence. He shrank from conviviality of the boozy kind as from patronage that condescends. "My life," he writes to Lowell, "has been whim, impulse, passion (passion for beauty and for poetry which is its truest expression), a longing for solitude, a scorn of all things present." He consented to attend an occasional reception where, one writes, "he is the observed of all observers, and to hear him repeat 'The Raven,' which he does very quietly, is an event in one's life."

Mrs. Whitman, a poet herself of the Boston school and a woman of exceptional culture and position, describes Edgar Poe in society:

As a conversationalist I do not remember his equal. I have heard the veteran Walter Savage Landor (called the best talker in England) discuss with scathing sarcasm the popular writers of the day. * * * I have listened to the trenchant and vivid talk of the autocrat (Oliver Wendell Holmes), to the brilliant colloquial resources of John Neal and Margaret Fuller, to the serene wisdom of Alcott and treasured up memorable sentences from the golden lips of Emerson. Unlike the power of these was the earnest, opulent, unpremeditated speech of Edgar A. Poe. Like his writings, it presented a combination or quantities rarely met with in the same person—a cool, decisive judgment, a wholly unconventional courtesy and grace of manner and an imperious enthusiasm which brought all hearers within the circle of its influence.

Virginia died in January, 1847. Mrs. Clemm had now a heavier burden in her well loved Eddie's distressing maladies. All this fawning of lackadaisical dolls of society left the little family chin deep in the old poverty. While Poe was making fine poetry at home his brave mother-in-law was tramping the streets of New York in the frequently hopeless search for publishers, with hearts as soft as boiled paving stones, prepared to lavish ten whole dollars on pen work of imperishable art. Like the strong swimmer in his agony, we see him striking bravely through the rising wave that promises to bear him to the shore till another falls upon him with staggering force and downs him for a last maddening effort. If ever a valiant struggler slaved with brain and hand to earn modest happiness for only three lone souls, if ever mortal endured keener pang of a brain damaged from infancy or earlier and of the wearing, endless drip of sorrows from without, false friendships, starveling's wages, the rich man's aloofness and the slanders of the malicious and the thoughtless, that grim martyr was Edgar Poe.

POE RECITING "THE RAVEN."

Under this dread stress "he walked the streets in madness or melancholy (it is Griswold who tells what he had witnessed), with lips moving in indistinct curses or with eyes upturned in passionate prayers for their happiness who were at that moment the objects of his idolatry, or with a face shrouded in doom he would brave the wildest storms, and all night, with drenched garments and arms wildly beating the wind and rain, he would speak as if to spirits."

Mrs. Whitman, good soul and brave, would have risked her happy life to have saved his and prolonged it for the greater glory of the nation's literature, but the eleventh hour was passed. Tossed to and fro in his now irresponsible state, poor Poe was tricked into an unknown death, ignominious in its surface aspect, more than tragical as the slaying before its time of a genius that had stamina of its own to have rounded out a full life if fate had played fairly.

The story loving public will never let Poe die, nor the lovers of jeweled verse by an inimitable artificer, nor will the ever growing throng of trained intellects permit the coming generations of Americans to forget that in the sorely neglected, sad visaged figure of this master mind their country can properly boast of having added to the old world's Walhalla the shade of a genius born out of due season; doomed while here to walk shrouded in woe and maybe to share forever the limbo of the misunderstood!

If your Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. The Best Family Newspaper.

An ideal newspaper for the American home must be habitually clean and high-minded, it must offer something of interest to every member of the family, and it must present daily the news of the whole world in authentic and readable form. A large contract, you will say. Well, the newspaper that comes nearest to filling it in the West is THE CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD. Its moral tone is always high, its news service is unsurpassed, and probably no other paper in the United States has so brilliant an array of special features suited to the tastes and needs of every member of the family.

Business and professional men have long regarded THE RECORD-HERALD as the best paper for their own reading because of its unequaled faculty for getting all the news of the world and putting it into the briefest possible form for the busy man. They also esteem it for the reliability of its financial, agricultural and market reports. Young men perhaps find its greatest attraction in the excellent sporting department, which fills four entire pages on Sunday and a page or more on other days. Wives and mothers emphatically prefer THE RECORD HERALD on account of its well-conducted feminine departments—its daily fashion news and hints for home dressmaking, Mme. Qui Vive's pungent and sensible beauty talks, Marion Harland's famous page and the rest of the good things that make up the handsome Woman's Section in the Sunday paper. Children enjoy the Little Nemo and other Comic Section pictures, with the bright stories for boys and girls every Sunday. And all the family together can enjoy the interesting travels and special articles of William E. Curtis, Mr. Kiser's humor and verse, the serial stories and many similar features outside the news columns.

THE CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD has every right to call itself the best all-around family newspaper in the West.

HOW TO CURE SKIN DISEASES.

The germs and their poisons must be drawn to the surface of the skin and destroyed. Zemo will do this and cure any case of skin or scalp disease, no matter from what cause or of how long standing. Write for sample. E. W. Rose Med. Co., St. Louis, Mo. See photos of cures and window or show case display at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store.

CURES CATARRH

B. J. Pulver Will Furnish The Medicine Free In Every Case Where They Fail To Cure Catarrh.

Neglect or pessimism we believe is the greatest enemy the public have to contend with when applied to the loss or recovery of health. Practically every case of consumption might have been cured if hope had been maintained and proper treatment had been resorted to at the first symptom of the disease. Until the advanced stage is reached, consumption is curable. Catarrh is responsible, we believe, for every case of consumption. It is about Catarrh we want to talk to you today, incidentally consumption, since the two are so closely allied.

We have a medicine made from the prescription of one of the most successful catarrh specialists known. This medicine has a record of 98 per cent of cures, and we believe it is positively without an equal. We are so satisfied that we are right, that we will supply the medicine free in every instance where it is used according to directions for a reasonable length of time and fails to cure and give satisfaction in every particular. We want everyone in Tecumseh to try this medicine at our risk. There are no conditions or formality attached to our offer. We put the user under no obligation to us whatever.

The medicine we want you to try is Rexall Mucu-Tone. It is a catarrh remedy that goes direct to the seat of trouble. It is carried by the blood to every part of the system. It seeks out and destroys the germs or parasites which cause Catarrh. It purifies and enriches the blood, tones up the mucocells, soothes and heals the tissues that were ravaged by the catarrhal parasite, and brings about a condition of health and strength that prevents the germs of consumption from ever getting a start. Besides this, Rexall Muco-Tone is a wonderful appetizer, digestive aid and flesh builder. Its good effects are felt from the very first dose. It is one of the largest and most satisfactory selling medicines that we have ever had anything to do with. We know so much of the great good that it has done that we personally back it up with our reputation and money, which fact should be ample guarantee to satisfy anybody.

If our gubernatorial candidates could but remember one-fiftieth of the people "they are glad to meet" during the campaign, their minds would indeed be marvels.

A Horrible Hold-Up.

"About ten years ago my brother was "held up" in his work, health and happiness by what was believed to be hopeless Consumption," writes W. R. Lipscomb of Washington, D. C. "He took all kinds of remedies and treatment from several doctors, but found no help till he used Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles. He is a well man today." It's quick to relieve and the surest cure for weak or sore lungs, Hemorrhages, Coughs and Colds, Bronchitis, LaGrippe, Asthma and all Bronchial affections. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son's drug store.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.

If it's painful periods with women, same cause.

If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

PETITION

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States.

Being Circulated by Mrs. P. B. Hardy, Asking for Amendment to National Constitution to Enable Women to Vote.

230 signers have already been secured.

Mrs. P. B. Hardy has been circulating a petition during the past week to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, which reads as follows:

We, the undersigned citizens of the United States, over 21 years of age, hereby petition your Honorable body to submit to the Legislatures of the several states for ratification, an amendment to the National Constitution which shall enable women to vote.

Mrs. Hardy secured 230 signers out of 249 people whom she asked, only 14 refusing to sign, and only one of that number being a woman. Two people will consider the question and three were indifferent.

Mrs. Hardy still has a few blank petitions and any one wishing to sign can do so by calling on her.

TIME IN TURKEY.

The Hours Are Always Changing and Holidays Are Numerous.

In addition to laziness in Turkey there is inaccuracy. The Turkish official is naturally inaccurate, and habit and conceit make him more so. This perhaps is due to the way in which Turkey measures time. Twelve o'clock in the day corresponds with sunset—that is to say, whatever hour the sun sets, it must always be 12. Consequently the hours change always, getting later the first half of the year and earlier in the last, which compels everybody to put his watch to daily torture. So no one in Turkey can flatter himself that he has the exact time. The most strict of Englishmen soon loses his national punctuality, so when two Turks make an appointment it is within the limit of half an hour or an hour, and even then they don't generally arrive till after the time agreed on, each one calculating on the utmost possible delay on the part of the other.

Consequently the state employees are not bound down by very severe discipline. No one expects them to arrive at their office at any particular time, especially as the majority of them go hardly at all. As for the most industrious, they appear for two or three hours in the afternoon only, and rather late. In the morning state offices are usually closed. Besides this workdays are rather scarce for the race of officials. Friday is the Sabbath of the Mohammedans. Saturday is the day after a feast day, and one does not do much then. Sunday the Greeks and Armenians remain, like good Christians, at home, and the Mohammedans generally imitate so good an example. Monday is again the morrow of a feast day. Wednesday there is a meeting of the council of ministers, and few employees go then to the ministry. With religious festivals added in, it is easy to understand that out of the 365 days of the year there are not many left to consecrate to the interests of the Ottoman empire.—Nicholas C. Adossides in American Magazine.

Siam's Weights and Measures.

In Siam the liquid measure used is derived from a cocoanut shell which is capable of holding 830 tamarind seeds, and twenty of these units equal the capacity of a wooden bucket. In dry measure 830 tamarind seeds make one "k'anahn," and twenty-five "k'anahn" make one "sat," or bamboo basket; eighty "sat" make one "kwien," or cart. This is an example of the primitive origin of most units of weight and measures.

President Helps Orphans.

Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of the Industrial and Orphan's Home at Macon, Ga., who writes: "We have used Electric Bitters in this Institution for nine years. It has proved a most excellent medicine for Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. We regard it as one of the best family medicines on earth." It invigorates the vital organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion, creates appetite. To strengthen and build up thin, pale, weak children or run-down people it has no equal. Best for female complaints. Only 50c at C. A. Wright & Son, the druggist.

DYSPEPSIA IN TECUMSEH

Many Are Being Cured by Mi-o-na, the Guaranteed Remedy.

"I have had a severe trouble from bowel and stomach complaint. Procuring Mi-o-na, I used it a few weeks and with good success. Since using this remedy I have not been obliged to use a cathartic, and the stomach and bowels work normally. Mi-o-na has my endorsement." C. E. Williamson, Killbuck st., Tecumseh, Mich., Oct. 15, 1908.

If reports are authentic, people of Tecumseh, who suffer from dyspepsia and other stomach troubles are getting tired of taking preparations containing pepsin, because pepsin simply digests the food artificially. Pepsin relieves, it never cures—the principle is wrong, the cart is before the horse.

And remember, pepsin only digests animal food; it has no effect on starchy food, such as potatoes, rice, oatmeal, bread, etc.

There is just one way to cure dyspepsia and stomach disorders, trivial or serious, and that is to tone up and put energy into the stomach walls, so that they will be able to properly mix the food with the natural digestive juices of the stomach.

That is just what Mi-o-na tablets do. They quickly arouse the stomach from its inaction, and in a few days it is able to do its work easily and without exertion.

Mi-o-na only costs 50 cents a large box, and is guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son to cure dyspepsia, sea or car sickness, vomiting of pregnancy, and stomach sickness resulting from over-indulgence of the night before, or money back.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First — Don't Delay — Second — Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache, headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Tecumseh residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Tecumseh citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

'John B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For several years I suffered a great deal from rheumatism and backache. My kidneys were badly disordered and I knew that they caused all my trouble. About two years ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time I was relieved. I have had no serious attacks of the trouble since. Shortly after using Doan's Kidney Pills I told of my experience through the local papers and at this time I am glad to verify that statement and again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

EDWIN FORREST.

The Great Tragedian's Acting Was Saturated With Realism.

Edwin Forrest, says William Winter in "Other Days," was an uncommonly massive and pulsant animal, and all of his impersonations were more physical than intellectual, while no one of them possessed any spiritual element whatever.

From the first and until the last his acting was saturated with "realism," and that was one reason of his extensive popularity. He could at all times be seen, heard and understood. He struck with a sledge hammer. Not even nerves of gutta percha could remain unshaken by his blow. In the manifestation of terror he lolled out his tongue, contorted his visage, made his frame quiver and used the trick sword with the rattling hilt. In scenes of fury he panted, snorted and snarled like a wild beast. In death scenes his gasps and gurgles were protracted and painfully literal. The bellow that he emitted when, as Richelieu, he threatened to launch the ecclesiastical curse almost made the theater walls tremble. The snarling yell of ferocity that burst from him when, as Jack Cade, he recognized and sprang upon Lord Say in the forest fairly frightened his hearers. His utterance of Lear's delirious prayer to nature was like a thunderstorm. Often he produced amazingly consolatory effects, affording ample gratification to the overstrained feeling of his audience, desirous—as in stormy passages of "King Lear" and "Othello," the forum scene of "Virginius," the statue scene of "Brutus" and the scaffold scene of "Damon and Pythias"—that something tempestuous and terrific should be said and done. There are times when it is a comfort to see somebody who can let himself go. Forrest could. His style accordingly had its positive, ample, undeniable merits, but neither he nor his apostles were ever satisfied with acknowledgment of those merits at their actual worth.

A CASE OF CONSCIENCE.

The Powerful Motive That Moved the Commercial Traveler.

"No, I'm not whistling and singing because business is good," replied the hardware drummer. "What ails me is because I have a clear conscience for the first time in three years."

"Have you confessed to murder?" was asked.

"Gentlemen, don't try to be funny. This is a sacred thing. I was in Boston three years ago, and I picked up a package on the street. On opening it I found seventy-five $1,000 bills. The name of the loser was there, but I took that money and got out of town by the first train. My conscience told me that I was as bad as a thief, but I tried to stifle it."

"A drummer with a conscience!" sneered three of the listeners in chorus.

"I went to Chicago with the money," continued the drummer, "and invested it in real estate. I knew it was wrong, but I did it. Six months ago I found myself worth $200,000. Conscience would not down. It got so bad that I couldn't look even a confidence man in the face. At length I started for Boston and hunted up the loser of the wealth. I found him in his office and told my story. When it was finished I laid my all before him and asked his forgiveness."

"And what did he do?"

"I will tell you what he did, and I shall never forget it. He looked at me and saw how I was suffering, and he took me by the hand and said in a fatherly way:

"'My friend, suffer no more. I was going to a poker game when I lost that money, and it would have gone anyhow.'"

"But what in thunder are you doing on the road if you are worth $200,000?" shouted a voice.

"Conscience again, gentlemen—conscience. It won't let me retire and leave you fellows to do all the lying!" —Cincinnati Enquirer.

STRENGTH OF AN EAGLE.

Wonderful Power in the Bird's Claws and Legs.

While I cannot give any positive proof of how much a bald eagle can carry, I should suppose, declares a writer in Forest and Stream, that he could carry at least as much in proportion to his weight as a hawk or a horned owl. I have the recorded weight of a male bald eagle weighing nine and a quarter pounds and a female weighing twelve pounds.

A horned owl will weigh from four to five pounds, and I have several times known one to carry off a large house cat. One cat was very large, and the owner told me he could hear the cat cry as he was being carried off. Now, any one who will weigh a large house cat will find it to weigh at least ten pounds.

I have seen a goshawk carry off a hen fully twice its own weight, and I have taken from a marsh hawk a very large chicken which would weigh more than twice what the hawk would. The marsh hawk is one of our weakest hawks, but he had carried this chicken over a quarter of a mile. My belief is that if a hawk or horned owl can carry more than twice its weight (and I know positively that they can) then an eagle could, if occasion required, do as much in proportion to his weight, which would be to carry eighteen or twenty pounds.

Once when an eagle, shot through the body with a rifle ball, lay on his back I up ended a long road skid and dropped it on him. Before it reached him he stretched up and caught it in his claws and held it the length of his legs above him. I walked up on the skid and stood above him, and he easily held me and the skid, which I should judge would weigh more than twenty pounds. I took pains to be weighed the same day and weighed 119 pounds. Put a stick in the claw of a wounded eagle and let him grasp a small tree with the other, and a man must be stronger than I ever was to take the stick from him.

Power of Habit Strong.

"The habit of looking under the bed for burglars," the young woman said, "is something that folks laugh at, but I have never been able to get myself out of it. I never feel perfectly comfortable unless I look, no matter where I happen to be. To my mind there isn't any place except a safe deposit vault burglars are unlikely to be. In fact, the habit is so strongly ingrained in me that one night when I was staying in a small country hotel, where there was nothing but a folding bed in the room, I took it down and then looked under it before I got into bed. That's a fact. I laughed at myself the minute after."—Detroit Free Press

London in White.

After a few visits to the White City one feels rather desirous of whitewashing the whole of London. Why not? White is an admirable background for color. Our blue sky becomes bluer and our gray sky looks more beautiful behind it, while a golden sky makes white buildings delightful. If we could only make the whole city white, to begin with, and then gradually and sparingly color, what a beautiful city London would be!—British Architect.

A Mild Laxative For Baby's Bowels

Doctor Points Out Dangers of Pills and Cathartics

"Salts, purgatives, and violent cathartics are dangerous when given babies, children or delicate women," says a well known doctor. "Neither should they be given medicines containing narcotics for stomach or bowel troubles."

It would be well for mothers to heed this warning and keep on hand a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for baby and herself and for any member of the family that has need of a laxative or a stomach remedy. It is safe and pleasant to take and has cured old people of chronic constipation and dyspepsia of many years' standing, and yet is harmless for a baby as many a happy mother can testify. It brings natural daily movements, sweetens the stomach, aids digestion and stimulates the torpid liver to proper action. The children like it. Lafe Weathers, the popular hotel man in Indianapolis, says: "The children like it, we all use it and would not be without it in the house." Mrs. Mattie Cypnich, Tiptonville, Tenn., cured her 8 months' old baby of indigestion with it. Mrs. Almon Willis, Jamaica, Vt., says it saved her baby's life. Mrs. A. B. Cunningham, Fresno, Calif., says she can't keep house without it. It cured her little son of rheumatism and stomach trouble.

Mrs. Flora Hebrew, Bow Creek, Kan., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured my little girl of constipation. I cannot recommend your splendid remedy too highly for children."

Mrs. Mary B. Young, Burlington, Ia., writes: "I cheerfully recommend it to mothers as the best laxative for children."

Mrs. Alice Miller, Canal Dover, Ohio, has used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin with splendid results as a laxative for children.

All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 501 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill., will send a free sample to any one who has never used it and will give it a fair trial.

A QUEER WOOING.

Whistler's Offhand Wedding and the Bride's Scant Trousseau.

Labouchere's claim that he brought about the marriage of Whistler is thus recorded in the "Life of Whistler:"

I believe I am responsible for Whistler's marriage to the widow of Mr. Godwin, the architect. She was a remarkably pretty woman and very agreeable, and both she and he were thorough bohemians. I was dining with them and some others one evening at Earl's Court. They were obviously greatly attracted to each other, and in a vague sort of way they thought of marrying. So I took the matter in hand to bring things to a practical point.

"Jimmy," I said, "will you marry Mrs. Godwin?"

"Certainly," he replied.

"Mrs. Godwin," I said, "will you marry Jimmy?"

"Certainly," she replied.

"When?" I asked.

"Oh, some day," said Whistler.

"That won't do," I said. "We must have a date."

So they both agreed that I should choose the day, what church to come to for the ceremony, provide the clergyman and give the bride away. I fixed an early date and got the then chaplain of the house of commons, the Rev. Mr. Byng, to perform the ceremony.

It took place a few days later.

After the ceremony was over we adjourned to Whistler's studio, where we had prepared a banquet. The banquet was on the table, but there were no chairs. So we sat on packing cases. The happy pair when I left had not quite decided whether they would go that evening to Paris or remain in the studio.

How unpractical they were was shown when I happened to meet the bride the day before the marriage in the street.

"Don't forget tomorrow," I said.

"No," she replied; "I am just going to get my trousseau."

"A little late for that, is it not?" I asked.

"No," she answered, "for I am only going to buy a new toothbrush and a new sponge, as one ought to have new ones when one marries."

DON'T FIGHT THE WEATHER.

Try the Plan of Being on Friendly Terms With It.

What a great misfortune this is, the habit of considering the weather—of thinking that we must consider the weather! It is largely due, is it not, to clothes? No mention is made of rain in the garden of Eden, but we must not therefore contend that rain was disagreeable and omitted. We must recollect that Adam and Eve did not need to consider rain. Furthermore, in blessed ignorance they did not know that it was anything to be considered.

To mind the rain no more than the May sunshine, but to plunge into it and let the drops pelt as they will, to accept snow without a thought of discomfort, but, rather, to enjoy the thronging presence of it; to pursue one's daily stint regardless of whether the sky be dun or blue—this is a state which we, especially of the cities, long, long have lost.

We regain it, some of us, in the wilderness camp, where we hunt or fish if the day be dark or if the day be bright, and where we find that the dash of the soft rain on one's face is not death, after all; that wetness and dryness are merely relative terms.

All the centuries of fussing and fuming with the weather have not affected the weather one particle. It still rains and snows and sleets and blows, just as dictated by circumstances. Therefore, what's the use? Are your puny diatribes or mine of any greater potency than those of others gone before? Evidently not. Accordingly try the plan of being friendly with the weather, of agreeing with it instead of fighting it, and, 'pon my word, presently it will be agreeing with you.—E. L. Sabin in Lippincott's.

If you will take Foley's Orino Laxative until the bowels become regular you will not have to take purgatives constantly, as Foley's Orina Laxative positively cures chronic constipation and sluggish liver. Pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

A BASEBALL WONDER.

"Old Hoss" Radbourne, Greatest of All Pitchers.

THE HERCULES OF THE GAME

His Marvelous Feat of Pluck, Strength and Endurance That Won the Pennant For Providence in 1884—A Record In Games Won.

Pitchers may come and pitchers may go, but the name of "Old Hoss" Radbourne goes on forever. I have talked to many great ball players who have lamented to me the fact that baseball fame is so ephemeral that it was not worth the gaining, and, while no doubt this is in a great measure true, there is one pitcher who has left a name that promises to roll on for many, many years.

Each year hundreds of pitchers claim attention of the world, and each year they are promptly forgotten. But Illinois produced a man who, although now years deceased, has a brighter name than any of the great multitude.

In the great campaign of 1884, when the Providence club, then a member of the National league, was fighting a bitter game with Philadelphia, a catastrophe occurred that seemingly would disrupt its chances of winning the pennant. A player named Sweeney, who was pitching, was ordered to go into right field to change places with "Cyclone" Miller. At that time it was not permissible to take a pitcher out of the game. Whereupon Sweeney promptly walked out of the game, leaving the team with only eight men and with one pitcher, Charles Radbourne.

Two men tried to cover the field, with the result that Providence was completely snowed under. A meeting of the directors was held to decide whether or not the club should be disbanded. Certainly a professional team was never in a sorrier plight.

Radbourne was approached and the proposition put to him. "I can win it all right," said he quietly and in a matter of fact tone.

And then followed the most remarkable battle for a pennant that the world has ever seen. Radbourne established a record that has never been equaled, one that will live when more expensive contests will have been blissfully forgotten. Of twenty-seven consecutive games Radbourne won twenty-six. In four games with Boston he had three shutouts, only one run was scored and only seventeen hits were made. This defeat was suffered at the hands of Buffalo by a score of 2 to 0, and even then only five hits were made off him, showing that the defeat was not due to poor pitching. Needless to say, Providence won the pennant, or, rather, Radbourne won the pennant.

But the great player had to pay the price. No arm could stand the awful strain without great agony. Morning after morning when Radbourne arose he could not lift his arm as high as his waist. He had to brush his hair with his left hand. But he did not give up the game. He would slip out to the park about two hours before the rest of the team put in an appearance and would begin the excruciating process of limbering up. He would pitch the ball only a few feet when he would first go out, but he would keep on trying time after time, rubbing his arm with his left hand. Sometimes his face would be drawn up into contortions, but never a word of complaint left his lips.

Half an hour before the game was to begin the players would slip out to see how "Old Hoss" was getting along. They would sit silently on the bench, waiting for his arm to get into condition. When he was able to throw from second to home base a rousing cheer would go up, for they knew that meant the winning of the game for them.

Radbourne claimed for his home Bloomington, Ill. After his great season with Providence managers all over the country were upon his heels. Flattering offers poured in, and he was not under contract with Providence for the next season either. When the contest was over the late Ned Allen, president of the team that season, sent for Radbourne. He laid the release before him and close beside it a blank contract. Radbourne looked at them both for several minutes and then slowly took up a pen and filled the blank out for a sum only $2,000 higher than he had been getting and tore up the release. Allen almost fell on his neck and wept for joy.

Radbourne's last year in baseball was with Cincinnati in 1891, but it was a sad year. It seems a pity that the career of so great a ball player should end so sadly. That year his work showed great deterioration, for the awful strain made in 1884 was beginning to tell on his arm. At the end of the season he was too proud to go into minor league baseball and so entirely withdrew from the game. He returned to Bloomington, where he opened a billiard hall. He had little to say and in unwinking silence would sit in a corner and watch the young men laugh as they played. He would talk about himself only when cornered, and then but for a few short words. He had always been an ardent fisherman, hunter and sportsman, but he gave up the open life. Each year his taciturnity increased until he became almost sullen.

After a time he gave up his billiard hall and retired into the obscurity of his home, seldom letting people see him. At last, in 1897, he fell ill and soon passed away. — Portland Oregonian.

"Had dyspepsia or indigestion for years. No appetite, and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me."—J. H. Walker, Sunbury, Ohio.

To save your faith from formalism translate every article into an act.

If your Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Highways of happiness are never out through with pain and tears.

It requires a proper combination of certain acids with natural digestive juices to perfect a dyspepsia cure. And that is what Kodol is—a perfect digester that digests all the food you eat. If you eat. If you will take Kodol for a little while you will no longer have indigestion. You then couldn't have indigestion. How could you have indigestion if your food were to digest? Kodol digests all you eat. It is pleasant to take, acts promptly. Sold by all druggists.

There is a world of difference between willing a deed and simply being willing to do.

A Religious Author's Statement.

For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and last winter I was suddenly stricken with a severe pain in my kidneys and was confined to bed eight days unable to get up without assistance. My urine contained a thick white sediment and I passed same frequently day and night. I commenced taking Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the pain gradually abated and finally ceased and my urine became normal. I cheerfully recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy. Sold by all druggists.

No religion has much power over us that does not make some great appeal to us.

Don't let the baby suffer from eczema, sores or any itching of the skin. Doan's Ointment gives instant relief, cures quickly. Perfectly safe for children. All druggists sell it.

It's just as easy for a woman to tell her husband what to do as it is for him not to do it.

This is just the time of the year when you are most likely to contract a severe cold, and you should always have Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup handy, especially for the children. It tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. It cures the cold by gently moving the bowels through its laxative principle, and at the same time it is soothing for throat irritation, thereby stopping the cough. Sold by all druggists.

A man's anxiety to marry begins to shrink when he discovers that the woman of his choice is willing.

Many little lives have been saved by Foley's Honey and Tar, for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. It is the only safe remedy for infants and children as it contains no opiates or other narcotic drugs, and children like Foley's Honey and Tar. Careful mothers keep a bottle in the house. Refuse substitutes. Sold by all druggists.

If physicians did not magnify the little ills of their patients they would lose about half of their practice.

For health and happiness—DeWitt's Little Early Risers—small, gentle, easy, pleasant little liver pills, the best made. Sold by all druggists.

If you think the rents are too high in your neighborhood hire an amateur cornet player to move in.

Croup positively stopped in 20 minutes, with Dr. Shoop's Croup Remedy. One test alone will surely prove this truth. No vomiting, no distress. A safe and pleasing syrup—50c. Sold by all dealers.

When the voice is calling us to the great beyond, there will still be many things left undone.

Meyers of Milan, has brought suit for divorce against her husband, Doc. C. Meyers.

She also asked for an injunction restraining her husband from selling or disposing of the property and this has been granted by Judge Kinne of Ann Arbor.

The couple were married in Adrian, November 7, 1905, and lived together until January first of this year, when the wife alleges that he struck her, threw her onto the floor and otherwise mistreated her. She asks for a decree on the grounds of extreme cruelty.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

Vassar College Alumnae Entertained at Hotel Astor New York City Saturday, Jan. 9th.

WE CLIP THE FOLLOWING ITEM FROM THE NEW YORK TIMES OF JANUARY 10.

Concerning programme of Vassar college alumnae in which Miss Helen Anderson took part.

The "Old College Afternoon," given yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Astor for the benefit of the Vassar Student Aid Society, drew a large audience of alumnae.

No one would have been more surprised than old Matthew Vassar himself, could he have attended, to discover some of the things apparently now a part of college education, such as whistling, monologues, play writing and songs.

The programme was cosmopolitan, indeed, containing everything from a clever whistling of Fritzi Scheff's Drum Song" by Miss Helen E. Anderson, to an original play, a study of present day conditions in Japan, written by Mrs. Ethelyn Emery Keays of the class of '95.

VERDICT

Of $125 Given to John Pentecost of Tecumseh.

Sued L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co. for damages amounting to $5,000.

Another railroad case has been finished. That of John H. Pentecost of Tecumseh vs. the L. S. & M. S. Attorneys Smith, Baldwin & Alexander represented the plaintiff and H. R. Clark the railroad company. Mr. Pentecost claimed he had his farm at Pentecost near Sand lake, well drained with open drains and tile and had an adequate and suitable outlet for such drainage into and through what is known in the case as the Geddes lake drain; that the defendant filled in a trestle where the Geddes lake drain ran and filled up said drain; that the weight and heft of this pike pushed the land each side of it away or up so that it was elevated and that the Geddes lake drain was not only filled in and stopped up but thrown up so that it did not afford an outlet for plaintiff's drainage and that his drainage had been destroyed or injured for the want of such outlet; and that he had no adequate outlet and had no way to get back this outlet or get any other outlet; that by reason of this he has lost two years of crops in whole or in part upon portions of his lands, for which he wanted to recover. He also claimed the selling price of his lands has been lessened by reason of this loss of his outlet and the injury to his outlet and the injury to his drainage system and also that the rental value of his premises has been lowered by reason thereof.

The defendant claimed that the filling in of the trestle had not affected the plaintiff's drainage, and that if it had, that he could only recover for the crops from the time the drain had been filled in till the filing of his bill against the railroad. The arguments were heard yesterday, and the case went to the jury early this morning. About noon the jury came in and announced their verdict as being damages for the plaintiff to the extent of $125. Mr. Pentecost sued the railroad for damages amounting to $5,000.

SETTLED

Phyllis Bowen of Clinton Sued Township of Tecumseh for $1,000 Through her Attorney, A. J. Watters of Manchester.

ATTY. WOOD FOR THE TOWNSHIP AFFECTED A SETTLEMENT FOR $300.00.

Miss Bowen was thrown from her carriage and injured, when her horse stumbled through a pile of gravel.

At the last meeting but one of the Township Board, attended by the Highway Commissioner, it was unanimously decided that the Township Attorney should be authorized to attempt a settlement of the case brought by Miss Phyllis Bowen of Clinton, in the Circuit Court against the Township, provided such settlement could be brought about for not exceeding three hundred dollars.

At the last meeting of the Board, Mr. Wood reported that he had been able that day to effect a settlement for three hundred dollars, this was acted upon at once and the settlement was finally consummated on Saturday of last week.

Last May the Highway Commissioner with his employees was gravelling the road near the residence of Mr. Waldron, north of the village. Just after the Commissioner and others had left at quitting time, one of the men who was drawing gravel with one of the teams, dumped his load and left it without its being spread. That evening a Clinton rig, in which Miss Bowen was a passenger, drove into this pile of gravel and the horse stumbled and fell. Miss Bowen was thrown out and suffered a serious fracture of a limb, being laid up for a number of weeks in consequence, with the necessary expense, suffering and loss of employment, and it is claimed is still lame.

Suit was brought for her by Mr. Watters of Manchester, her attorney, last August. Had the case gone to trial, there was great danger that the jury would have rendered a verdict for a number of hundred dollars, probably five hundred dollars at least, which would have also cost the Township in addition to the judgment. Miss Bowen's taxable costs and all the expense to which the Township had been put in its defense.

The gravel having been left as it was by one of its own employees, the Township was without any defense, except to attempt to keep the amount of damage as low as possible.

The amount of the settlement was fair to Miss Bowen, considering that it was an immediate payment without further delay and expense of litigation, and it was a settlement that the Township Officers can congratulate themselves upon, for the general run of jurys in such cases consider the defendant corporation abundantly able, and are exceedingly liberal in their estimate of damages, especially to a woman, lame at that

WHEEZER OR SNEEZER?

Have You Heard of Hyomei for Catarrh Asthma and Hay Fever?

If you wheeze or sneeze, hawk or spit, snuffle or blow, something is the matter with the membrane of your respiratory tract, and you need Hyomei.

And you need Hyomei because it will cure you of any catarrhal or inflammatory condition that exists.

It isn't a stomach medicine, or spray, or douche, but a very pleasant, healing, antiseptic balsam from the eucalyptus forests of Australia. You breathe this balsamic air through a small, hard rubber inhaler, and it reaches every nook, corner and crevice of the membrane, and promptly kills the catarrh germs.

C. A. Wright & Son will sell you a complete Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) outfit for $1.00, on the money back plan.

"The use of Hyomei cured Mr. Cutler of catarrh in 1904. He has strongly endorsed the use of Hyomei in many instances, and we are glad to go on record regarding this marvelous catarrh cure, and endorse it."—Mrs. A. Cutler, 201 Post Ave., Battle Creek, Mich.

HAD QUIT WORK
READY TO GIVE UP IN DESPAIR
Restored to Health By Vinol

"I was sick, run-down and finally had to give up work. After trying a number of remedies and several physicians, I was just about ready to give up in despair. I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and it has done more good for me than all other means combined. It has built me up and restored my strength until I now feel twenty years younger, and am able to attend to my work again as usual." Job Jeavons, 1036 Lind street, Wheeling, W. Va.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it contains tonic iron and all of the strengthening blood-making and body-building elements of cod liver oil, but no oil.

Vinol is unexcelled as a strength creator for old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, and after sickness—and is the best known remedy for coughs, colds and bronchitis.

We return your money if Vinol fails to give satisfaction.

VINOL is sold in Tecumseh by C. A. Wright & Son, Druggists.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First — Don't Delay — Second — Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Tecumseh residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Tecumseh citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

John B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For several years I suffered a great deal from rheumatism and backache. My kidneys were badly disordered and I knew that they caused all my trouble. About two years ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time I was relieved. I have had no serious attacks of the trouble since. Shortly after using Doan's Kidney Pills I told of my experience through the local papers and at this time I am glad to verify that statement and again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

THE BLUE MOSQUE.

If Ever Color Calls, It Calls in the Mosque of Ibrahim Aga.

As every one who visits Rome goes to St. Peter's, so every one who visits Cairo goes to the mosque of Mohammed Ali in the citadel, a gorgeous building in a magnificent situation, the interior of which always makes me think of court functions and of the pomp of life rather than of prayer and self denial. More attractive to me is the "blue mosque," to which I returned again and again, enticed almost as by the fascination of the living blue of a summer sky.

This mosque, which is the mosque of Ibrahim Aga, but which is familiarly known to its lovers as the "blue mosque," lies to the left of a ramshackle street and from the outside does not look specially inviting. Even when I passed through its door and stood in the court beyond at first I felt not its charm. All looked old and rough, unkempt and in confusion. The red and white stripes of the walls and the arches of the arcade, the mean little place for ablution—a pipe and a row of brass taps—led the mind from a Neapolitan ice to a second rate school, and for a moment I thought of abruptly retiring and seeking more splendid precincts. And then I looked across the court to the arcade that lay beyond, and I saw the exquisite "love color" of the marvelous tiles that give this mosque its name.

The huge pillars of this arcade are striped and ugly, but between them shone with an ineffable luster a wall of purple and blue, of purple and blue so strong and yet so delicate that it held the eyes and drew the body forward. If ever color calls, it calls in the "blue mosque" of Ibrahim Aga. And when I had crossed the court, when I stood beside the pulpit, with its delicious wooden folding doors, and studied the tiles of which this wonderful wall is composed, I found them as lovely near as they are lovely far off. From a distance they resemble a nature effect, are almost like a bit of southern sea or of sky, a fragment of gleaming Mediterranean seen through the pillars of a loggia or of Sicilian blue watching over Etna in the long summer days.

When one is close to them they are a miracle of art. The background of them is a milky white upon which is an elaborate pattern of purple and blue, generally conventional and representative of no known object, but occasionally showing tall trees somewhat resembling cypresses. But it is impossible in words adequately to describe the effect of these tiles and of the tiles that line to the very roof the tomb house on the right of the court. They are like a cry of ecstasy going up in this otherwise not very beautiful mosque. They make it unforgettable; they draw you back to it again and yet again. On the darkest day of winter they set something of summer there. In the saddest moment they proclaim the fact that there is joy in the world; that there was joy in the hearts of creative artists years upon years ago. If you are ever in Cairo and sink into depression, go to the "blue mosque" and see if it does not have upon you an uplifting moral effect. And then, if you like, go on from it to the Gamia el Movayad, sometimes called El Ahmar (the red), where you will find greater glories, though no greater fascination, for the tiles hold their own among all the wonders of Cairo.—Robert Hichens in Century.

Her Latest Luxury.

"Young man," said the heavy father, "do you understand the style in which my daughter has been accustomed to live? She has always had every luxury she wanted." "And now I'm the luxury she wants," murmured the suitor.—London Globe.

Time's Changes.

"Before we were married you said you'd lay down your life for me;" she sobbed.

"I know it," he returned solemnly, "but this confounded flat is so tiny there's no place to lay anything down."—Harper's Bazar.

Ther is no case on record of a cough, cold or la grippe developing into pneumonia after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it cures the most obstinate deep seated coughs and colds. Why take anything else. Sold by all druggists.

THE HEADLESS COACH

A Warning Phantom That Roams the County Cork.

QUEER IRISH SUPERSTITIONS.

One Dreaded Apparition Is the Fairy Horse, Whose Mission Is One of Malice—The Lure of the Poukeen and the Song of the Fir-Darrig.

No wonder strange superstitions linger in the scattered hamlets by the sea or in the lonely cabins on the rocky islands round the iron coast, for on winter nights when the mighty surges break thundering against the towering cliffs and the storm wind wails weirdly through the hollow caverns and ivied ruins, where the deserted fortresses of the powerful chieftains of bygone days look down on the foaming waves and the cry of the gulls and curlew echoes over rock shores and across wide loughs and estuaries, one might well fancy that the sounds were the voice of giants or wizards doomed for their sins to wander forever round this coast, the mournful wail of the "banshee" or of "the White Lady of the Cliffs"—a famous Munster apparition.

Women and children, crouching over the fire of driftwood, peat or furze branches flaming fitfully on the open hearth, cross themselves as a louder wail rings through the darkness or a rumbling sound is heard that to their ears seems to be the rolling of the wheels of "the headless coach" or "death coach," so called in the County Cork because horses and driver are supposed to be headless. The coachman is the dullahan—that is, a dark or sullen person, a goblin of most malignant disposition.

This phantom is said to "follow" many old Munster families, the vehicle lumbering heavily up the avenue and stopping at the front door whenever a death is about to occur in the house. I know numbers of persons—and not by any means merely uneducated peasants—who are persuaded that they have heard the rumbling of the headless coach. Needless to say, the noise of a heavy cart at night along an unfrequented road is sufficient to terrify superstitious people into believing that they have heard the death coach. They take good care not to see it!

Another much dreaded apparition is the phooka, or fairy horse, a very malicious spirit that is said to appear in the shape of a beautiful coal black steed with fire darting from his eyes and nostrils.

Occasionally he adopts the form of a black bull or goat, and sometimes he appears as an awful compound of several black animals—horse, bull, goat and ram. In his equine form he is said to amuse himself by enticing solitary travelers whom he meets after dark into mounting him, and as he invariably looks like a "nate cut of a horse," such as every Irishman appreciates, he is said to succeed very frequently in his nefarious plan.

The instant the rider is on his back the elfin steed dashes off madly through stream, lake and bog hole, thicket and coppice, hedge and ditch, marsh and ravine, till the terrified mortal, drenched, torn and bruised, shrieks for mercy or perhaps remembers to gasp out a prayer, when with a furious bound the phooka flings him off, preferably into a muddy pool or a furze brake, and darts away, leaving the unhappy rider to pick himself up, invariably finding that he is miles out of his way.

Sudden falls are attributed to this malignant sprite, and many a man who has lost his way or met with an accident coming home from fair or funeral on a dark night is convinced for the rest of his days that he has been led astray by the phooka, although his troubles were possibly due to a yet more potent spirit. Dangerous rocks and crags are often called "carrig-na-phooka" (rock of the phooka), just as deep pools or holes in a river or bog are "poul-na-phooka." A beautiful waterfall in Wicklow bears this name.

The "poukeen," as he is sometimes called, is also said to adopt the form of a great black bird or a bat. The latter is greatly feared by the country folks. In the bat form he is supposed to lure people into climbing ivied walls and towers, from which he throws them, an idea which seems to bear some relation to the vampire stories of eastern Europe. He is the pouke of Spenser, and from breaking the necks of the unwary to spoiling the blackberries on Michaelmas eve in order to vex the archangel there are few enormities of which he is not guilty, according to popular belief.

"Puck, the household fairy," of English legend finds his Irish counterpart in the fir-darrig, or red man, a merry goblin, very similar to the Scotch red cap, or brownie. He is said to be dressed in scarlet. The attire of most of the Irish fairies is supposed to consist of a green suit, red shoes, long white stockings and a red or black cap with an eagle's feather. This little red clad sprite is said to be remarkable for the extreme beauty of his voice, which, according to the now fast disappearing race of story tellers, is "like the sound of the waves," "the music of angels or the warbling of birds." A sweet voice is highly esteemed in Erin, where a girl possessing that "excellent thing in women" is said to be able to "coax the birds off the bushes."—New Ireland Review.

THE CABIN BOY.

He Has Become Practically a Thing of the Past.

An old sea captain who brought his ship into port recently after a long voyage from the east was talking about the changed conditions in the merchant marine since he entered it fifty years ago.

"I was thinking particularly," he said, "of how the cabin boy has completely disappeared, or at least how extremely rare he is now. I went to sea when I was twelve years old and got my full share of the many duties and few pleasures that belonged to the job I took. I waited on the officers, or the passengers if we had any, helped the steward in the pantry and even had to assist 'cookie' despite the chronic kicking I put up over that imposition. Besides all those things, of course, the crew made me run errands for them, and everybody in general seemed to regard 'the boy' as the scapegoat for anything that went wrong. All new cabin boys were unmercifully laughed at if they were either homesick or seasick, and there were various practical jokes which had to be tried on them by the seamen. I remember well how I was told the first day I came aboard never to throw anything to windward except hot water and ashes and how I was green enough to follow these orders implicitly. The sight of my red and streaming eyes set the crew into roars of laughter.

"Those times are gone. There's no place at sea for any one but an able-bodied man now. Even the 'mess boys,' so called off the liners and in the navy, are all men. The modern changes in the build of vessels have left no work fit for a boy, and I don't believe you could find one now unless on some very small craft." Philadelphia Ledger.

A NIGHT OF TORTURE

It Brought a Fortune to its Half Strangled Victim.

AN INNOCENT MAN'S ORDEAL.

Twice Strung Up by Lynchers, He Confessed to Murder and Was Afterward Vindicated and Recovered $25,000 From His Assailants.

Late in the fifties of the last century George W. King was the proprietor of a hotel in Oxford, twenty-six miles from Lafayette, Ind. In 1850 a stranger arrived at the hotel and gave his name as Dr. Rowe. He told King that he had no money and asked to be trusted for his board till he could get practice in the place, promising to pay him as promptly as possible. King consented to the arrangement, and Rowe soon became a favorite with the people on account of his companionable disposition and superior intelligence. The doctor, however, fell deeper and deeper in debt. He had been at the hotel for nearly a year when King reminded him one morning that he had not paid anything on his board bill for three months. The conversation, it afterward appeared, was overheard by some one in the hotel, though nothing was thought of it at the time.

A week after the conversation Rowe was called out late at night to see a patient and failed to return. Days passed without any word from him, and his disappearance soon was connected with the conversation that had passed between him and the landlord about the unpaid board. One night three months later a party of disguised men entered the hotel and, overpowering King, took him to a woodland adjoining the town.

He recognized the voices of several of his captors and especially of the leader, who told him that he was suspected of murdering Rowe and demanded that he confess. King stoutly maintained his innocence, and the leader of the mob ordered his companions "to string him up." A rope was placed around his neck, a dozen men pulled down a stout limb, over which the other end of the rope was thrown, and when the limb was released it carried King off his feet and left him hanging by the neck. He was nearly unconscious when let down and again ordered to confess.

After much delay he was restored sufficiently to understand what was said to him, and he again refused, declaring his innocence and saying he did not know what had become of Rowe. A second time he was strung up and a second time let down, but life was nearly extinct, and he was much longer in being restored than before.

The luckless landlord knew he could not pass through another such ordeal and live, so he consented to confess. He purposely lengthened the confession in order to gain time and said that he and two men, named Rogers and Haggard, had poisoned some whisky and induced Rowe to drink it, and after his death they had buried him in a hollow some distance away. It was nearly daylight when the confession was made, and the lynchers determined to take King to jail in Lafayette and then arrest Rogers and Haggard.

Before the jail was reached day had dawned, and King recognized his captors as members of the Horse Thief Detective company of Benton, Warren and Tippecanoe counties, nearly all of whom were known to him. Confident of his guilt, the men made no attempt to conceal their identity. So great was the excitement and so intense the feeling against King that he waived examination and went to jail, hoping that something would turn up to establish his innocence.

From the jail at Lafayette King addressed letters to editors of papers in Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville and other cities, setting out the circumstances of his confinement and asking them to keep his letter in the papers in hopes that it might fall under Rowe's notice. The appeal was a pathetic one and was copied into many papers throughout the northwest.

Two weeks after its first appearance Dr. Rowe rode into Oxford and, attended by a number of citizens, proceeded to Lafayette, where his appearance caused the immediate release of the accused landlord. In explanation of his disappearance Rowe said he had left his home in the east on account of domestic troubles, that he had learned that his wife was on her way to Oxford, and he had determined to leave the place secretly in order to prevent her from learning where he had gone. He had gone to a little town in southern Illinois, and it was there that he learned that the man who had befriended him was suspected of his murder and was in jail in Lafayette.

As soon as King was released he brought suit against thirty-two members of the Horse Thief Detective company for $5,000 each and also against the company as a corporation. Thomas A. Hendricks, afterward vice president, was his counsel, but the case was not allowed to come to trial, the lynchers compromising by paying King $25,000. With this money he purchased a farm and other property near Lafayette, where he lived till his death at the age of seventy-eight years.

The First Slow One.

He uttered a joyous cry.

"And I am really and truly the first man you ever kissed?"

"Yes, Clarence," the beautiful girl rejoined, her red lip curling slightly. "The others all took the initiative."—New York Press.

Unkind.

"My dear," exclaimed a young bride, "my husband writes so beautifully! You really ought to see some of his love letters!" "Yes, dear, I know," was the unkind retort. "I have a drawer full of them at home!"—Manchester Guardian.

TAFT SAILS TODAY TO VISIT CANAL

Leaves Charleston on Cruiser North Carolina.

ANOTHER SHIP TO HELP HER.

It Takes Two Vessels, Says President Elect, to Convey a Man of His Bulk. He is Accompanied by Board of Engineers Appointed by President Roosevelt to Inspect Canal Work.

Charleston, S. C., Jan. 25.—Amid the booming of guns fired to mark the passing down the harbor of the cruiser North Carolina and her convoy, the Montana, President Elect Taft started this morning on his visit to the Panama canal zone, announced more than a month ago.

Mr. Taft and the party of engineers who will inspect the work being done on the canal are on the North Carolina. The Montana is going along to watch over the safety of the vessel carrying the president elect. As Mr. Taft said jocularly a few days ago, two armored cruisers are required to carry a man of his bulk on a trip of such importance. Seriously speaking, however, the decision to have two cruisers to convey the president elect is a precaution suggested by certain senators on the ground that there is no legal provision for a successor to the presidency in the event of a fatality overtaking a president elect prior to his inauguration.

Will Stay Week on Isthmus.

The North Carolina and the Montana are speedy vessels capable of making 22 knots if pushed, and will get Mr. Taft in Colon in four days. Mr. Taft's stay on the isthmus of Panama will be limited to one week. While there he will be the guest of Colonel Goethals at his residence at Culebra. Mrs. Taft accompanies her husband on the trip.

A special train will be at the disposal of Mr. Taft and party while on the isthmus. He expects to spend much of his time at the site of the Gatun dam, as part of the work of the engineers with him is to ascertain the adequacy of the natural foundations for this structure.

Minor tangles of administration which may be found to exist will be unraveled by Mr. Taft, who also will make it a point to give impetus to the general work on the canal.

Engineers Accompanying Taft.

Accompanying Mr. Taft is the board of consulting engineers who are to make an examination of the Panama canal for the special purpose of reporting to President Roosevelt their opinion as to the canal work. They are Arthur P. Davis, chief engineers of the United States reclamation service; John R. Freeman of Providence, R. I.; Allen Hazen of New York, Isham Randolph of Chicago, James Dix Schuyler of Los Angeles, Cal., and Frederick P. Stearns of Boston.

These men, who are numbered among the best civil engineers of the world, will make an unbiased and frank report on the canal and the progress of the work. In particular they will devote part of their report or reports to the question of the advisability of continuing the present digging of the canal on the lock plan. They have been urged by the president to forget that the government has committed itself to the construction of a lock canal. If the opinion is that the adoption of such a plan instead of one aiming at the digging of a sea level canal was a mistake the engineers will say so.

If thou continuest to take delight in idle argumentation thou mayest be qualified to combat with the sophists, but never know how to love with men. —Socrates.

PRECIOUS CARGO LANDED TODAY.

Baltic With Republic and Florida Passengers Reaches Pier.

THE REPUBLIC GOES DOWN.

Sinks While in Tow on Way to Port. Six Lives Were Sacrificed in the Collision With Florida Off Nantucket in Fog—Latter Vessel is Coming Up Coast Under Her Own Steam.

New York, Jan. 25.—The palatial ocean steamship Republic of the White Star line, which was in collision with the Italian liner Florida of Nantucket, Mass., has gone down. No one was lost. Her passengers, taken off many hours before, were safely landed from the steamship Baltic at this port this morning.

The Republic was in tow of the revenue cutter Gresham and the derelict destroyer Seneca, proceeding to New York, when she sank. On board of her was Captain Sealby and a volunteer detail of fifty of her crew. She had been towed but a short distance when she began to settle rapidly. Seeing no hope of saving the ship, Captain Sealby gave the order to abandon ship, and the crew was taken off by the Gresham, which cast loose from crippled liner and stood by until she sank beneath the waves.

The Gresham and the Seneca then headed for the Massachusetts coast and will land Captain Sealby and his brave crew at Gay Head, Mass., or Newport, R. I.

Off No Man's Land.

The point where the Republic went down is described in brief wireless messages here as off No Man's Land, a small island south of Martha's Vineyard island, off the Massachusetts coast.

The Italian liner Florida, which crashed into the Republic in the dense fog off Nantucket, Mass., early Saturday morning, and gave her her death blow, is slowly steaming towards New York, convoyed by the American liner New York. Her passengers are on the Baltic, having been transferred in the early hours of the morning, along with those of the Republic.

The Baltic, which was called by wireless telegraph to the aid of the Republic after the collision, transferred from the Florida not only that steamer's 900 and more passengers, but the 442 passengers and part of the crew of the Republic.

Lands Her Passengers.

The Baltic reached her pier this morning and unloaded her human freight, thus practically closing this thrilling story of the sea which began with the first wireless flash telling of the collision of the two big ships in a thick fog off Nantucket, Mass.

There was a loss of life attending the collision. Mrs. Eugene Lynch of Boston and W. J. Mooney, a banker of Langson, N. D., were killed, and Mrs. H. M. Murphy, wife of the financial agent of the Union Central Life Insurance company of Grand Forks, N. D., and Eugene Lynch of Boston were injured on the Republic. Four members of the Florida's crew, too, met death. The dead and the injured were brought in on the Baltic.

The Florida is slowly coming up the coast under her own steam.

Defeats Harry Ferns in Eleven Fast Rounds.

New Orleans, Jan. 25.—Young Corbett of Denver has knocked out Harry Ferns of New York in the eleventh round of a twenty round bout before the West Side Athletic club at McDonoghville, across the Mississippi river from New Orleans. The match was at catch weights, both men weighing in at between 135 and 140 pounds. Corbett showed decided improvement over his last battle.

MEET AT NEGRO BAY.

Entire Fleet Will Do So, Then Proceed to Gibraltar.

Smyrna, Jan. 26.—The American equadron, composed of the battleships Missouri, Ohio, Louisiana and Virginia, sailed at 10 o'clock this morning for Negro bay on the north coast of Morocco, where the entire fleet will rendezvous prior to proceedings to Gibraltar.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

An Earthquake Seems to Be Missing on the Russian Frontier.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 25.—Although all reports from the various observatories in Russia locate the earthquake, the shocks of which were recorded Saturday, somewhere on the Russian side of Pamirs, Turkestan, no direct news has been received that would serve to fix the disturbance in any definite place. A dispatch from Borzhom in Trans-Caucausia reports the registering there by the seismographic instruments of a distant earthquake.

Russian Turkestan in the region indicated is sparsely settled, and details of an earthquake there would be very slow in reaching St. Petersburg. The first direct reports from the scene of the great earthquake at Kaatagh, Russian Turkestan, in October, 1907, were not received here until three weeks after its occurrence. In that earthquake about 15,000 persons were killed.

Yekaterinburg, Russia, Jan. 25.—The magneto-meteorological observatory at this place recorded a violent seismic disturbance at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

NOT INJURIOUS.

Benzoate of Soda May Be Used as Food Preservative.

Washington, Jan. 25.—That benzoate of soda used as a food preservative is not injurious to health is the judgment of the referee board of consulting experts, of which Dr. Ira Remsen, president of Johns Hopkins university is chairman. This conclusion, which has been approved by Secretary Wilson, reverses the findings of Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chem-

MURDER STILL MYSTERY.

Dayton Girl Killed While Going to Bank With Money.

Dayton, O., Jan. 25.—Although two arrests have been made, the police practically admit that very little progress has been made in solving the mystery surrounding the assault and murder of Mary Forschner, fifteen years old, whose body was found in a shed near her home. The two men being held as suspects doubtless will be released in a few hours.

The Forschner girl left her home in the evening for the purpose of taking the money to a bank. The officers believe the girl was attacked in the immediate vicinity of her home. There was evidence of a struggle.

PAINTERS' BLUNDERS

Reckless Pranks Played With Heavenly Bodies.

IMPOSSIBILITIES IN NATURE.

A Rainbow Depicted Wrong Side Out and Moons In Positions and Forms That Could Not Occur—Amusing Anachronisms by Old Time Artists.

That artists, like authors, should commit many errors of fact is hardly a cause for wonder. Rather, it is astonishing that they are not found oftener at fault in view of the great variety of knowledge required in their work. Despite this, however, there is no manner of excuse for certain absurdities.

For example, there is the case of an English painter who depicted an elaborate rainbow. Unfortunately he painted it wrong side out. But we forget amazement at such stupidity in admiration for the artist's magnificent audacity when we learn that he charged £20 additional for repainting the rainbow colored in accordance with nature's arrangement.

Painters are very prone to distress the astronomers by their reckless pranks with the heavenly bodies, particularly with the moon. One artist presented a scene in which was a crescent moon low in the eastern sky directly opposite a setting sun. Moreover, this genius disdained the criticisms of the learned. He insisted that this arrangement was necessary for the composition, inasmuch as the rest of the picture would be destroyed by a full moon—the only one possible in such a situation.

Other artists have trifled with the moon by turning its convexity away from the sun, which is, of course, impossible in nature. In one picture the moon was placed near the constellation of the Great Bear, though as a matter of fact the satellite never ventures into this part of the heavens. There are, too, oft recurring errors made in the bulk of the orb. An American astronomer amused himself by measuring the moons in a number of paintings. He established the fact that by reckoning from the satellite's size the average height of the hills in these landscapes was forty-three miles. One of the mountains, indeed, had the stupendous altitude of a hundred miles.

Artists of old time were often outrageously wrong, sometimes necessarily by reason of the limitations imposed by the ignorance of the period. A Dutch artist painted the garden of Eden with well clipped borders and yew trees trimmed into fantastic shapes. He wrought in all innocence, for of such sort were the only gardens of his experience. But the excuse does not apply to a Dutch painting of 1704. This showed Abraham about to slaughter Isaac by means of a blunderbuss—the product of an age 3,000 years after the time of the patriarchs!

Yet this mistake occurs again and again. There have been elaborate paintings of the children of Israel crossing the Red sea with muskets on their shoulders. A beautiful ivory tankard, an Augsburg carving of the early seventeenth century, was sold for a high price in London not long ago. The design, which is exquisite in workmanship, shows the good Samaritan, with his attendants, in the Jericho road. One of the servants carries a gun!

Many a child as well as some older persons has puzzled over that "beam" in the eye of which the New Testament speaks. It is not always understood that this means a beam of light. But it was left to Solomon Bernard, in his woodcuts illustrating the Bible, published at Lyons in 1553, to picture this beam as one of wood, rectangular in section and several feet in length!

The matter of costumes offers vast opportunity for flaws, which the painters have not failed to seize. In the national gallery at Edinburgh Pharaoh's daughter and her accompanying women are exhibited garbed in the long waisted bodices and hooped skirts of Europe in the sixteenth century. The national collection in London has a picture of Joseph and his kindred in Egypt, where the buildings shown are not at all Egyptian in their style of architecture, but distinctly Italian. In the same gallery Paolo Veronese's "The Family of Darius at the Feet of Alexander After the Battle of Issus" displays the women of the group in the pointed waists and inflated skirts that made the familiar dress of Venetian women in the painter's time.

Errors that have to do with armor may be more readily pardoned, though the artists fail lamentably in knowledge as to the earlier forms of metal protection. Thus in some paintings showing the time of Christ the warriors are seen clad in beautifully damascened mail, yet this form of armor did not come into actual use until half a thousand years later.

Similarly, in other pictures of Christ's time, monks are portrayed in their robes, with tonsures. In fact, however, they did not exist in the church prior to the fourth century A. D.

A curious illustration of the limitations set on genius by circumstance is exhibited in one of the world's most famous paintings, "The Last Supper." Leonardo da Vinci simply did not know that the table, the cloth, the plates, the knives and forks and salt cellars were impossibilities in the scene he designed to portray. The eastern people of that age who were his subjects used no table, no chairs, no forks, but squatted about a common dish and ate from it with their fingers.—Pittsburg Post.

Mutton Birds.

During six weeks every autumn the 400 inhabitants of the Australian Furneaux islands make enough money to support themselves in idleness the rest of the year. They do this by catching the very fat young "mutton birds," which are hatched there in such numbers that the flocks when they migrate extend for miles. They furnish food and oil, which is used for lubricating purposes and also as a substitute for cod liver oil.

One Thing He Could Not Have.

Although there was no sort of toy which could be bought and for which Harold had expressed a desire that was not in his possession, he still had his unsatisfied longings. "I know what I wish I was, mother," he said one day when his own big brother had gone away and the little boy across the street was ill.

"Yes, dear," said his mother. "Perhaps you can be it. Harold; mother will help you. Is it to play soldier?"

"No, indeed!" said Harold scornfully. "I just wish I was two little dogs, so I could play together."—Youth's Companion.

FOOD FOR THE SEINE.

An Incident of Whistler's Student Days In Paris.

The early scenes in "Trilby" have shown us the hilarious squalor of the student life in Paris when Whistler joined the studio that Gleyre carried on in succession to Delaroche. It was the Bohemia, barely modernized, of Murger's novel, and the shifts to which these raw recruits in art descended furnished Whistler for life with some of his raciest stories. Once when an American friend unearthed him Whistler was living on the proceeds of a wardrobe. One hot day he pawned his coat for an iced drink. Invited once to the American embassy, he had to borrow Poynter's dress suit. But the best story of these frolicsome days arises from the eternal copying in the Louvre, either on commission or on "spec," which kept them alive between remittances. Whistler's chum, Ernest Delannoy, had done a gorgeous replica of Veronese's "Marriage Feast at Cana" that took when framed the pair of them to carry it. They tried it on every dealer up and down both sides of the Seine until the first price of 500 francs had dropped with several thuds to 100, then 20, then 10, then 5. Suddenly the dignity of art asserted itself.

On the Pont des Arts they lifted the huge canvas. "Un," they said, with a great swing, "deux, trois—y'lan!" and over it went into the water with a splash. Sergents de ville came running, omnibuses stopped, and boats pushed out on the river. Altogether it was an immense success, and they went home enchanted.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE WRONG NOTE.

Mozart's Outbreak at an Opera Performance at Marseilles.

Mozart, being once on a visit at Marseilles, went incognito to hear the performance of his "Villanella Rapita." He had reason to be tolerably well satisfied till in the midst of the principal aria the orchestra, through some error in the copying of the score, sounded a D natural where the composer had written D sharp. This substitution did not injure the harmony, but gave a commonplace character to the phrase and obscured the sentiment of the composer.

Mozart no sooner heard it than he started up vehemently and from the middle of the pit cried out in a voice of thunder, "Will you play D sharp, you wretches?"

The sensation produced in the theater may be imagined. The actors were astounded, the lady who was singing stopped short, the orchestra followed her example, and the audience, with loud exclamations, demanded the expulsion of the offender. He was accordingly seized and required to name himself. He did so, and at the name of Mozart the clamor subsided and was succeeded by shouts of applause from all sides.

It was insisted that the opera should be recommenced. Mozart was installed in the orchestra and directed the whole performance. This time the D sharp was played in its proper place, and the musicians themselves were surprised at the superior effect produced. After the opera Mozart was conducted in triumph to his hotel.

The Thirteen Chicks.

How difficult it is to pick out truth or fiction from apparently straightforward recitals of the actions of animals is well shown in a communication sent to one of our foreign exchanges by a man who lays claim to long experience in breeding game birds. He stated in all seriousness that only two of his pheasant hens had hatched out seventeen of the eighteen eggs placed under each one in the nests. "It is a curious fact," he continues, "that both hatched off on the same day, and each hen immediately killed thirteen out of her seventeen live chicks by pecking their brains and laid them in a row in front of her, each exactly in the same way. I do not know whether such a singular case has ever been noted before."

So shall I; but, at any rate, in this case at least, thirteen was an unlucky number for both the chicks and their owners.—Forest and Stream.

Her One Ambition.

She wanted a job, she told the manager of the big store, and everything about her, from drooping eyelashes to neatly molded instep, indicated that she would draw enough trade, or ought to, to cover her salary.

But the manager told her that for one of her inexperience she would command only about $8 a week.

She accepted this, if it was the best he could do, but as she was about to turn away she hesitated and asked demurely, looking at him through the drooping lashes, "Do you suppose you could make that $7 a week, so I could have a little laundry done once in awhile?"—St. Louis Republic.

Long Love.

The word "love" in one of the Indian dialects is "chemlendamoughkunagogagu." Fancy a sweet forest maiden telling her copper colored brave that she "chemlendamoughkunagogagus" him. The conjugation of the verb "to love" in that dialect must take at least a year to recite.—Pathfinder.

Reason For Worry.

"Yes; they not only have everything to worry about that the women have, but they also have the women to worry about too."—Smart Set.

Put In More Words.

"Now, Peters," said the teacher, "what is it makes the water of the sea so salty?"

"Salt," said Peters.

"Next?" said the teacher. "What is it makes the water of the sea so salty?"

"The salty quality of the sea water," answered "Next," "is due to the admixture of a sufficient quantity of chloride of sodium to impart to the aqueous fluid with which it commingles a saline flavor, which is readily recognized by the organs of taste!"

"Right, Next," said the teacher. "Go up one!"

The Magnet.

"Yes, she advertised for a husband and got 2,700 replies."

"Gracious! She must have advertised herself as very beautiful."

"No, she didn't. She just said she had $700 in the bank."—Kansas City Independent.

EATING TOO MUCH.

Overnutrition Is Just as Harmful as Malnutrition.

It is an acknowledged fact that almost every soul of us eats too much. The digestive organs are constantly overtrained and finally weakened. When wisely followed, the practice of fasting can be most beneficial. An expert on the food question has said that one should rise from the table with the feeling of hunger, which is an experience known to very few of us. On the contrary, the majority of people leave the board with a sense of burden which only an hour's siesta can alleviate. This is not so much owing to the fact that the food is uncommonly rich, for the rule of the simple life obtains now in the fashionable cuisine, but it is the quantity taken. There is a large community at the present moment which fasts from breakfast time till dinner at night. It is a question if it is wise to leave the stomach entirely without food during all those hours, but there is no question that the lighter the lunch taken the better will be the health of the individual. By a "light lunch" in this instance is meant what most people would not call a lunch at all—that is to say, a few crackers with cheese (a much maligned article of diet), a few nuts and a bit of fruit or a cup of cocoa with dry toast. Such a "feast" prevents the craving for food and in no way taxes the digestive organs. Overnutrition is just as harmful as malnutrition and is far more frequently the cause of maladies. With judicious fasting the system recovers its lost tone, and mental workers would find that the brain worked with surprising lightness, for the brain is one of the chief sufferers from overeating.—New York American.

BRITISH PRINCES.

Very Different From the King In Exemption From Laws.

So privileged is the king of England in his exemption from any and every law that one would naturally expect his children might do pretty much as they like. But Englishmen have always been very jealous of royal personages, and the fact is that princes enjoy very few privileges indeed. A prince of the royal blood may be fined, like any ordinary mortal, if his motor car exceeds the legal limit of speed.

The Prince of Wales cannot be sued personally for debt. If the debt is not paid the creditor may take out a summons, but he must summon the treasurer, not the prince. If the case goes against the treasurer the money is paid out of the prince's assets.

No child of the king who is under twenty-five can marry without the king's consent. Supposing, however, a prince over twenty-five desired to marry and the king refused his consent, then the prince could give notice of his intention to the privy council. After that he would have to restrain his patience for a whole year. If during that time either the house of lords or the house of commons disapproved of the marriage it could not take place. But if both houses of parliament were satisfied the prince could marry the woman of his choice.

A prince has not even the right to educate his own children, for it was long ago laid down that the king has the care and education of his grandchildren while they are minors.—London Telegraph.

The Brakeman's Advice.

Down in Maine is a town called Burnham, situated on a small branch railroad that joins the main line at Burnham Junction. One day as the train approached the latter place the brakeman entered the car and in his usual stentorian tones went through his regular rigmarole when a station and junction are reached.

"Burnham Junction!" he shouted. "Burnham Junction! Change cars for Burnham! Leave no articles in the car! Burn'am, Burn'am!"—Lippincott's.

Making Sure.

Country Cousin—Are you sure I am in the right train? Town Relative (who has had about enough of it)—Well, I have asked seventeen porters and thirty-two passengers, and they all say "Yes," so I think you'd better risk it.—London Telegraph.

"ALL DEALERS"

ED. FRENSDORF

Of Hudson Wants Public Protected Against Buying Shoddy.

WOOL DEALER APPEARS IN CONGRESS.

Would have every Garment so tagged as to stipulate of what it is made.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Advocating the passage of a pure clothing law, Edward Frensdorf of Hudson, Mich., one of the largest dealers in fleece wool in that state, yesterday, in a brief filed with the ways and means committee of the house, made perhaps the most original proposition that has been submitted to that body since the tariff hearings were begun.

Frensdorf, who spoke as the representative of the wool interests of Michigan, suggested a tariff commission of experts to consider proposed changes in the wool schedule of the customs law.

"Michigan," said Mr. Frensdorf, "is second in production of wool of the states east of the Mississippi river. Our position on this subject is virtually that presented from the state of Ohio. As far as comes to my knowledge there is little if any demand for free wool; therefore, I believe it unnecessary to discuss the need of a protective tariff. However, I do not wish to appear unreasonable, and would not contend that in some particulars the present Dingley schedule could not be corrected to the mutual advantage of both grower and manufacturer.

Wants Buyers Protected.

"From my researches I am forced to conclude that readjustment of this schedule should be left to a non-partisan commission made up of experts who, being familiar with the changed conditions, both as to manufacure and production of wool, that have transpired since the enactment of the present law, to suggest alterations and corrections which would do justice to all concerned. The dairy interests having been as much benefited, and having been made profitable by legislation regulating sale of substitutes for butter in the shape of oleomargarine, butterine and cottonlene the idea suggested itself to me that a pure goods law, framed along the same line, protecting the consumer of goods as well as the producer of wool, would prove of great value; that each piece of goods, as well as each garment, should bear a tag stipulating the ingredients that are used to produce the goods. This would, in my opinion, prove to be to the general advantage of all concerned and the stimulation wool production would receive by such act would, in my opinion, bring the value of wool to such a high price as to make it one of the most profitable industries on the farm and ranch.

Prices Would Be Cheaper.

"I can't see that it would be to the disadvantage of the poorer or middle classes in the purchase of goods made up of woolshoddy and cotton or cotton and shoddy, or any kind of combination of those ingredients. I contend that a man would be able to buy such goods for less than he is paying for them today. The only difference from present conditions would be that he or she would know what they are paying for. Most strenuous opposition developed to the enactment of a law governing the sale of substitutes for butter. Who would dare to offer legislation tending to revoke that act? Those wishing to use butterine, oleomargarine or cottolene are in no wise prevented from doing so, but they buy it knowingly and are prevented from being defrauded. What portion of the purchasing public can judge as to the merits of a piece of cloth or garment? What portion of the goods sold are correctly represented? By the exclusion of foreign rags, waste and shoddy and the enactment of a law regulating the sale of substitutes for wool, I am convinced the problem as to increasing the size of our wool and sheep industry would be solved, and we would not be dependent upon a wool tariff to sustain that industry, as is necessary under present conditions."

CURIOUS FLORIDA HERB.

Red Plant Which Feeds Upon Ants and Other Insects.

Almost everybody knows there are such things as insectivorous or carnivorous plants, but it is doubtful if many know we have any such plants growing right here in southern Florida. Nevertheless there is a plant, or, rather, herb, growing here which is really insectivorous.

It is likely that on account of its being extremely small it has escaped attention. In fact, it seems to have been overlooked by the botanists also, as we are unable to find it classed among the sensitive plants.

This is an annual herb, and the entire plant, including the flowers, is of a deep rich red color. It rarely reached a height of more than three inches and is never so broad. The leaves are spatulate when undisturbed and present many small fibrillae and secrete at their tips a tenacious fluid which is capable of holding the very small insects, such as ants and the like, upon which it feeds. When any of these get lodged in the fluid and disturb these fibrillae the leaves slowly acquire a deep cut shape and sometimes curl completely up over their victim. When they have absorbed the insect they slowly recover their original shape, leaving only the skeleton of the insect remaining.

These plants grow on the very low, flat, poor and sandy lands. They appear in the late winter and early spring months.—Punta Gorda (Fla.) Herald.

The Human Temperature.

Put to the test of the thermometer, it appears that the normal temperature of the body is almost invariable, regardless of latitude or season. Putting the bulb of the thermometer under the tongue of an Eskimo at the frozen north or of a man under the blazing sun of the tropics, we find that in each case, the body being in a state of health, the temperature is about the same, the difference not amounting to a degree. We may say absolutely that the average normal temperature of a human being is about 98.5 degrees F., just as we may say that at sea level water boils at 212 degrees F.—New York American.

BEULAH BOYS

Description of Thanksgiving Day in the Home.

A JOLLY TIME WAS ENJOYED BY ALL OF THE BOYS AND GUESTS.

Occasion was also Mr. Swift's birthday.

Many of our readers will remember the boys from Beulah Home, who came here last fall with Herman Swift, manager of the Home, and gave entertainments in the various churches, and will be interested in the description of Thanksgiving Day as they spent it in the Home.

"A jolly good time, of course. You should have heard the scrambling of the boys from their beds at the early break of day, the hurry to get dressed and then the shouts. Some of them cried, "Thanksgiving," "Turkey," and some "Christmas," and some "Fourth of July, Hurrah!" But they all very soon realized that it was the day for chicken and pumpkin pie and other good things. And so the day did not drag by any means (it never does in Beulah Land), but the joyous time kept up till late in the evening.

Mrs. Howard of Petoskey found out that this Thanksgiving Day was also Mr. Swift's birthday and planned a little surprise for the evening before. A few friends from Boyne City arranged to be quietly on hand (in hiding) until the boys were seated in the dining-room. Then suddenly the dining-room was thrown open and the following yell given—Prof. Bell leading and the Beulah Boys (who had been previously coached on it), joining in.

"Thanksgiving Day, we understand.
Is the day when Herman came to land.
Forty years and all is well,
Forty more for Herman L.
Rah, Rah, Rah, Rah, while him we see,
A jolly young Swift may he ever be."

Then Mr. Bell stepped quickly toward Mr. Swift with a large tray of all kinds of choice fruits, piled high, and a basket of the same which the tray would not hold. Presenting them, Mr. Bell said, "We bring of the choice fruits of our land as only a slight recognition of the precious fruits of your unselfish labors and wish many happy returns."

The guests, including friends from Boyne City, Petoskey, Traverse City and Detroit, sat down to lunch with the boys, after which they all retired to the chapel for a delightful entertainment. Mr. Swift, in opening, took time to laugh a little at our mistake in saying "forty years," saying he had not yet seen that many but lacked three or four of it. But he surely could do no less than excuse our "guessing" since he had kept it so secret and no one knew exactly.

The Boys gave some of their best selections of song and recitation and the guests a few words of commendation. Mr. S. C. Smith of the Boyne City Bank, said he often received letters asking about the home, whether it was worthy or not, and he took pleasure in always assuring them that it was a grand institution, putting well into practice—"A Square Deal" for the boys.

This surprise, remember was Wednesday evening, in order to avoid the many things that were sure to come up next day. Thanksgiving Day itself brought much cheer in the way of a bountiful dinner, games on the play grounds, in the play rooms and a run to the woods for wintergreen berries. The evening brought another surprise by Mr. Swift himself. After supper, he gathered the boys and guests in two great circles around the dining-room and then brought out his large tray and basket of fruit and flowers. This he placed in the center of the room and then with his carving knife he "divided up," as the boys say, so that all shared with him in the fruits of his surprise. Before adjourning he asked them to tell of three things they were especially thankful for, beginning with Mrs. Howard. She said she was thankful, first, for her Savior, and the privilege of working for him, and for friendship. Several others testified about the same. But the universal testimony of the boys was, Thankful for the Home, a place to stay, for Mr. Swift and for the good dinner. We surely could not wonder at this.

Later in the evening the boys again went to the chapel and squared up accounts for the year."

THE WORD "WINTER."

Said to Have Originally Indicated Wetness, Not Coldness.

There is a prevailing impression that there is something in the word "winter"—that signifies cold, and the season is usually associated with the idea of low temperature, but where the word originated there was little of winter as we understand it, while there was a great deal of moisture at the time the earth was nearest to the sun, so that it is not the temperature but the atmospheric condition that has given us the word.

The word "winter," as we use it, is found with but slight modifications in all the branches of the Aryan languages, for the idea of wetness associated with the season was given to it before the Aryan family was divided.

If we go to the root of the word we find "wad," with the signification of to well, to wash out, to moisten or make wet. Our Aryan ancestors used that root to apply to all conditions of moisture, and many words besides winter have grown out of it, wet and water being among them.

This root "wad" is in the Sanskrit as "udan," water. Anglo-Saxon has "waeter," and in Latin we have "unda," wave, from which we get our "inundate."

Our Danish and Swedish cousins changed the "w" into a "v" and have "vinter." In Icelandic it is "vetir," and the old high German has "wintar," and it is "winter" in German. These four words are all from the Teutonic base "wata," which means wet. So it has been moisture that has been indicated from the birth of the root on which all of the different words in a dozen languages have grown.—New York Herald.

Luck In Horseshoes.

The superstition about luck in horseshoes dates back too far for record, but it was not always confined to the horseshoe. Any piece of iron found in one's path was accounted a sign of good luck, and as horseshoes were more commonly picked up than any other article of that metal that particular object at last became the standard emblem of good fortune and the supposed defense against bad luck. In Aubrey's "Miscellanies," written 200 years ago, the author mentions having seen the horseshoe nailed up in church, and he also says that "most of the houses in the west end of London have the horseshoe on the threshold." The horseshoe to possess virtue must have been found, not purchased or looked up. Admiral Nelson had great faith in the luck of the horseshoe, and one was nailed to the mast of his ship, the Victory.—London Chronicle.

SPECIAL TRAIN

Service of the best given the K. of P.'s by the Lake Shore Ry.

The most luxurious special train that was ever placed at the service of Tecumseh people was furnished by the Lake Shore Ry. last Wednesday afternoon to the K. of P. Lodge, on their trip to Morenci and return. The train was made up of one D. H. Buffer, and two first class Lavatory Gas Coaches.

One of the coaches was furnished in Red, and the other in Green, which made a very handsome looking train. The officers and Sir Knights who participated in this trip, are very loud in in their praises for the comfortable manner in which the Lake Shore Ry. handled them, and they voted the Lake Shore Ry., a letter of thanks for the very able manner in which they can do things when they receive special requests for something extra fine.

In the Smart Set for February are a number of more ordinary interesting features. Fremont Rider's "Between Six and Seven" is a romantic tale of the Zenda type—a war of wills between a scornful princess and an iron-jawed American who dares to aim high in his love, Roland Franklin Andrews contributes "In Algeria" a tale of a rough general of the French army in Africa and his love for his young aide. Mr. Andrews writes in the vein of the great French story tellers. "At the Sign of the Golden Game" is a weird romance of the gambling tables of Monte Carlo, and of a fabulous fortune that goes to pawn, told with no less charm than charactizes all of Beatrix Demarest Lloyd's work.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM GRAY.

Wm. Gray was born at Cummington, Mass., Nov. 13 and completed his 74 years Jan. 9, 1909.

He came to Michigan with his parents early in life and lived here since with the exception of a few years spent in Elkhart, Ind., where he worked for the L. S. and M. S.

Early in the sixties he was one of the many to go to California by the overland route walking much of the way and coming home by the way of the Isthmus of Panama and New York. His many adventures and experiences afforded him much to relate in after years.

He learned the machinist trade of H. Brewer & Co. and was still in the employ of that firm when he became too feeble to keep up his work.

He grew up with Tecumseh and could point out many an old landmark and tell many an interesting story of early times.

In 1859 he became a member of the I. O. O. F. and until the time of his death was an active and enthusiastic member and was also a charter member of the Tecumseh Rebekah Lodge.

Jan. 6, 1860 he was married to Rebekah R. Clement of Franklin, who passed on Jan. 29, 1889. To them were born 5 children only one of whom survives to mourn his loss with his only brother Wallace E. Gray of Hills Station, Ohio.

He was laid to rest Jan. 13, at Brookside cemetery with I. O. O. F., service assisted by the Rev. John Wirt Dunning of the Presbyterian church.

He always looked for the best in others and gave the best he had and to those who knew him best "His life was an inspiration and his memory an inspiration."

Samuel Howard

The death of Samuel Howard, one of the pioneers of Lenawee county, who has lived on the farm on which he died for forty years or more, occured at his home at Hudson on Wednesday morning Mr. Howard has been in failing health for a long time and during the last five months has been confined to his bed his illness being caused by a general breaking down due to old age. He was 84 years old and leaves three children. Charlie Howard, who lived with his family on the old homestead and cared for his father, Len Howard of Hudson, and Mrs. Effie Pillsbury of Tecumseh. Funeral services were held from the home Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

MONEY BACK OFFER

What Risk When C. A. Wright & Son Will Give You Your Money Back if Mi-o-na Does Not Cure Dyspepsia.

It's really a crime the way people suffer from indigestion, when it is such a simple disease to cure.

Why will people go on belching gas from a sour stomach, and inflict their foul breath, caused by food fermentation, on their friends, when Mi-o-na will give complete relief in a few hours, and will cure in two weeks?

We respectfully urge all readers of Herald to tell their suffering friends that Mi-o-na will stop heartburn, distress after eating, waterbrash, nausea, and all diseases of the stomach almost immediately. A large box costs but 50 cents, and C. A. Wright & Son guarantee it.

"Mi-o-na is a reliable remedy for the cure of indigestion and stomach trouble and has from me a hearty recommendation and endorsement." Mrs. C. F. Coller, Kilbuck st. Tecumseh, Mich., Oct. 13, 1908.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First—Don't Delay—Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Tecumseh residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Tecumseh citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

John B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For several years I suffered a great deal from rheumatism and backache. My kidneys were badly disordered and I knew that they caused all my trouble. About two years ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time I was relieved. I have had no serious attacks of the trouble since. Shortly after using Doan's Kidney Pills I told of my experience through the local papers and at this time I am glad to verify that statement and again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

A PUZZLING CLIMATE.

The Curious Way Rain Falls In Balmy Honolulu.

A PERPLEXING SPECTACLE.

Downpours Half a Mile Away That Threaten To Drench You Every Moment, but Never Arrive—A Riot of Broken Up Rainbows In the Valleys.

The most perplexing thing about Hawaii's climate to the new arrival is the matter of rainfall. You begin to experience this perplexity before you have set foot on the dock at Honolulu, when you consult anxiously with your fellow travelers as to the advisability of digging out an umbrella or rainproof before you go ashore. The chances are that you are all convinced that the heavy veil of black clouds which shuts out portions of the mountain scenery from view and the few drops of rain which the fresh shore breeze dashes in your face like flashing jewels torn from that bit of rainbow are warnings too plain to be ignored, and you prepare accordingly for the downpour which seems imminent.

You observe with some surprise that none of the wearers of the dainty costumes you pass on the street appear to be in the least perturbed by the possibility of getting caught in the impending shower until after awhile it dawns on you that the storm keeps right on impending—and nothing more. As you ride in a street car along the flashing seabeach, vivid with color of breaking surf and of flowers in trees and hedges along the way, the sunshine never appeared so brilliant. But off to the left in a beautiful little valley tucked like a deep pocket in the mountains and seemingly scarcely half a mile away there can be no doubt of the fact that a good, heavy rain is falling. The sunlight striking through the falling drops fills the valley with a glory of broken up rainbows—a riot of color that causes one to gasp and exclaim in admiration. There can be no doubt that the rain we have seen falling is real and that it is as near as it seems, for the wind now and then carries refreshing dashes of it into the open car, causing a few of the passengers to change their seats to the opposite side. But still the street is perfectly dry and the sunshine as bright as ever.

Five minutes later we leave the car at the foot of a great jagged pile of volcanic rock that marks the vent of a prehistoric volcano, and the red base and sides which support a stunted, mesquite-like growth and a few cacti look as though they hadn't had a good shower for six months. And they probably haven't.

In time one learns that Hawaii's climate is purely a matter of locality; that the report of the rainfall for any given time, published by the United States weather bureau, does not mean for every place in the territory nor for the island of Oahu nor even for the city of Honolulu, but only for the place where the rain gauge stands. It would not be true for a place half or three-quarters of a mile away. One learns that he may live in Honolulu under very different conditions as to precipitation, according to location. In some of the valleys rain falls practically every day of the year and varies in amount in different parts of the same valley, which may be only a mile or two long. There are other sections in which the splendid lawns and bowers of green foliage which surround beautiful homes are only possible through constant irrigation. And there are to be found almost every degree of moisture between these extremes.

Like everywhere else, one finds people of every turn of mind in Honolulu as to the most desirable places in which to live. In sections where the rainfall may amount to two or three hundred inches per year vegetation flourishes most luxuriantly and with a minimum of attention. There is also an absence of humid feeling in the atmosphere or disagreeable dampness which one usually associates with much rainfall. This is accounted for by the fact that the rain comes in showers, of which a dozen or more may come in a day and may occur while the sun is shining brightly, while the never failing trade winds and a porous soil dry up the surface moisture within a few minutes after a shower has passed. The heaviest precipitation also usually occurs at night.

In the dry sections, if one has plenty of water with which to irrigate (and Honolulu has a splendid system of waterworks with ample supply), one may more easily control what he would grow and at the same time escape the inconvenience of oft occurring showers. Some of Honolulu's most beautiful residence districts as well as the beautiful Kapiolani park, one of the most beautiful tropical gardens in the world, was originally barren sand plains, practically devoid of vegetation and once thought to be worthless. The newcomer is often puzzled to hear an old resident refer to "the plains" when speaking of a section of the city in which are located some of the most magnificent homes and beautiful grounds in the whole territory.

The variation of rainfall, together with the difference in temperature due to elevation, give to Hawaii a diversity of climate that can scarcely be equaled in the world, lacking only in extremes of either heat or cold.—Will J. Cooper.

EVENT IN THE MUSIC WORLD.

New Opera by Strauss to Be Produced in Dresden Tonight.

Dresden, Jan. 26.—An event to which the music lovers of Germany and of the world have looked forward with eager anticipation will take place here tonight when the opera "Elektra," by Richard Strauss, will have its first production at the Royal opera.

Strauss will not conduct the opera himself, as had been planned. The theme to which Germany's most prominent musician has lent all the genius made famous by "Salome," "Feuersnot" and others works is that of the old Greek tragedy immortalized by Aeschylus, Sophocles, Euripides and others.

In tonight's production Mme. Schumann-Heink, well known to American opera goers, will sing the role of Clytemnestra and, Elektra will be done by Frau Kull.

JAPAN SEEKS ONLY PEACE WITH US.

Count Komura Declares Nation Steers Emigrants Elsewhere.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Marquis Katsura, the prime minister of Japan, and Count Komura, the minister of foreign affairs, recently explained in Tokyo to Francis B. Loomis, commissioner general to the Japanese exposition, who is now in Washington, in a series of interviews of uncommon interest and of present importance, the attitude and position of the Japanese government in respect to the main questions at issue between the peoples and the governments of the two countries.

"I was deeply and agreeably impressed," said Mr. Loomis, "with the direct, explicit and, what seemed to me, satisfactory statements of Count Komura, the minister of foreign affairs, respecting the United States. His utterances were frank, clear and cordial.

"Count Komura said that Japan's aspirations were for peace, and that, so far as the United States was concerned, his government most heartily desired to preserve, unimpaired and unbroken, the historic friendship between Japan and the United States. He said the people of Japan had long felt that the United States had been not only a kindly friend to Japan, but a very dependable and helpful one.

"'In the matter of the emigration of Japanese laborers,' said Count Komura, 'we are doing our utmost to work in harmony with the government of the United States, and to meet its wishes. We are energetically discouraging emigration to the United States and elswhere, except to Korea, Formosa and parts of Manchuria.'

"Count Komura hoped that on our part there would be no discrimination made against Japanese subjects, and that in due time the public sentiment in this country may be as favorable to his countrymen as to other foreigners residing in the United States."

SAINT JOAN OF ARC.

First Step Taken In Her Canonization. Many Americans Present.

Rome, Jan. 25.—Many Americans were present at the ceremony in the hall of the consistory at which Pope Pius read the decree approving the solemn beautification of Joan of Arc. The pope was surrounded by the lay and ecclesiastical court, which included Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul and Bishops Richard Scannel of Omaha and E. P. Allen of Mobile.

In his address the pope said that he was never so satisfied as when, through the truth of God, he was able to raise to the altars those who, leaving on earth the perfume of their virtues, show, with the assistance of the Almighty, the miracles of heaven. His holiness also took occasion to complain of the present condition of society, which, he said, is afflicted by unbelief.

How to Cure Your Piles

Due Often To Carelessness or Neglect and Stubborn to Cure

"The knife is not always necessary to cure even desperate cases of piles," says a physician whose years and experience make him an authority. "Indeed," he says further: "I have known some very aggravated cases of long standing cured by a simple home remedy that restored to the bowels easy natural daily movements."

And the doctor is right, as many letters from cured people in various parts of the country prove. If sufferers from piles, rectal tumors and ulcers would try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin they would often save themselves the terrible pain and danger and the heavy expense of a severe surgical operation.

Piles are often due to constipation and are always aggravated by it. Easy natural movements of the bowels such as are invariably produced by this famous laxative without pain or gripe do much to restore a normal, healthy condition to the bowels and thus cure piles.

M. H. Miller, Mowequa, Ill., says: "I have been troubled all my life with piles brought on by constipation. I tried many doctors and numerous remedies, but found no relief until I used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I have used it as a laxative and stomach remedy for the past nine years and have no more troubles with piles." H. N. John, Minneapolis, Kan., says he suffered for four years with piles which were so bad that he could not work. Four bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured him, and he says he has got been bothered since.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a safe sure remedy for constipation, restoring easy natural daily movements in the worst old chronic cases, yet so mild and pleasant to take mothers give it to their babies with splendid results. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 303 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill., will send a free sample to anyone who has not used it and will give it a fair trial.

BIG OIL TANK EXPLODES AT SARNIA

Country Severely Shaken For Miles Around.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 25.—An explosion which was heard for a radius of several miles and which did damage which will reach over $1,000 has occurred at the plant of the Imperial Oil company at Sarnia. One of the big tanks, into which several hundred gallons of crude oil was being emptied by means of pipes, exploded, presumably the result of spontaneous combustion. The entire top was blown several hundred feet, and the oil caught fire, throwing a blaze nearly 100 feet into the air.

Residents feared for a time the entire section of the city would be wiped out.

The fire department saved the surrounding property.

Cocking Main Broken Up.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 25.—A red hot cocking main was in progress at Joe Eberlein's roadhouse, a mile outside the city limits on Fort street west, early in the morning, when eight deputy sheriffs, who had been tipped off, raided the place. No arrest were made, but the officers remained until the 200 "sports" assembled had wended their way homeward.

Skater May Have Drowned.

Muskegon, Mich., Jan. 25.—Francis Ball, aged fifteen, has disappeared from his home near Muskegon lake in this city, and his parents think he is drowned. The boy's skates are missing, and as he left home to go skating on the lake many are of the same belief. Sheriff Nelson will start an investigation.

Jury Frees Accused Man.

Paw Paw, Mich., Jan. 25.—Don Mahoney of Decatur, tried in the circuit court for keeping a gaming room in that village, was acquitted by a jury. The people proved the gambling easily enough, but were unable to satisfy the jury that Mahoney was the keeper of the place.

Bouncing Betsey.

There is an old fashioned flower called "Bouncing Betsey," which every one should love for one trait. We have noticed that it grows on all neglected graves, as if trying to cover up the fact that some one who once lived is forgotten. It may also be found in corners of old fashioned gardens, where it grows and blooms and protests against being pushed out entirely. There are some dear old fashioned people who suggest "Bouncing Betsey."—Atchison Globe.

CALLS ON GIRL; TAKES HER MONEY

Canadian Chap Robbed Port Huron Young Lady.

FLED TO HIS NATIVE SOIL.

May Get Long Sentence—Wife of Port Huron's Police Clerk Given Fright by Queer Acting Stranger—Wrong Stories Cost Vaudeville Singer His Job.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 25.—Leonard Kirby, aged twenty-eight years and living at Sarnia, has been keeping company with Miss Nova West of St. Clair street, this city, for several months. The other night he came over to call on her. For three hours they chatted, and everything went along nicely.

A few moments after Kirby left Miss West discovered that a $20 bill which she had placed on the piano was missing. She telephoned the local police that Kirby had taken her money, and soon Chief Pengelly of the Canadian city had the young man in jail.

He acknowledged the theft, but refused to return to Port Huron to face the charge. A warrant for bringing stolen goods into Canada was immediately sworn out, and Kirby will be arraigned on that charge. If convicted he can be given five years in Kingston penitentiary, while if he had come back here a fine of $50 might have been the penalty.

The police are searching for a tall, middle aged man, wearing a shaggy beard, who visited the home of Police Clerk Ray Stockwell and frightened Mrs. Stockwell, who is a bride of but a few months, so badly that she was made ill.

Mrs. Stockwell's attention was attracted to the front door by the ringing of the bell. When she opened the door the stranger, who carried a club and whose appearance was more that of a crazy man than anything else, threw his weight against it and walked in, seating himself in the sitting room. He forced the woman to stand before him while he lighted his pipe and smoked a few minutes. Then he commanded her to walk before him into the kitchen.

"It's cold in here," he said gruffly. "Guess I'll get some coal. Where's the bin?"

After Mrs. Stockwell had directed him to where he could get the coal, she grabbed a large butcher knife from the table and, hiding it, awaited his return. He came back, still clutching the small end of the club, and dumped several pieces of fuel in the stove.

"I guess I'll go now," he muttered in a low tone, staring the woman in the face. "But I'll be back tonight to deal with your husband."

Stockwell reported the matter to Chief Marx, and since then two officers have watched the home, but as yet have not seen the stranger.

The report sent out that the dainty young women of this city's "400" had become smitten on Harold Jeffreys, the negro who has been singing in the Temple Vaudet for several weeks, and that the Ethiopian lad gently ignored the many requests for his hand coming from the "fair ones," has aroused the indignation of the young people to such an extent that Jeffreys has lost his job and must leave Port Huron immediately.

A delegation of perhaps twenty-five prominent business men and citizens called on Chief of Police Marx and complained of the stories in circulation. The officers went to Manager Wilson of the theater and warned him not to keep Jeffreys around his place. The negro was then ordered to make his getaway as fast as was possible.

From injuries received in a fall into the hold of one of the new steamers under construction at the Great Lakes Engineering company's plant at St. Clair, George Rudolph Bowman is dead.

Russell Baker, aged thirty, arrested in Detroit on a charge of embezzling $9,200 from the Jewell & Vinson Paint company of Dayton, O., told the police that he had lost the money gambling on the handbooks.

Fred Dumouchelle of Windsor, across from Detroit, under sentence for counterfeiting, has written President Roosevelt, begging executive clemency. In his letter he sets forth that he is a poor man, sick, with four small, motherless children dependent on him.

His Mother-In-law Won.

By one of those queer marriage settlements sometimes made in England a young man agreed to pay his wife's mother $100 on the first day of each year. He settled in Canada, and when he came to make the remittance he deducted the amount of the postage and sent her only $99.84. The mother-in-law insisted that she must have the other 16 cents, and after they had quarreled by mail about it for a month or two she had her attorneys bring suit against him in the Ontario courts. She made him pay, too, and stuck him for the cost of the action, though she was obliged to fee her own lawyers. The total expenses of this sixteen cent lawsuit were said to be exactly $612, most of which fell upon the economical son-in-law.

Representative Colby Introduces Primary Bill That Restricts Candidates' Advertising — Members of Junket Crowd Will Leave Grand Rapids For Destinations Monday Night.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 28.—Auditor General Fuller has sent the statement to the house that there will be a deficiency of over a million and a quarter dollars in the state treasury at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1910. His figures are:

Balance on hand in the state treasury Dec. 31, 1908, $921,432.25.

State taxes for 1908, now being collected, $4,193,422.93.

Receipts from other sources will bring the total receipts to July 1, 1909, up to $4,754,069.47.

Estimated amount available July 1, 1909, for the expense of the state government and the board of state institutions, $1,297,063.10.

Estimated expenses for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, $5,768,110.

Estimated deficiency June 30, 1910, $1,399,491.96.

Representative Colby of Detroit, the original primary reformer in the present legislature, has introduced a primay bill of his own drafting, the most important feature of which is the provision to keep down the lawful expenses of candidates for primary nominations.

No Bills or Banners.

The bill restricts a candidate printing two cards not larger than 2¼ by 4 inches. Bills, banners and lithographs must not be used. There must be no advertising except in daily, weekly and monthly papers which have been running at least three months before such advertisement is to be inserted. Candidates must not be solicited by tickets for balls, picnics, fairs, raffles or entertainments of any kind, and it shall be unlawful to pay for such tickets.

The amount of newspaper advertising a candidate can use is restricted. No advertising puff must be over two inches in length. Candidates must, within ten days after election, file sworn statements. They are specifically forbidden to spend any money for drinks or cigars for voters, or to give free drinks or cigars to voters. All votes cast for candidates violating any of these requirements shall be void.

This expense section, or something like it, will quite likely be incorporated in whatever bill to improve the primary law shall be passed.

Senator MacKay's bill fixing the salary of the state superintendent of public instruction at $5,000, the salary of the deputy superintendent at $2,900, and creating the office of supervisors of rural schools with a salary of $2,000 passed the senate, with five dissenting votes.

Under the title of a bill to limit testimony in certain kinds of cases, Senator Ming introduced a bill to stop "brainstorm" defenses in murder trials.

At a conference of members of all committees that will go on the junket to the upper peninsula it was decided to leave Grand Rapids late Monday night. Two Pullman cars will be chartered at $45 a day. The round trip fare will be $24.33. The junketers will stop at the following places in the order named: Mackinaw City, Newberry, Marquette and Calumet. They will return by way of Chicago.

JURY WAS OBDURATE.

Even Moving Pictures Failed to Win Verdict For Defendant.

New York, Jan. 28.—Moving pictures shown as evidence in a suit for damages brought for physical injuries sustained in a street car accident failed to impress a jury in the supreme court, Brooklyn, where a verdict for $9,500 was rendered in favor of ten-year-old Stephen McGorty and against the Coney Island & Brooklyn Railroad company.

The pictures, which were intended to show that the plaintiff had not been so badly injured in his fall from a moving trolley car as to prevent him participating in games calling for agility and strength, were run through a moving picture machine in court.

Rescued by Neighbors.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Jan. 28.—Alone in her home and under quarantine, Mrs. William P. Woolsey came near to being burned to death. The house was gutted by the flames. The woman was rescued by a neighbor.

CUBA AGAIN FREE TODAY.

President Gomez Inaugurated In Havana.

OUR GOVERNMENT CEASES.

With the Sailing of Magoon This Afternoon the Authority of the United States in the Islands Ends, Although the Troops Remains Until April 1.

Havana, Jan. 28.—With the administration of the oath of office at noon today to Jose Miguel Gomez, the new president of the republic of Cuba, American occupation of the island ceased, and the history of this country entered on a new era. This afternoon Charles E. Magoon, until today provisional governor of Cuba, will embark for the United States, leaving the government entirely in the hands of President Gomez and his advisers. Most of the 5,000 American soldiers who have occupied the island since 1906 have been sent home, and the remainder will leave by April 1.

The oath of office was administered to President Gomez and Vice President Zayas by President Barreiro of the supreme court of Cuba in the presence of a great throng of Cubans and Americans and other foreigners. Today is a general holiday throughout Cuba, and from all the six states men prominent in the political, commercial and social life of the island have gathered to attend the inauguration. The principal officers of the American troops still in Cuba, reenforced by the officers of the American warships in the harbor, made a brave showing in their dress uniforms. The inauguration ceremonies were preceded by a parade of the rural guards and other Cuban troops, in which the American soldiers did not participate, as it was thought that their presence in the procession might recall too strongly the fact that for more than two years the island has been under foreign domination.

At the close of the ceremonies President Gomez was warmly congratulated by the foreign envoys, who extended to him the good wishes of their respective governments for the welfare of his country. A conspicuous figure was Mgr. Averal, representing the Vatican. Many messages of congratulation were received, notably from President Roosevelt and William H. Taft, president elect of the United States. He has many friends among prominent Cubans.

Battleships Salute Gomez.

Word of the taking of the oath of office by President Gomez was sent to the American battleships Maine and Massachusetts, lying in the harbor as representatives of the United States government. Immediately the shores of the harbor began to echo with the reports of a presidential salute fired in honor of the new president by the three vessels.

The second American occupation of Cuba by the United States began in September, 1906, when the resignation of President Tomas Estrada Palma, since deceased, was followed by a short period of disorder in the island. Under the Platt amendment the United States intervened and established a provisional government in the island, with William H. Taft as provisional governor. Judge Taft was succeeded in October, 1906, by Charles E. Magoon.

PUTS NEWBERRY PLANS IN SHADE

President Goes Over Naval Secretary's Head.

ROOSEVELT NAMES COMMITTEE

To Consider Needs of Navy—Head of Department, Who Had Just Issued Orders For Like Purpose, Had Not Heard of Chief Executive's Intended Move.

Washington, Jan. 28. — President Roosevelt is of the opinion that the organization of the navy department is not such as to bring the best results, and he has just appointed a commission whose announced duty will be "to consider certain needs of the navy."

The president's action was somewhat of a surprise in view of the fact that the members of the commision he appointed two weeks ago met at Washington and endorsed Secretary Newberry's plan of reorganization and in view also of the authorization by the senate of an inquiry in the expenditures, conduct of business and the need, if any, of legislation to improve the administration of the navy department.

Announcement of the president's action was entirely unexpected at the navy department. To Secretary Newberry, who had issued an order carrying out his proposed plan, with particular reference to the navy yards, it was the biggest surprise. He declared that he was not aware that the president had taken such action, had not seen the letter of appointment addressed to the various members of the commission and did not know the purport of the letter addressed to him. His first information on the subject had come from the press.

The president has sent identical letters to each of the eight members of the commission, which is headed by Paul Morton, former secretary of the navy, the other members being Justice Moody, also a former secretary of the navy; Judge A. G. Dayton, formerly chairman of the house naval affairs committee, and Rear Admirals S. B. Luce, A. T. Mahan, William M. Folger, Robley D. Evans and William S Cowles, all of whom are on the retired list.

The president sets out certain subjects for the commission to consider under two general heads, first, as to the fundamental principles of an organization that will insure an efficient preparation for war in time of peace and, secondly, specific recommendations as to the changes in the present organization that will accomplish this result.

Preceding by several hours the president's announcement was the issuance of a general order by Secretary Newberry, which had been approved by the president, designed to carry into effect the secretary's naval reorganizatoin plans, so far as they pertain to the navy yards and naval stations.

The essential features contemplate the abolishment of the bureau system in the navy yards that unnecessary work may be avoided and simpler methods of administration prevail, the enlargement of the general board of the navy and reorganization of the board on construction so that there may be more complete co-ordination in the work of the navy department and more general representation on these important boards.

MINE IS BURNING.

Robert Gage Colliery at St. Charles Badly Damaged.

St. Charles, Mich., Jan. 28.—More than $8,000 will be the damage to the mine of Robert Gage, situated in the center of this village, before the fire, which started in the main shaft, is extinguished. The flames are still raging.

The fire was caused by defective electric wiring in the motor room, near the main shaft.

All of the timber in the shafts has been destroyed.

DIED WRITING HIS NAME.

Man Sought to Make Known His Identity to Policeman.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 28.—John Plunkkoal, a Hollander, aged fifty, died suddenly of heart disease at the corner of Oakes and Commerce street.

A policeman who saw him fall hurried to the corner and saw Plunkoal trying to write his name on a piece of paper so as to assure his identification, but he died when he had made only an illegible scrawl. He was a laborer and leaves a family.

WOMAN DOCTOR ARRESTED.

Charged With Manslaughter In Case of Girl's Death.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 28.—Dr. Eliza Landau, in whose place at 184 Howard street Etta Sowler, aged seventeen, died, has been arrested by detectives and locked up at central station, charged with manslaughter.

The woman denies all knowledge of the circumstances attending the girl's death and adheres steadfastly to her first story, in which she claimed that Ettie was brought to her place last Saturday by her mother, who asked for a room and said nothing of the girl's condition.

Mrs. Kate Durance, the mother, who lives in Bothwell, Can., admits that she took her daughter to Dr. Landau's for an operation and implicates the woman. She is being detained at the central station as a witness.

EX-TREASURER GLAZIER GUILTY.

Misappropriated State's Funds to Extent of $685,000.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 28.—Frank P. Glazier, former state treasurer, has been found guilty of misappropriating $685,000 of the state's funds by a jury before Judge Wiest here, and he faces a ten year term in prison.

Foreman Jacob W. Niebling, an Okemos farmer, read the verdict in the court.

The courtroom was only about half filled when the jury reported. Glazier, his wife and son, Harold, were present. The defendant received the verdict without a perceptible tremor. Mrs. Glazier wept bitterly.

Immediately on announcement of the verdict the defendant's counsel asked for time to prepare a bill of exceptions to the supreme court, which was granted.

Anticipating a possible verdict of guilty, counsel on both sides last Friday agreed that bail should be continued until a decision was reached in the supreme court. His present bail is $15,000.

TO HARNESS MANISTEE.

Big Water Power Project Is Under Way In Northern City.

Manistee, Mich., Jan. 28.—The Manistee river, just above the Pere Marquette crossing at High bridge, about eighteen miles northeast of this city, is to be harnessed and electrical power developed to supply this city and some of the outlying country. The Manistee County Electric company, although capitalized at but $30,000, will, as soon as the waters can be curbed, spend between two and three million dollars on river improvements.

The organization is headed by E. N. Salling, owner of the property; R. W. Smith, vice president, and Clyde J. Holmes, secretary and treasurer. Several of the best known capitalists in the state are also said to be behind the venture.

SENATOR SMITH PROTESTS.

Wants Soo Waterpower Rights Specified In Treaty.

Washington, Jan. 28.—After devoting over four hours to a consideration of the Canadian waterways treaty Wednesday the senate adjourned without having made any substantial progress in the ratification of the instrument.

The treaty probably will be considered daily until it is voted on. Most of the time of the executive session was consumed by Senator William Alden Smith, who insisted that the treaty should not be ratified without a provision fixing a divison of the interests of Canada and the United States in the 6,203,000 tons horsepower provided by the rapids in the St. Mary's river.

He showed that only 1 per cent of the flow of the river is required to operate the locks at Sault Ste. Marie, leaving the remainder of the vast flow to be utilized for power purposes. To leave this division of the power undetermined at this time, he declared, would be to leave a vexing question open for the future, and he made plain his determination to fight the treaty. If, as a matter of right, he said, 75 per cent of the power belongs to the United States, as he was satisfied it did, he wanted that fact specified in the treaty.

Senator Lodge defended the treatry on the ground that the disposition of water rights related to a question of boundary and could be settled later.

Mental Hygiene

When Sickness Is in the House. Simple and Easy Method of Treating Insomnia—Influence of Mind on Body—Hygienic Thoughts.

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.

THERE is no place where the power of suggestion for good or for ill may make itself so strongly felt as in the sickroom. The slightest look, the most careless word, may improve the patient's chances for recovery or may have the opposite effect. Too much sympathy is sometimes worse than too little. Especially should all signs of anxiety be repressed as far as possible.

The reason for this is that the patient, if he sees his friends moving in and out of the sickroom with bated breath and a general expression of all consuming dread, will be apt to imagine himself much worse than he really is and may become so seriously alarmed about his condition as to nullify all efforts to bring him back to health. Physicians, recognizing this danger, often insist, even when their patient's condition is not at all critical, that he be left entirely to the care of a trained nurse in order that his anxious relatives shall have no opportunity of betraying their anxiety in his presence and thus reacting unfavorably.

On the other hand, cheerful visitors, people with radiant smiles and who seem to generate an atmosphere of confidence, are of the greatest help to an invalid in his battle for health. They imbue him with the conviction that all is going well, that he has nothing to fear and that a favorable outcome is assured. Their sunny "Well, you are looking well today!" is itself a powerful suggestion for good, whereas an anxious "Poor fellow, how pale you look!" can only create a feeling of alarm and panic. Those who are ill, it cannot be too often reiterated, are more than ordinarily suggestible and dependent on the decisive word of others.

Similarly care should be taken to make an invalid's material environment as attractive as circumstances permit. Above all, medicine bottles, glasses, etc., should be kept well out of sight, as otherwise they will be perpetual reminders of his condition and tend to set up auto-suggestions aggravating it. If they cannot be conveniently kept in the hall or an adjoining room, they should at least be concealed behind a vase of flowers, a pile of books or a screen or placed on a table at the head of the bed where the patient will not be constantly seeing them. There should be no discussion of his case in his presence; whispering should be avoided unless audible conversation will disturb him, in which case it is just as well to keep out of the room altogether.

How to Woo Sleep.

Sleeplessness is an ill from which nobody is at all times exempt, and it is just as well to bear in mind a simple device by which even the most stubborn case of insomnia may be brought to terms. This consists in the quiet, monotonous repetition of the three little words, "Go to sleep!" A comfortable, restful position should be chosen, and then, with the eyes closed and the mind as passive as possible, these three words should be mentally repeated over and over again.

At first, when the mind is weakened by nervousness or is in an unusual state of activity, it may be somewhat difficult to concentrate attention on the sleep bringing phrase, but patient perseverance, coupled with firm belief that sleep will actually be secured, soon puts the mind in the necessary quiescent condition, the blood flows gently through the whole body, the brain loses consciousness, and sleep follows.

The next time you are wakeful try this plan. Don't be discouraged if sleep does not come quickly at the first trial. Keep on using it night after night, and before long you will find yourself going to sleep almost as soon as your head touches the pillow.

Mind and Body.

The mind, says Dr. J. Warren Achorn, is the capital city where the consumers dwell, those lawmakers and manufacturers of thought and nervous impulses. The body is the outlying country. If the country parts are well tilled and cared for by the farmers or makers of healthy physical conditions dwelling in this outlying country, the consumers in the capital city are able to secure what they need to satisfy the wear and tear incident to mental effort or nervous stress of whatever sort. A sound body waits on a sound mind, and the material for repair of the nervous system is furnished by the digestive tract. The converse of this statement has long been known to be almost equally true. The mind, acting through the sympathetic and vaso-motor nerves, affects the secretions of the internal organs, especially of the stomach and bowels; it acts on the kidneys and the heart, on respiration and perspiration and influences the amount of blood flowing through the arteries.

Hygienic Thoughts.

Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie.—Shakespeare.

Life is invested with inevitable conditions which the unwise seek to dodge.—Emerson.

Exercise the mind with high contemplation and the body with gracious action and so preserve the health of both.—Confucius.

It is said that the Parisian gives up about 20 per cent of his income for taxes.

SUGGESTED BY CHILDREN.

Origin of the Argand Lamp and the Telescope.

Some of our most useful mechanical appliances owe their existence to the ingenuity of children in fashioning their playthings. Argand, who invented a lamp with a wick fitted into a hollow cylinder, was one day busy in his workroom. Sitting before the burning lamp, his little brother was amusing himself by placing a bottomless oil flask over different articles. Suddenly he placed it upon the flame of the lamp, which instantly shot up the long circular neck of the flask with increased brilliancy. Argand did not allow such a suggestive occurrence to escape him. The idea of the lamp chimney almost immediately came into his head, and in a short time his invention was perfected.

The telescope owes its origin to a similar occurrence. The children of a Dutch spectacle maker happened to be playing one day with some of their father's glasses in front of the shop door. Placing two of the glasses together, they peeped through them and were exceedingly astonished to see the weathercock of the neighboring steeple brought within a short distance of their eyes. They were naturally puzzled and called their father to see the strange sight. When the spectacle maker looked through the glasses he was no less surprised than the children had been. He went indoors and thought the matter over, and then the idea occurred to him that he might construct a curious new toy which would give people a good deal of amusement. Not long after the telescope was an accomplished fact.

THE SUBTLE FEMALE.

How She Wheedles and Bullies the Poor Man Creature.

As woman gradually impressed upon man the futility of strutting around in finery and the necessity of being practically useful his garb has become more and more sober and workaday in appearance. Ethnologists tell us that the decorations of primitive man were intended to fascinate feminine eyes, but woman presently began to make it clear that she was not hunting for "a fine, showy article," but something solid and plain and useful, warranted to stand wear and tear. As for the ornamental role, she was going to represent the family herself in that line.

In fact, when one reflects how man has been stripped of gauds and wheedled out of his finperies one by one, one cannot help feeling a tender pity for this victim of feminine self aggrandizement. Poor, timid trembler! A vague, general fear of the female sex haunts him. Afraid of being married against his will, he is circumvented by some subtle female creature who makes him think that it is his will to marry her. An observer remarks that a man very often in running away from the right woman runs straight into the arms of the wrong woman. And the wrong woman, that great opportunist, is always waiting there to block his headlong flight and switch it toward the altar.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Easy Job.

Indifference displayed in the face of the uncertainties and dangers of life is characteristic of the Wessex dwellers in the "Islands of the Vale," according to Eleanor G. Hayden, the author of the book of the title, who supports her statement with a story of humorous turn.

A certain cottage and its old mistress had improved so greatly in comfort and appearance that a visitor shrewdly surmised that the son of the house, a lazy ne'er do well, had turned over a new leaf. He inquired about it.

"Yes, sir, my son's in work now," said the smiling old mother. "Takes good money, he does, too. All he has to do is to go twice a day to the circus and put his head in the lion's mouth. The rest of the time he has to himself."

Not Infectious.

I used to be very much afraid that my children while playing with others would be exposed to some contagious disease, and they were constantly on the lookout for trouble of this kind.

One day little Louise, aged four, came rushing in from the street where she had been playing with a crowd of children. In a very excited manner she burst out, "Well, mother, two of the Meyers children have something, but sister says she don't think we'll catch it, though."

"Well, what is it, darling?" I asked.

"It's the pigeon toes," she replied.—Dellenafor.

How Pike Kill Perch.

From careful observation I am satisfied that pike kill their prey before swallowing them, and they do this by holding whatever fish they have secured crossways in their powerful jaws for some time before bolting it. I once watched a pike hold a perch in this way for twenty minutes, and then he moved off out of sight, but from five to ten minutes is the usual time.—W. H. Armistead in "Trout Waters, Management and Angling."

FLOWERS OF SPEECH.

An Englishman's Address at a Ladies' Seminary in Siam.

The influential Englishman in Siam flattered himself that he had a very decent knowledge of the language and was ready to do great things. He had already ordered coffee from his hotel waiter with success and asked the boy to bring up his boots.

Now, influential Englishmen in Siam are not as common as cockroaches, and that afternoon the distinguished visitor was requested by a friend to deliver an address on "England" at the only ladies' seminary in the country. Confidently he accepted.

He began famously. Every one applauded and smiled. But gradually as he proceeded he noticed consternation overspreading the countenances of his listeners.

"What's the trouble?" he whispered in English anxiously to his friend on the platform.

"Trouble!" exclaimed the friend hotly. "Why, the trouble is what you are saying."

"But," protested the speaker, "I am saying, 'I am delighted to see so many young ladies rising to intellectual heights, with fine brains and large appreciation.'"

"Oh, no, you're not," corrected the friend. "You're saying, 'I am pleased to see so many small lionesses growing large and fat, with big noses and huge feet!'"—London Tit-Bits.

WHEN YOU WEEP.

The Way That Tears Act Upon the Human Organism.

Professor Waynbaum, M. D., of Paris publishes some queer facts regarding the nature and purpose of tears, coming to the conclusion that tears act upon the human organism "like chloroform, ether or alcohol."

"When a human being gives way to sorrow," says Dr. Waynbaum, "the blood pressure in the brain decreases. The tear helps in this process, which benumbs the brain for the time being, causing passiveness of the soul almost approaching indifference.

"Tears are blood, changing color by their passage through the lachrymal glands. One can drown his sorrow in tears as one can benumb his senses by the use of alcohol or drugs. When a person cries the facial muscles contract and the appearance of the face changes, which action facilitates the white blood letting, driving the blood particles into the lachrymal gland, from which they issue in the shape of tears.

"Children whose nervous system is particularly tender derive great benefit from crying occasionally. The act of crying relieves their brains. The same may be said with respect to women."

The professor likewise explains why laughter sometimes produces tears, but the explanation is too technical for reproduction.

The Only Safe Way.

"No, I can't stay any longer," he said, with determination.

"What difference does an hour or so make now?" asked a member of the party. "Your wife will be in bed and asleep, and if she wakes up she won't know what time it is."

"Quite right, quite right," he returned. "I can fool my wife almost any time as long as I get home before breakfast. Why, I've gone home when the sun was up, kept the blinds shut, lit the gas and made her think that it was a little after 12. But, gentlemen, I can't fool the baby. I can make the room as dark as I please, but it won't make the baby sleep a minute later than usual, and when she wakes up hungry it comes pretty close to being morning, and my wife knows it. Gentlemen," he added as he bowed himself out, "I make it a rule to get home before the baby wakes. It's the only safe way."

The Other Course.

Solicitor—And I am sure you will find, madam, that this is the best course to adopt in the event of your friendly letter failing to produce the effect we desire. Client—Yes, I see, Mr. Jones. If I cannot get what I want by fair means, I must put the matter unreservedly into your hands.—Punch.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be coddled to cure it afterwards. 25 be sure. Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off those early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Fine for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Preventics may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child. If there is feverishness, night or day, Preventics probably like Preventics' greatest admirer. Sold in 10 boxes for 25c, pocket, also in 50c boxes at all Druggists. MRS. J. WILSON MATTHEWS.

Mary Sherman was born in Canadaigua, Ontario, Co., N. Y., August 4, 1834. She came to Tecumseh when a young lady and was married to Jacob Wilson Matthews Sept. 5th, 1852, and died at the home of Mrs. A. VanValkenburg, four miles south-west of Tecumseh Wednesday, Jan. 27.

"Smooth the locks of silver hair
On this mother's brow, with tenderest care.
Gather the robe in final fold
Around the form so still and cold;
Lay on her bosom, pure as snow,
The fairest, sweetest flowers that grow.
Kiss her and leave her our hearts delight;
Her pain is over, she sleeps to-night."

After a long, busy and useful life she died as she had lived—honored, trusted and loved. She reared her own monument while she lived, in the hearts of all who knew her. Her life was completed if work all done, and well done constitutes completion. Her Christian life was beautiful from its beginning to its close, and through all the vicissitudes and sorrows that she met in the way, her faith in God never wavered. She was a member of the Methodist church, where, when it was possible, she was a regular attendant.

She leaves to mourn her loss one step daughter, Mrs. A. VanValkenburg and family and two grand son's LeRoy and Howard Matthews of Tecumseh, and one cousin Mrs. J. C Keachie of Bay City, who was with her, tenderly caring for her, when the final summons came.

Red lights were burned, and the tableau was a beautiful sight. supper was served, and a dance followed, music being furnished by Elmer Mellon and Metta McKinney.

PRODUCE EXCHANGE

Hold Meeting in Philadelphia

We clip the following item from the Philadelphia Commerical List and Price Current in regard to the annual meeting of the Philadelphia Produce Exchange held in Philadelphia Wednesday Jan. 20, when C. M. Drake was elected vice president of the Exchange. Mr. Drake is quite well known in Tecumseh, being owner of considerable property here and in Clinton: Vice President Clifford M. Drake is a member of the firm of Wm. R. Brice & Co., and has been identified with the butter and egg trade for about 30 years. He is an energetic hustler and has built up a big business for the house with which he is connected. He is very popular with the members of the trade and will make an exceptionally capable officers of the Exchange.

The February number of the Ladies World has a cover by Charlotte Weber Ditzler, which is one of the most attractive we have see, and the contents are of the same high order. Of course there is a Lincoln story, but it is a most interesting one, telling of his early life and taking him up only to the time of his marriage with Mary Todd. It is written by Clara E. Laughin, and has some very effective pictures by Lorenz. There is a usual collection of good fiction, the writers being Annie Hamilton Donnell, Gustva Kobbe, Susie Bouchelle Wight, Grace MacGowan Cooke and Albert Bigelow Paine; and the departments of Fashions and Dressmaking, Health, Artistic Needlework, and Society are full of seasonable advice. The household interests are fully covered in a plain, practical kind of way, and in a special article called "The New Road," is given the best explanation of the new thought and Emmanuel Movements that we have seen.

Editors of magazines publishing novelettes have long complained of the difficulty of securing satisfactory stories of this type, owing to the fact that most writers find it just as easy and more profitable to expand a plot suitable for novelettes, into a book, too long for magazine use. Be this as it may, Lippincott's seems to have solved the problem, for in it has appeared a long series of fine complete novels, and instead of falling off the quality seems to be steadily improving. The February issue contains a powerful tale of army life by General Charles King. It is entitled "Lanier of the Cavalry," and portrays army life with the same vigor and naturalness which characterized "The Colonel's Daughter," "Captain Blake," and other famous books by this author. There is a well sustained mystery in "Lanier of the Cavalry" as well as a charming love story—two charming love stories, in fact. The story will probably be brought out in book form later, as are so many of the Lippincott novelettes.

THE RIVER NILE.

Ancient Greeks and the Process of Sterilizing Water.

The ancient Greeks already recommended the use of sterilized water. Rufus of Ephesus, in the first century of this era, taught that "all water from rivers and ponds is bad except that from the Nile. Water from rivers which flow through unhealthy soil, stagnant water and that which flows near public bathing places is harmful. The best water is that which has been boiled in baked earthenware vessels, cooled and then heated a second time before drinking."

This hygienic prescription was intended both for healthy and sick people, since it was applied to the armies:

"During marches and in camps pits must be dug successively from the highest point to the lowest level of the place. These holes should be lined with clay such as is used for making pottery and the water should be made to percolate through it. The water will leave all its impurities in these pits."

It may be inquired how the ancient Greeks, knowing the processes of sterilization and filtration of water which they applied to that of the most limpid rivers, should have drunk without precautions the water of the Nile, which our microscopes allow us to declare "sound," but which is in appearance the most worthy of suspicion of all and is so muddy, so yellow, that it resembles wine.—Gazette des Eaux.

A Dog Story.

At a farmhouse at which we have been staying a terrier, Rough, shares always his master's first breakfast, the bread and cream accompanying a cup of tea. Three corners he breaks off and gives to Rough, who eats the first two. Off the third he licks the cream, then carries the crust to a hen who each morning comes across the field where the fowls are kept and at the gate awaits her friend's arrival. Should others of the hens appear, Rough "barks them off" while his favorite devours her portion.—London Spectator.

A Tremendous Task.

"So you are going to study law?"

"Yes."

"Going to make a specialty of criminal law?"

"No."

"Corporation law?"

"No. Both are too easy. What I want is to be accurately and reliably informed as to what months in the year and days in the week it is permitted to shoot certain game in the various sections of the country."—Washington Star.

A Patron of Art.

"So you enjoy reading all the extravagant praise that is printed about that opera singer?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "It kind of helps me to feel that maybe those tickets were worth what I paid for 'em."—Washington Star.

Poor Jones!

Missionary—Can you give me any information about Deacon Jones, who labored among your people three years ago? Cannibal—Well, the last I heard about him he had gone into consumption.—Judge.

Why Cleveland Wasn't in the Civil War

The story of why Grover Cleveland did not go to war is told by George F. Parker in McClures Magazine for February. Mr. Cleveland, who had been criticised for his order for the return of the battle flags taken during the Civil War, said to Mr. Parker:

"See how I am misjuded. It is charged in the press that I had no sympathy with the Union armies. When the war came they were three men of fighting age in our family. We were poor, and mother and sisters depended on us for support. We held a family counsel and decided that two of us should enlist in the Union army and the third stay home for the support of the family. We decided it by drawing cuts. The two long and one short pieces of paper were put by mother in the leaves in the old family Bible. She held it while we drew. My two brothers drew the long slips, and at once enlisted, and I abided by my duty to the helpless women.

A Subtitute for Matrimony

"Successful business girls and women" says Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson in Woman's Home Companion for February "are to well off financially to want to marry.

"The girl who earns twelve, fifteen or twenty dollars a week sets for herself a standard of living, dress and small luxuries which would require a husband earning twenty-five thirty and fifty dollars respectively. She regards as necessities what her mother considered luxuries. If a man who is earning only as much as the girl or a few dollars more a week asks her to marry him, he knows that the girl must either deprive herself of some things she has grown to regard as necessities or she must continue to work. And there is many a homehungry young man to day to proud to allow his wife to work.

An Unwelcome Visitor

Marion Warner Wildman has a sympathetic study of childhood in the February Metropolitan Magazine that cannot fail to make an appeal to those who remember the many ways in which their own youthful and unwelcome duties were often avoided. The song of the corn, which embodies both the unconscious love of nature and the joy of being alone, fare from uncongenial companionship, will be read with a rare joy by old and young.

An Old Coin

Joseph Wilson found an old coin, on his farm the other day, while digging a ditch, that may prove to be of a great deal of value. It was about the size of our $.50 pieces, is bronze and bears the date of 1625.

The head is that of a Roman General and by referring to the Bible, Mr. Wilson has found that the coin was in circulation 92 B. C.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE

HELD IN TECUMSEH LAST TUESDAY, JAN. 26, 1909.

General Topics of Great Interest to the Farmer Were Discussed.

One of the most profitable institutes ever held in Tecumseh.

The Tecumseh Farmers' Institute was held in this village Tuesday, Jan. 26th, and was well attended. The morning session was held in Grange hall, Warren G. Shepherd of Ousted county president having charge of the meeting. The program was opened with music and a prayer after which Albert Howard of Tecumseh, gave a very instructive talk on "How to make Hens Pay." Mr. Howard considers a good partner to be the first requisite to success in this line and that partner should be a wife as she can cheer one if the hens don't lay and help spend the money if they do lay. He prefers the leghorn hen for laying and gave sufficient reasons for the preference. Success is attained by strict attention to, and regularity in feeding. A hen cannot be neglected and made to pay. Hoyt E Whelan of Tipton, led an interesting discussion in which Mr. Palmer of Lenawee Junction, Mr. Bert VanNess of Tecumseh, and others took part.

Prof. Shaw of the M. A. C. spoke on "The Methods of Stock Improvement." Only the best stock should be kept for breeding purposes. Out of one and three quarter millions of cattle in this state, only a few are registered. Prof. Shaw urges the farmers to employ only pure bred stock for breeding purposes and know what they are using. The meeting adjourned for the chicken pie dinner which was served by the ladies of the Tecumseh Grange and it was decided to hold the remaining sessions in Witherell hall in order to seat the large numbers in attendance.

The afternoon session was opened with music by the Grange ladies. H. L. Moore of Palmyra, was unable to be present, but his subject, "Potatoes and How to Grow Them" was handled very well by Arthur Green of Raisin, who gave quite explicitly his methods of growing potatoes. Earl McNeil, Abner Wilson and C. H. Bramble of Tecumseh and David Woodward of Clinton, took part in the discussion and many good ideas were brought out in regard to the spraying the plants for blighting and fertilizing. Miss Margaret Waldron gave a recitation and responded to a hearty encore.

Prof. Shaw then spoke at length on the subject "Most Profitable Methods of Beef Production." He said that the tendency of the farmers in Michigan seemed to be toward dairying, he did not deem it practical for the farmer in Southern Michigan under the present conditions. Beef production is more practical and conditions perfect. He gave statistics showing the results of experiments at the M. A. C. which proved that the pail-fed calf can be raised at a greater profit than the calf which runs with the mother.

George Holloway of Holloway, led the discussion. He buys young cattle in Chicago, feeding shocked corn and clover hay and finds it profitable. A lively discussion followed and Prof. Shaw was called upon to answer a number of questions. The meeting was adjourned till 7 p. m. at which time the hall was again filled.

Prof. Shaw wished to catch an early train, therefore his subject, "Work of the Agricultural College and Experiment Station" was taken up first. In a few words he gave a definite idea of the size of the farm, the buildings and the number of courses open to the student. Twenty per cent of the M. A. C. graduates go directly back to the farm. Lynne Rogers accompanied by Miss Rogers, rendered two beautiful violin solos after which Horace Eaton of Tecumseh, gave some reminiscences of M. A. C. in its early day. Mr. Eaton was a student at the college in 1863-4.

Miss Anna Ferguson recited "Dad Says So, Anyhow," and was heartily encored. M. W. Hensel not being able to be present, his subject was presented by D. T. Hall on "Teaching Farm Topics in the Rural Schools." Mr. Hall advises teaching manual training and farm topics in the district schools and also in high schools. In place of the five years of history now taught in the high school, Mr. Hall would like to see only two years of history with one of manual training, one of domestic science and one of farm topics. C. H. Bramble continued the discussion of this interesting subject with a review of the work done in Wisconsin along this line. This closed the program and the meeting was adjourned.

OLD MORTGAGE

Abstract from an Old Mortgage Recorded in Lenawee County.

JESSE OSBORN TO TURNER STILSON, DATED DEC. 19, 1825.

Consideration $600.00; payable in stocks and iron.

In the present day and age, it is very interesting to occasionally look back into the pioneer times and see the methods of doing business when not only were people poor, but money itself not in common circulation, even among those who might locally be considered well to do in worldly goods.

It seldom occurs to us that this very community, not so many years ago, was dependent upon live stock and food stuff and farming utensils for purposes of exchange in many of the ordinary business transactions of every day life.

Mr. Wood in examining an abstract which was recently submitted to him, had his curiosity aroused by a reference to an old mortgage, examined the record on his next call at the County Seat and gives us the following abstract of the first mortgage recorded in Lenawee County.

Jesse Osborn to Turner Stilson	Dated Dec. 19th., 1825 Recorded: Apr. 28th., 1827 in Liber "A" of Mortgages, page 1.

CONSIDERATION—$600.00.

Land situate in Tecumseh, County of Lenawee and Territory of Michigan, described as the north one-half of the west one-half of the south-east quarter of Section twenty-eight, Range four east, Township five south. The conditions of the mortgage instead of requiring the payment of money were as follows:

"Pay or caused to be paid" etc, "the sum of one hundred and forty dollars in neat stock, one hog of one hundred pounds in weight, four hogs each weighing eighty pounds, twelve pigs each weighing eighteen pounds-one set of plough irons weighing thirty six pounds—Fourteen drag teeth weighing eighty-three pounds and one chain weighing twenty-one pounds at expiration of five years from the date hereof agreeably to a certain writing obligatory bearing date even herewith" * * * "Well and truly do perform and execute certain work and labour in all respects agreeably to the above mentioned writing obligatory" etc.

The witnesses to this paper were C.N. Ormsby and Robert Master. And the paper was acknowledged before Caleb N. Ormsby, J. P. George Spafford who was then occupying the office, now known as Register of Deeds, subscribed the certificate of registration, as "Register of Probate."

Those of our subscribers who have read "Pigs is Pigs," with that skit as an interest table can fill in their long winter evenings estimating the number of the herd of swine it would now take to pay the interest on this mortgage.

DEBATE AT STANFORD UNIVERSITY.

Bertram Wood One of the Number.

The following clipping was taken from the "San Francisco Call," and relates to an old Tecumseh boy, Bertram Wood.

The debating season at Stanford university will be opened tomorrow evening, when the final tryout for the Carnot trio that will represent Stanford against the blue and gold on February 5 will be selected.

Interest is high in debating at Stanford this year and the list of men who have signed up for places on the Carnot team is large. The debate will be conducted along the same lines tomorrow night as will the intercollegiate affair. The men who will debate are D. C. Boyd, a graduate; R. B. Murphy, a graduate; T. Bennett; '08; J. E. Shelton, '08; R. M. Ford, '10; C. C. Shoemaker, '10; F. B. Wood, '10; G. F. Morgan, '10; F. H. Hilton, '11, and N. C. Wilson, '12. The judges are: Prof. F. C. Woodward, head of the law school; Prof. C. A. Huston of the law department, and R. M. Alden of the English department.

TECUMSEH DRIVING CLUB MET TUESDAY EVENING IN THE COUNCIL ROOMS.

The Tecumseh Driving club held their annual meeting in the council rooms Tuesday evening. There was a large number in attendance. It was decided to hold matinees at the driving park, during the coming season. The officers chosen for the club were:

Pres.—F. D. Teachout.
Treas.—C. A. Wright.
Sec.—Charles Bidwell.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS.

Tipton Maccabee Officers were Installated, by Deputy A. L. McCutcheon, Assisted by Tecumseh Officers.

Last Tuesday evening about 25 of the guards, and those taking part in the floor work for the installation of the Maccabee officers, accepted an invitation to go to Tipton and put on the floor work for the installation of the Sir Knights of the Tipton tent.

A delightful banquet was served in Grange hall at 7 o'clock, to which over 250 members and their families and guests did ample justice.

After the supper the following program was rendered, under the direction of the Sir Knights.

Music, Banjo and mouth organ—Bert Billington, Murray Richardson.
Rec., "Dewey at Manilla"—Geo. Buell.
Song—Irving Luce.
Piano Solo—Earl Luce.
Music—Billington and Richardson.
Solo—Robert Linton.
Dialogue—"The Two Vagrants."

At the conclusion of the program the company went to Lewis hall where the ceremonies of installation took place. District Deputy A. L. McCutcheon of Detroit acted as great installing officer and was ably assisted by Sir Knight Floyd Freeman as Great Master at Arms and Orley C. Wood as Great Chaplain, the Tecumseh guards, eight Sir Knights, and eight ladies and two color bearers.

At the close of the work the guards gave their drill, which was followed by a short address by Deputy McCutcheon. An informal dance was enjoyed by the company.

The most vital article that Everybody's Magazine has published since the "Frenzied Finance', days is "The Poison of the Street," by Frederick S. Dickson, in the February number. It strikes a blow, and a telling one, at margin gambling in Wall Street, and echoes the cry of the many who have "tried their luck" and been lured on to destruction. The article is straight from the shoulder and authoritative.

Charles Edward Russell has an article "The Slum as a Natioal Asset," contrasting the conditions of our own conditions of our congested and noisome tenement districts with the healthy and happy conditions prevailing in German cities, particularly Berlin.

ASTHMA VANISHES

So Does Catarrh, Croup, Hay Fever and Bronchitis

Hyomei is a confidence creator. The first time you breathe in this powerful yet soothing, antiseptic air, you will know that it has marvelous curative virtues. There is nothing disagreeable about Hyomei. It is a very pleasant and prompt remedy for catarrh, colds, asthma, croup, bronchitis, etc.

If your head is so stuffed with mucous that you cannot breathe a particle of air through your nostrils, Hyomei will open them up and give relief in five minutes.

Why will sensible people suffer longer, why will they wheeze and hawk and spit and smother, when C. A. Wright & Son will guarantee Hyomei to cure or money back. $1.00 is all C. A. Wright & Son asks for a complete outfit.

"I have used Hyomei for hay fever, and can pronounce it the best relief for this trouble that I ever tried or heard of. I have had this malady for years, and have doctored and used many remedies, but Hyomei is far ahead of any of the others, and has my hearty endorsement."—Mrs M. S. Martin, Cassopolis, Mich.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First—Don't Delay—Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Tecumseh residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Tecumseh citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

John B. Smith, Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For several years I suffered a great deal from rheumatism and backache. My kidneys were badly disordered and I knew that they caused all my trouble. About two years ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time I was relieved. I have had no serious attacks of the trouble since. Shortly after using Doan's Kidney Pills I told of my experience through the local papers and at this time I am glad to verify that statement and again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

STUNTED OAKS.

Miniature Trees That Are Grown In China Bowls.

In the window of a florist stood some quaint china bowls, in each of which grew a tree—not a shrub, but a full sized tree, dating back many years. "Yes," replied the florist to the writer's inquiry, "they are real trees—oaks, maples and beech trees. We get them from Japan, where the secret of how to rear them is known only to a few. They are raised from seeds or specially selected cuttings, which are watched and tended with that marvelous patience inherent in the eastern races. Fifty years may pass before the tree is considered salable. During this period the plant is trained and its natural tendencies subjugated to the will of the rearer. The gardener prunes and trims and rears and directs with what Carlyle called genius—'an infinite capacity for taking pains.' A wayward twig may be bound up for two or three years to insure its correct growth. Periodically the tree is repotted. Each time this happens the roots are carefully examined and useless fiber cut away. Everything is done to concentrate the life of the tree in the smallest possible space. And in time, after years of labor, the plant loses its ability to send out long, lusty shoots and becomes a delightful miniature of its larger brethren."—Montreal Standard.

THE NIGERIAN BABY.

Water Soaked Inside and Outside at the Morning Toilet.

Matrons of the west may be interested to hear the details of the Nigerian native baby's morning toilet. Anything over three months old is no longer a "baby" to the native materfamilias and is bathed with the other children, generally a numerous brood, in the chill morning air before sunrise. The little mite yells lustily while the cold water is splashed over its brown body and generally continues the chorus when put aside to dry. Towels do not form part of the household equipment. The bathing process finished, the infants are subjected to a sort of water cure treatment. The mother seizes a child, scoops up a handful of water and, using her thumb as a kind of spout, squirts it with extraordinary dexterity into the youngster's mouth and down its throat. Protests in the shape of loud gurgles, horrible chokings and desperate struggling are quite unheeded. The steady stream of water continues to pour down the child's throat until the mother's practiced touch on the patient's distended stomach tells her that the limit of capacity has been reached. All babies are submitted to this treatment, which is believed to have a most strengthening effect.—London Standard.

Advice to Smokers.

Here are a number of don'ts for smokers, some of which no doubt will surprise a good many men: Don't smoke directly after a meal. There is the most irresistible craving to smoke, but it is wiser to wait a half hour or an hour. Don't smoke out of doors in a high wind or in cold, frosty weather. In the former case it is dangerous, and in the latter it cracks the lips and prevents proper breathing. Don't smoke with the cigar or pipe held at the corner of the mouth. This excites the secretion of more saliva than when the cigar or pipe is held straight in front. And, above all, don't get in the bad habit of expectorating frequently when smoking. It is quite unnecessary and merely a habit and harmful.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Ignorant, but Careful.

"Ignorance nearly always makes fools of us," said a lecturer. "I remember a man, ignorant of etiquette, who once sat beside me at a public dinner. I noticed that this man, as soon as he was seated, took up one by one the knives at the right of his plate and began to try their edges on his thumb. A waiter behind him leaned forward and said in a hurt tone:

"'The knives are all sharp, sir.'

"'The point is,' said my neighbor, 'I'm looking for a blunt one. Last time I attended a banquet here I cut my mouth.'"

An Obedient Tiger.

"How entire," remarks the Londo Globe, "is the confidence of the nativ East Indian in the government may b gathered from the following anecdote which comes from Lahore: A tiger had escaped from the zoological gardens, and its keeper, hoping to lure it back, followed it. When all other inducements had failed, he lifted up his voice and solemnly adjured it in the name of the British government, to which it belonged, to come back to its cage. The tiger, it is needless to add, obeyed at once."

Foul or Fair Weather.

Small Wallace accepted an invitation to a party, as follows:

"Dear Louis—I will come to your party if it don't rain" (then, thinking that he might have to stay at home in that case), "and if it does."—Delineator.

A Real Tumbler.

"I saw a goblet today made of bone."

"Pshaw! I saw a tumbler made of flesh and blood last night."

"Where?"

"At the circus."

Ther is no case on record of a cough, cold or la grippe developing into pneumonia after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it cures the most obstinate deep seated coughs and colds. Why take anything else. Sold by all druggists.

REV. GEORGE A. E. TROUTMAN.

I was cured of a bad case of catarrh when nothing else that I tried had any effect. My wife was cured from a severe case of la grippe, and we feel that the least we can do is to gratefully acknowledge the merit of Peruna.

Throat Trouble.

Rev. H. W. Tate, 920 Lincoln Avenue, Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "For several years I have been troubled with a peculiar spasmodic affection of the throat. It would seize me suddenly and for a few minutes I would be unable to speak audibly, and my breath would be greatly interfered with. I would be obliged to gasp for breath.

"I finally concluded that it was some catarrhal affection which probably excited the spasm. It interfered with my vocation as a preacher, attacking me occasionally in the pulpit.

"I had heard so much about Peruna as a catarrh remedy that I determined to try it. After taking two bottles, my trouble has disappeared. I feel sure that Peruna has greatly benefited me."

Rev. P. E. Swanstrom, Swedish Baptist Pastor, Box 228, Granisburg, Wis., writes that from the use of Peruna he is perfectly well, entirely cured of chronic diarrhea and catarrh.

The Earth's Changes.

The surface of the earth is undergoing steady transformation, largely through the agency of man, but perhaps nowhere is the plant and animal life of the region being more rapidly superseded than in New Zealand. The native Polynesian race, crowded by Europeans, is becoming extinct. Many of the imported animals run wild and multiply rapidly at the expense of the native species, even the streams being filled with European and American trout, which grow to great size.

PROTEST AGAINST "BOOZE BANQUET,"

Prohibitionists Object to Wine at Lincoln Dinner.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—National Prohibition party headquarters has issued a protest against what it calls the "booze banquet" to be held at Springfield, Ill., on Feb. 12, in celebration of the centennial of Abraham Lincoln's birthday. It says that the decision of the committee to use wine at the banquet is in defiance of the martyred president's principles. At the banquet, it was announced, many prominent speakers, including several foreign ambassadors, are to be present.

As showing President Lincoln's antipathy to the use of wines or liquors, the Prohibitionists' protest quotes an extract of Lincoln's speech made at his home in Springfield on June 1, 1860, in the presence of the committee from the convention which named him as president. The extract follows:

"Gentlemen, we must pledge our mutual health in the most healthy beverage which God has given to man. It is the only beverage I have ever used or allowed in my family, and I cannot conscientiously depart from it on the present occasion. It is pure Adam's ale from the spring."

All then stood up and drank from cups of cold water, it is said.

WHEN IS MAN DRUNK?

When He Becomes Public Nuisance, Declares Judge.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 28.—Judge Hart in hearing testimony as to the competency of Juror Leigh in the Carmack murder case examined about sixty witnesses. Those for the state were positive that Leigh was drunk when selected.

Defense witnesses admitted that Leigh was a drinking man, that he had taken "a few" the day he was chosen on the jury, but they insisted that he was not drunk within the definition of Judge Hart, that is, he was not making a public nuisance of himself.

Judge Hart's ruling was: "A man is drunk when he is to much under the influence of liquor that he becomes a nuisance to the general public. That will be the standard upon which the court will decide this case."

After both sides had closed, Judge Hart called Juror Leigh, who admitted he had been drinking some, but was not drunk.

ARMSTRONG AND WARNER CONFER

Meet in Detroit and Discuss Warden's Arrest.

GOVERNOR VERY MUCH UPSET

"Allegations, If True, Are Enough to Make One Lose Confidence in Mankind," He Declares—He Summons Prison Board For Conference—Warden Charged With Accepting Bribe.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 1.—Sunday Warden Armstrong of Jackson prison, who had been arrested charged with accepting a bribe, came to Detroit and met Governor Warner. The governor was in the city to attend the public meeting of the Salvation Army at the citadel. The two men were closeted at the Griswold House for some time, and just what transpired is not known. Both refused to discuss the situation, and at the conclusion of the conference Armstrong returned to Jackson.

"I cannot issue a statement until a full and complete investigation has been made," said the governor. "I have sent notice of a meeting to the prison board. I have also asked Attorney General Bird and General Fred W. Green to meet us at the prison at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Wants Full Investigation.

"I desire a full investigation into every part and detail, and I have requested Auditor General Fuller to have State Accountant Hamilton go to the prison to commience examining the accounts and books. A special audit of all books will be made, if the attorney general or the prison board think this course the advisable one to pursue.

Warden Armstrong said:

"I can't make a statement just yet. This whole matter will be fully explained at the meeting of the prison board."

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 1.—When Governor Warner arrived in Lansing, whither he came from Detroit, he said:

"I am completely unnerved by this affair. I have known Allen Armstrong since he was a boy, and he is the last person in the world that I would have suspected of going wrong. If everything is true, it is enought to make a person lose confidence in mankind. I do not look for any crookedness in his books."

The governor left Lansing for Jackson this morning.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 1.—Allen N. Armstrong, warden of the central prison here, was arrested by Sheriff Bean of Jackson county on a warrant sworn to by General Fred W. Green of Ionia, who alleges that Armstrong accepted from him a bribe in connection with a contract in which he (Green) is interested. He was later released under bail in bonds of $6,000.

Arranged a Trap.

The payment by Green to Armstrong of the money was a trap prearranged by Green in conjunction with Attorney General John E. Bird, who had been for several days cognizant of alleged attempts on the part of the warden to extort money from Green's company.

It is thought the board will go no further than to recommend Armstrong's suspension pending investigation on the part of the civil authorities.

Evident cheerfulness of Armstrong on his return from seeing the governor in Detroit is taken by those who saw him as meaning that a strong defense is to be put up and that a hard fight is in prospect.

ORDERED TO LANSING.

National Guard Officers Will Hold Elections There.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 1.—For the first time in the history of the Michigan national guard the line officers and field officers have been ordered to report at Lansing on Feb. 23 for the purpose of electing a colonel, lieutenant colonel and three majors for each of Michigan's three infantry regiments.

Heretofore field officers have been elected at their home stations, but the military authorities deem it advisable and for the best interests of the national guard to order all the commissioned officers to Lansing, where the elections in the different regiments will be held.

The Other Course.

Solicitor—And I am sure you will find, madam, that this is the best course to adopt in the event of your friendly letter failing to produce the effect we desire. Client—Yes, I see, Mr. Jones. If I cannot get what I want by fair means, I must put the matter unreservedly into your hands.—Punch.

THREE DEATHS RESULT.

Fatalities Come With Blizzard Which Sweeps State.

Holland, Mich., Feb. 1.—While shoveling snow in a blinding storm on the main line of the Pere Marquette railway, about twenty-five miles south of Holland, Carl Fehallorn of Grand Junction, a section hand, twenty-seven years old, was struck, hurled twenty-five feet by a huge steam snowplow and instantly killed.

Middleville, Mich., Feb. 1.—While attempting to save his lantern from being smashed by a locomotive, W. H. Moon slipped in the snow and fell beneath the wheels in the Michigan Central yards here, receiving injuries from which he died. Moon was a section boss.

Calumet, Mich., Feb. 1.—In a head-end collision between two rock trains on the Mineral Range railroad, midway between Ahmeek and Allouez, north of here, John Lance, switchman, twenty-six years old, of Laurium, was instantly killed, and John Hughes, engineer, sustained a broken leg.

SAYS THE BOSS BEAT HIM UP.

Man May Die From Punishment Alleged He Received.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 1.—John Wester, aged thirty-three, a laborer employed by the Buick Motor company, is critically ill at his home as the result of a beating he received at the hands of another employe of the automobile firm, and physicians say he may not recover. The injured man blames J. F. McAfee, one of the factory foremen and under whom Wester was employed.

Wester made a sworn statement in which he alleges that Saturday, during the blizzard, he was sent out of doors to work. His clothing, he said, was thin, and, after an hour and a half, he returned to the shop and requested McAfee to put him to work on the inside. An altercation followed, whereupon the latter, according to the sworn statement, jumped on him and beat him.

The officers stated that a warrant will be issued for McAfee.

Want Morse Released.

New York, Feb. 1.—Announcement is made that friends of Charles W. Scores of prominent merchants and bankers, it is said, already have signed the petition.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Carelessness is really laziness under a more polite name.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by all dealers.

1809—The Year of Genius—1809

Centenary of Mendelssohn

Master of the Music of the Heart—His Rise to Fame—Cheap Pie and Climbing

By Oliver Leigh

Copyright, 1909, by the American Press Association

IN these days of unrest there ought to be a universal anthem of praise and gratitude to the minister of sweet solace in music that makes itself understood without our having to grind over scientific studies. In Mendelssohn we have a master of the music of the heart. Others supply the kinds that appeal to the intellect, the passions and the popular idolization of more or less melodious noise. Fashions come and go in the divine art of music as in Parisian millinery, which accounts for the temporary popularity of complicated musicianism over simple melody. There is no fear, however, that Mendelssohn will ever be eclipsed while the heart of the great people responds to the uplifting voice of sympathetic minstrelsy.

He had few troubles in his short life. Perhaps the heaviest was his name, Jakob Ludwig Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy. But it was a great name he was born to on the 3d of February, 1809, in the still standing house at Hamburg. Moses Mendelssohn, his grandfather, was and always will be famous as a pioneer of the reform movement in the Jewish ritual. His dialogue on the immortality of the soul earned him the title, "the modern Plato," and it was translated into almost every modern tongue. One of his sons, Abraham, father of the composer, bewailed his colorless celebrity as in his early life "the son of my father" and later as "the father of my son." Felix was born to a smooth and happy life. By his tenth year he was sufficiently developed as a pianist to appear in public, and at twelve he was a composer. There were regular musical parties with a small orchestra in the Mendelssohn home, and Felix had the felicity of his name in acting as conductor in these performances of his own works. These were symphonies, operas, concertos and quartets. The full rehearsal of his first opera on his fifteenth birthday earned him the high compliment of a skilled judge, who advanced him from "apprentice" to "assistant * * *" in the name of Mozart and of Haydn and of old Bach."

The father and son paid a visit to Paris in 1825. The boy's fame had stirred the curiosity of the great men who herded then in the city of art. In the crowd who paid sincere homage to the lad of sixteen were Moscheles, Halevy, Rossini, Meyerbeer and Cherubini. He was unhappy at finding their general ignorance of German music. On their way to their home, now in Berlin, they called on Goethe, who honored Felix with a piece of verse on his rare gifts. The beautiful overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was written as early as 1826. Of this favorite work Sir George Macfarren, the eminent president of the English Royal Academy of Music, has written the following judgment. Extraordinary as it may seem, it is not extravagant, but remarkable as a tribute to the genius of a youth: "No one piece of music contains so many points of harmony and orchestration that had never been written before as this does, and they have none of them the air of experiment, but all seem to have been written with certainty of their success."

A year later Mendelssohn produced his opera "Camacho's Wedding" in a theater smaller than the Opera House. It was a failure; at least it provoked criticisms too sore for so sensitive a temperament, and by way of getting an idea of his skill in prose and rhyme we quote Sir George Grove's translation of his retort on press censures in general:

If the artist gravely writes,
To sleep it will beguile;
If the artist gayly writes,
It is a vulgar style.

If the artist writes at length,
How sad his hearers' lot!
If the artist briefly writes,
No man will care a jot.

If the artist simply writes,
A fool he's said to be;
If an artist deeply writes,
He's mad, it's plain to see.

In whatsoever way he writes,
He can't please every man.
Therefore let the artist write
How he likes and can.

In his twenty-first year the lucky youth was sent out by his indulgent father to see the world and choose the country he preferred to live in. He landed in London Easter week of 1829.

He conducted his "Symphony in C Minor" at the Philharmonic society's room, of which orchestra Wagner was conductor a quarter of a century later. He was made an honorary member, and this recognition of his powers "lifted a stone from my heart," which shows how bitterly he felt the prophet's lack of honor in his own country. Many triumphs and a few failures marked the next three years, during which he toured Europe with great profit to his mind. But Paris he never loved as he did London. After its first gush over the budding genius Paris grew indifferent.

There was a great music festival in Dusseldorf in 1833, at which his "Trumpet Overture" was played in the excellent company of Handel's "Israel In Egypt" and Beethoven's "Pastoral Symphony" and the overture to "Leonora." Mendelssohn was the conductor, which led to his accepting a three years' engagement to direct the town's musical performances. Here he composed his oratorio "St. Paul," which took two years. Then he moved to Leipzig, where he undertook the subscription concerts. Here he was visited by Chopin and Schumann.

In Frankfort he fell in love with Cecile Charlotte Sophie Jeanrenaud, ten years his junior, he being twenty-eight. She was pretty and the daughter of a minister of the French Reformed church. Mendelssohn was an artist with pencil and brush of more than ordinary merit. His records of the wedding tour and of all his journeyings in letters and sketches show an unusual all round genius. He went to London to conduct his "St. Paul" at the Birmingham festival. While passing through London he played the organ one Sunday afternoon in St. Paul's cathedral. The congregation lingered as he supposed he was playing them out until at last the outraged vergers went and let all the wind out of the bellows in the middle of Bach's mighty fugue in A minor.

He was grateful for the "beautiful manner" in which they performed his oratorio. In the weightier sense the English are without a doubt more profoundly musical people than those of the supposedly more artistic countries. The sacred oratorio does not commend itself generally to Americans as to the English, though Handel's "Messiah" is now heard every winter in all the large cities and towns.

When the new king, William IV., came to the throne of Prussia he offered Mendelssohn the directorship of music in his new Academy of Arts. Mendelssohn declined at first, afraid of the anxieties and bustle incident to every new institution. At last he accepted, in May, 1841. That he had his hands full is evident from a letter to a London friend: "The spring program is more troublesome than ever—nineteen concerts between Jan. 1 and March 15, seven more to come in the next three weeks and at least three rehearsals a week." He was bound for a year. Meanwhile he was often in England playing for Queen Victoria and giving her organ lessons, and he dedicated his Scotch symphony to her.

The king decorated him with his Order of Merit, given at the same time to Liszt, Meyerbeer and Rossini. Soon after receiving it Mendelssohn and a party of friends were enjoying a walk and crossed the bridge at Offenbach. One of the gentlemen paid toll for the party. The tollkeeper came up to this gentleman a moment after. "Excuse me. Isn't that the M. Mendelssohn whose music we sing at our society?" On being answered "Yes" the man handed one toll fee back. "If you please, I would like to pay for him myself." When told of this Mendelssohn was delighted. "I like that better than his majesty's order."

Family cares, the birth of a fourth child, his wife's and his own delicate health and the many journeys and public duties he had to perform wearied him of the Berlin academy. The king gave in to his petition for release from permanent residence in Berlin. He received an invitation to conduct a music festival in New York in 1845, but he had to rest. His opera "Antigone" was produced in London and his great dramatic oratorio "Elijah" in Birmingham, for whose society it was written. This was in August, 1846. It is classed with "The Messiah" in popular estimation.

To merely name the celebrities who crowded around him now would fill this column and the list of his works a page. Deaths in the family and anxieties incident to a nervous temperament undermined his health, so that he collapsed on Nov. 4, 1847.

He was of slight if not frail build, about five feet six, active and excitable. His face is to be classed with that of Edgar Poe, fellow pilgrim from 1809, but who outlived the German nearly two years. A face always pale, but dark of hair and in the hollows, an overrefined natural air and intense susceptibility. Thackeray said, "Mendelssohn's is the most beautiful face I ever saw, like what I imagine our Saviour's to have been." His whole frame and countenance were in constant activity, and his large dark brown eyes glowed like lamps. It may cheer the ambitious who covet the fame of genius to know that the brain food for which Mendelssohn most hankered was rice with milk and cherry pie. And this dreadful gluttony produced not only his music, but the pictures and lively letters and did not lessen his enthusiasm for dancing, swimming and gymnastics.

It is not given to many sons of genius to enjoy Mendelssohn's immunity from the ordinary ills of life. His was a path of roses. No improvident marriage, no wolf at his door, no vices, no catastrophes, none of the tribulations within and without which imbitter their victim by distorting his real better self. Why grumble because a placid life produces gentle works? Nothing can be less profitable or equitable than to compare Mendelssohn's music with Beethoven's, Chopin's or Wagner's. The bee is all industry and sting, yet its gift to us is sheer sweetness, out of which our ancestors conjured the spirit that maddens. We run the gamut of all moods in our day. Happiness comes from holding the balance even. Those unfortunates who are doomed to writhe in the toils of any one dominant mood can get their fill of music, delirious, voluptuous or nondescript, but for the most of us ordinary humans the quiet tones of sky, sea and field yield calm delights.

JAKOB LUDWIG FELIX MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY.
[Born Feb. 3, 1809; Died Nov. 4, 1847.]

LET ALL THE WIND OUT OF THE BELLOWS.

In this homely way we can speak of Mendelssohn without risk of undervaluing his genius or his creations or his influence. These rank high among the achievements of the world's great men, but in many ways and often the exquisitely beautiful melodies of Mendelssohn come home to our heart of hearts and will continue to solace and cheer long after the thunderous roars of other geniuses have died in oblivion.

A Surprise For the Thief.

Herr Hager, a rich and influential banker, frequently had watches picked from his pocket. At first he had recourse to all kinds of safety chains; then one morning he took no precaution whatever and quietly allowed himself to be robbed. At night, on returning from his business, he took up the evening paper; he uttered an exclamation of delight. A watch had exploded in a man's hands. The victim's hands were shattered and the left eye destroyed. The crafty banker had filled the watch case with dynamite, which exploded in the operation of winding.—London Telegraph.

"Well, lady," answered Plodding Pete, "you surely wouldn't expect a man to go all dat time an' not show any improvement!"—Washington Star.

One Romance of Uncle Sam's Dead Letter Office.

Something like 2,000,000 letters annually fall of delivery in the United States owing to insufficient postage or incorrect addresses. The dead letter office at Washington employs a large force of clerks to handle these. The packages that have been received at the dead letter office have contained false teeth, glass eyes, brass keys and thousands of other things that one would never expect to find in the mails.

It would be interesting to know how many engagements have been broken, how many friends have been estranged, how many fond hearts have not been reunited, how many deals have fallen through, how much money has been lost and how many quarrels have been prevented by letters that never came.

A pretty romance was revealed at the dead letter office the other day when a young woman called there to see if a wrongfully addressed letter had been received. It had, and she was greatly relieved. "I heard that Jack was untrue," she said, "and wrote him breaking our engagement. The day after I wrote I found out that I was wrong. My heart was almost broken, but Jack kept right on coming to see me and never mentioned the letter. I began to think I must have misdirected it and find that I did. It must have been fate. Now he will never know."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

ALL THE WAY ROUND.

An Odd Sort of Dinner and the Reason of It.

Lord Polkemmet, a Scottish lord of session, usually retired to his country residence during the part of the year when the court does no business. John Hagart, the Scottish advocate, equally idle from a similar cause, went to shoot, and, happening to pass Lord P.'s property, he met his lordship, who politely invited John to take, or, as he said, to tak', a family dinner with himself, his wife and daughter.

John accepted the invitation, and they all assembled at the hour of dinner. There was a joint of roasted veal at the head of the table and stewed veal at the bottom, veal soup in the middle, calf's head on one side of the soup and veal cutlets on the other, calf's foot jelly between the soup and roast veal and calf's brains between the stewed veal and the soup.

"Noo," said his lordship in his own blunt way, "Mr. Hagart, you may very likely think this an odd sort of dinner, but ye'll no wonder when you hear the cause of it. We keep nae company, Mr. Hagart, and my daughter here caters for our table. The way we do is just this: We kill a beast, as it were, today, and we just begin to cook it at one side of the head, travel down that side, turn the tail and just gang back again by the other side to where we began."

The Year Without a Summer.

The year 1816 has a remarkable cold weather record and is known as "the year without a summer." In that year there was a sharp frost in every month, and the people all over the world began to believe that some great and definite change in the earth was taking place. The farmers used to refer to it as "eighteen hundred and starve to death." Frost, ice and snow were common in June. Almost every green thing was killed, and the fruit was nearly all destroyed. During the month snow fell to the depth of three inches in New York and Massachusetts and ten inches in Maine. There were frost and ice in July in New York, New England and Pennsylvania, and corn was nearly all destroyed in certain sections. Ice half an inch thick formed in August. A cold north wind prevailed all summer.

Taking a Mean Advantage.

Once a thrifty Scotch physician was called to a case where a woman had dislocated her jaw. He very soon put her right. The woman asked how much was to pay. The doctor named his fee. The patient thought it too much. He, however, would not take less, and as the woman refused to give him the fee he began to yawn. Yawning, as every one knows, is infectious. The young woman in turn yawned. Her jaw again went out of joint, and the doctor triumphantly said, "Now, until you hand me over my fee your jaw can remain as it is." Needless to say, the money was promptly paid.

An Easy Problem.

Prove that 9 taken from 6 and 10 taken from 9 and 50 taken from 40 when all added together is only 6. Easy when you know how. Take IX (9) from SIX and you have S left; take X (10) from IX (9) and you have I left; take L (50) from XL (40) and you have X left, and when you add S and I and X together you have SIX, haven't you?—Pathfinder.

She Knew Them.

"Scenery ill bred, child! What do you mean?"

The Secret Of Long Life.

A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. But long ago millions of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolongs life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, rebuilds wasted nerve cells, imparts life and tone to the entire system. Its a godsend to weak, sick and debilitated people. CHINESE METHODS.

Why a Street, Newly Paved, Was Torn Up by Official Order.

M. Monnier, the French Asiatic traveler, vouched for the truth of the following story of how his friend, Hop Sing, a man of means and refinement, was on one occasion sorely victimized. Hop Sing lived in the street of the roasted corn, as unsavory and as ill paved a street as any in all Pekin. The local mandarin was an intimate friend of his, and Hop Sing availed himself of this friendship to press the mandarin to have the street repaved. Certainly, at once. The men would be at work on it before Hop Sing could get back home. A week passed, then another visit, and so on until, in despair, Hop Sing determined to have the street repaired at his own expense. The work was satisfactorily completed.

The surprise of Hop Sing was only equaled by his indignation when on awakening one morning he found a gang of coolies upheaving the newly flagged street. His surprise grew when he heard from the mandarin's own lips that the men were there at his orders.

"You see, my dear friend," said the mandarin, "I am expecting the head inspector around here in a few days. Now, if he were to see the beautiful pavement you have laid down in your street he would come to the conclusion that there was money about, and he would assuredly bleed every vein in my body. This would mean my ruin. Don't you see why your pavement really must come up? It cost me one fortune to secure my post. I don't want to spend another in keeping it."

THE CHARM OF NEW YORK.

An English View of the Metropolis of the New World.

New York ought by most artistic standards of the past to be hideous. Instead (as I made up my mind, with a shock of pleasure, a few weeks ago) she is as beautiful, as individual almost, as Venice. Of course there are her sky and her atmosphere. Even a regular old frump of a city could wear a spurious charm when golden wine of sunshine dripped over her from a crystal cup studded with turquoise or in a sunset such as heaven and Turner alone could conceive, glittering like a heap of jewels behind a veil of sprinkled gold dust. But the startling, bizarre beauty of New York could exist even in a London fog.

What is there to say of a vast city where all the architectures of the world and some that were never seen (anywhere else) on land or sea rub shoulders together? Would you not think that they would refuse to speak to each other, even if they didn't fight in disastrous battle dreadful to witness? But go to New York and see.

I said to myself as I drove about New York that the gay, colorful city was like a huge flower garden where the gardener had sown his seeds anyhow—crimson hollyhocks, golden sunflowers, dainty pinks, modest violets, tall white lilies, larkspurs, pansies and a thousand other early things helter skelter, leaving them to come up all among each other as they chose, and instead of the experiment being a failure it turned out a glorious success.—Mrs. C. N. Williamson in London Chronicle.

Obesity and Will Power.

Obesity is easily cured with the exercise of the proper care and restraint on the part of the patient. Without this, however, the cure is impossible, and no physician or medicine can be of any help. The happy-go-lucky dispositions of fat people, their tendency to regard their ailment lightly, cause them to look upon nothing seriously, to deny themselves nothing. These characteristics, which generally are responsible for their ailment, furnish the greatest obstacles in the way of curing them. As a rule, the fat person does just the opposite of what he ought to do. He eats the very foods he should avoid, avoids those he should eat, shuns exertion of every kind, indulges in rest and luxury and seeks the way of the easiest resistance generally.—"Will Power."

The Ancient Manufacture of Copper.

The ancient Syrians and Phoenicians are well known to have been active traders in copper, and they manufactured this metal into bronze by melting it with tin. Learned antiquaries assure us that the Phoenicians actually came to England and to Ireland in search of tin for this purpose, and some years ago some curious bronze articles were found in several of the old mine workings in Cornwall, which are believed to have been left there by that ancient people at a time when no bronze was either made or used in England.—Chambers' Journal.

MEN ARE HELPFUL AS CHILDREN

When Taken Suddenly Ill—Here is a Common-Sense Safeguard.

Big, strong man is as a helpless infant when he is suddenly ill.

The sturdiest chap in town usually loses his self control, and is utterly unable to regard his condition with the common sense that characterizes his every-day actions.

For example: He comes home tired, eats a heavy dinner and sits down to read and smoke away a quiet evening.

Suddenly he notices a weight on his stomach; then sharp pains around his heart, and a feeling of suffocation. Thoughts of "heart disease" rush over him, and in his agony he fears the worst.

His trouble was acute indigestion, brought on by overloading his tired stomach.

A couple of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets would have given him instant relief—would have saved him hours of suffering.

Carry a package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets in your vest pocket or keep them in your room. Take one after each heavy meal, and indigestion can never bother you.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets cure stomach troubles by supplying the one element, the absence of which in the gastric juices, causes indigestion and dyspepsia. They enable the stomach to digest all kinds of food and to quickly convert it into rich red blood.

We know what Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are and what they will do. We guarantee them to cure indigestion and dyspepsia. If they fail, we will refund your money.

Price, 25 cents per full package. Sold only at our stores or by mail. B. J. Pulver, the druggist.

"Sealshipt" Oysters

Don't associate them with oysters you commonly buy. "Sealshipt" are packed without water in sealed, air-tight, steel containers. "Sealshipt" Carriers keep the oysters fresh and firm—not water-soaked. They retain all the incomparable tang of the sea.

You can't get enough of "Sealshipt." More than a surprise—a revelation.

Every housewife will want a copy of "Sealshipt Sense" with the dainty new oyster recipes—The following "Sealshipt" dealers will give you a copy:

HOLDING THE CELLO.

An Anecdote of Duport and the Emperor Napoleon.

Napoleon, in a way, was fond of music. It is admitted that the musical tastes of "the Corsican ogre" were not elevated. But for all that he loved singing so much that many a time after a concert he ordered the vocalists to come to the palace and sing before him and the Empress Josephine.

A curious anecdote is told of his brusque manner of dealing with artists. One night at a concert at the Tuileries, while Duport, the famous violoncellist, was performing a solo, the emperor suddenly entered. His majesty nodded his head approvingly and when the piece was finished said to Duport:

"How the deuce do you manage to keep that instrument so motionless?" And, taking up the cello, he tried to jam it between his spurred boots.

Poor Duport nearly fainted when he saw his treasure treated like a war horse. For several minutes he looked on, trembling from head to foot. At last, however, he darted forward and called out "Sire!" in such pathetic tones that the emperor handed him back the instrument.

Duport thereupon showed how the instrument was held, but every time his imperial master extended his hand to attempt to do it himself Duport threw himself back in alarm till finally Josephine whispered something to her husband, who burst out laughing and put an end to the cello lesson.—New York Sun.

SHETLAND PONIES.

Active as Terriers, Sure Footed as Mules, Patient as Donkeys.

Shetlands are "foaled in the fields, live in the fields and die in the fields." They have a rooted dislike for indoor life and thrive best when allowed to feed naturally on green grass, with perhaps hay in winter. Until two years old nature provides a soft, woollike covering. Afterward the mature coat of hair appears, to be shed each spring, when the ponies appear sleek and handsome. Full grown, they are immensely strong, with wide quarters, powerful legs and a great width and depth over the heart and lungs. And, as Bengie wrote in 1870 in his "Tour In Shetland:" "The Shetland pony is the most lovable of animals in the wide creation. They are sprightly and active as terriers, sure footed as mules and patient as donkeys. The horse is accredited as the noblest of the lower animals, and the Shetland pony stands at the head of this noble race as the most intelligent and faithful of them all."

The great value of the Shetland to the coal miners lies in its ability to work in the low galleries in thin seamed pits, where other ponies could not travel. Their strength does not correspond with their diminutive proportions, and they will travel thirty miles a day in the seams, drawing from twelve to fourteen hundredweight. Underground their lot is hard, but use becomes second nature, and they are treated, if roughly, not unkindly.—St. James' Gazette.

The Chinaman and His Dragon.

If a Chinaman wishes for happiness and peace in this world and the next he feels obliged to consult his majesty the dragon as to where his house shall be built and his grave be made. Through the earth, so say the Chinese, flow two currents—the dragon and the tiger. Now, for a man to have good fortune in life or, as he would say in "pigeon English," to "catchee chance," his house must be put in a certain position in reference to these currents. If he is to rest quietly in his grave, that also must be correctly placed. So called "wise men" make a business of choosing favorable sites for homes and graves, professing by means of a wand and incantations and other kinds of tomfoolery to be able to detect the presence of the dragon and the tiger and to tell in what direction they flow.

Skating.

Skating is believed to have been invented in northern Europe in prehistoric times. William Fitz-Stephen speaks of it in London toward the end of the twelfth century, but it did not really catch hold until the cavaliers who had been in exile with Charles II. brought it with them from Holland. On Dec. 1, 1662, Mr. Pepys, having occasion to cross the park, "first in my life, it being a great frost, did see people sliding with their skates, which is a very pretty art." On the 8th he went purposely to see the sight and again found it "very pretty."—London Chronicle.

Works Both Ways.

"So you think it is an advantage to a man to go to congress for a while?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "It gives the people in his own town a chance to think he is a great man in Washington and the people in Washington a chance to think he is a great man in his own town."—Washington Star.

Her Motto.

"I think it is high time," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "for the people of this country to take a firm stand against vivisection."

"So do I," replied her hostess. "No north, no south, is my motto."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Barrier.

First Tramp—You won't get nothing decent there; them people is vegetarians. Second Tramp—Is that right? First Tramp—Yes, and they've got a dog wot ain't.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Any man who occupies the office of President realizes the incredible amount of administrative work with which the president has to deal even in peace. He is a very busy man a much driven man, from whose mind there can never be absent for many minutes at a time the consideration of some problem of importance, or of some less importance which yet causes worry and pain. His Gettysburg speech and his second inaugural are two of the half dozen greatest speeches ever made—I am tempted to call them the greatest ever made. They are great in their wisdom and dignity, and earnestness and in a lottiness of thought and expressions which makes them akin to the to the utterances of the Old Testament. From "President's Tribute to Lincoln" in the American Review of Reviews for February.

The honesty of your holiness depends on its helpfulness.

A good many of the bruises on our hearts come from climbing over conscience.

MRS. D. W. SMITH AND DAUGHTER.

The Reminiscences of the late Professor Shaler in the February Atlantic have this suggestive anecdote to tell of Agassiz as a teacher. I tried to follow Agassiz's scheme of division into the order of ctenoide, and ganoids, with the result that I found one of my species of side-swimmers had cycloid scales on one side and ctenoid on the other. This not only shocked my sense of the value of classification in a way that permitted of no full recovery of my original respect for the process, but for a time shook my confidence in my master's knowledge. At the same time I had a malicious pleasure in exhibiting my find to him, expecting to repay in part the humiliation which he had evidently tried to inflict on my conceit. To my question as to how the nondescript should be classified, he said: "My boy, there are now two of us who know that."

ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hendershott of Macon Celebrate the 53rd Anniversary of their Marriage.

Children, Grandchildren and Great Grandchildren Help to Celebrate Pleasant Event.

Occasion also Mr. Hendershott's 78th birthay.

Wednesday, Jan. 27th, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Hendershott of Macon celebrated their 53rd anniversary, it being, also, Mr. Hendershott's 78th birthday.

Of their 53 years of wedded life, 13 years were spent in Pennsylvania and 40 years in Michigan. They have always lived in the one neighborhood, where they hold the respect of everyone.

Mr. and Mrs. Hendershott are smart for people of their age; Mrs. Hendershott being 81 the 4th of February. They are the parents of three daughters and one son, all of whom were present, but one daughter Mrs. Minnie Reemer, who resides in Montpelier, O. Among others who were not present were: three grandchildren, James E. Miller, who went to Kansas recently, Mrs. Ida Perry, and Mrs. Maggie Gragg.

The affair was planned as a surprise for Mrs. Hendershott. She was invited over to one of the neighbors, and it was during her absence that children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren invaded her home, taking complete possession.

When Mrs. Hendershott returned at noon, she found the tables set for 28, and groaning with roast turkeys, and other eatables, and everything in readiness for the three course dinner which followed, after Mrs. Hendershott had recovered from her surprise.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. George Miller, Murden, Ethel and Vernie, P. J. Waldron and wife, Etta Waldron, Leo Wells, William J. Hendershott and wife, Frank Hendershott, Charles Burleson, Mr. and Mrs. D. Burleson, Jennie and Lilburn, Will Service and wife, Floyd Smith, Nancy Aten, Mr. and Mrs. Will Gibson and daughter Ruth, Lester Coller of Tecumseh, the latter getting a picture of the group.

GROUNDHOG DAY.

Today the worst will be known. It is "Groundhog" day, and if the "groundhog" sees his shadow cold weather will continue for six weeks. If, however, it is a dark, cloudy day and the animal comes out of his hole, walks around and can find no sun to cast a shadow, the cold spell will break—at least, so runs the old folk lore tale.

Some people say it is a bear that settles the question, but whichever it is, it will be settled tonight.

From Henry B. Hersey's "The Menace of Aerial Warfare" in the February Century.

Judging from the present outlook, it seems that the field of the aeroplane in military work will be distinct from that of the dirigible balloon. It will not be able to carry great weight, like the dirigible, but it will be much swifter. Being smaller and more compact, and requiring no gas-making apparatus, it will be more easily transported. A single supply-ship could carry a whole fleet of them, and they could be quickly put in action. They will probably become the cavalry of the aerial army, while the heavier and more formidable dirigibles will constitute a combination of infantry and artillery.

It may be that the greatest heroes are the ones that fail.

The trained nurse is now a feature of public school life in two of the largest cities of the United States, New York Philadelphia. At first an experiment in this regard, she has within five years demonstrated beyond dispute her usefulness in a new field. Her mission is three fold: To prevent disease, by causing observances of the simplest sanitary precautions; to teach children, where ignorance of right living has paved the way for ill-health and unhappiness No novices are premitted in this work. The nurse must be a graduate of a first-class training school. The February designer.

I am glad to state that the use of this remedy cured my trouble, and that there are no words too strong for me to say in favor of Mi-o-na. Surely it is a remedy of merit and value to those suffering as I was." Mrs. C. F. Sizer, Chicago st., Tecumseh, Mich. Oct. 16, 1908.

Mutton Birds

During six weeks every autumn the 400 inhabitants of the Australian Furneaux Islands make enough money to support themselves in idleness the rest of the year. They do this by catching the very fat young "mutton birds," which are hatched there in such numbers that the flocks when they migrate extend for miles. They furnish food and oil, which is used for lubricating purposes and also as a substitute for cod liver oil.

Why Suffer?

If you suffer pain from any cause, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills will relieve it—and leave no bad after-effects. That's the important thing. Neither do they create a habit. More often the attacks become less frequent, or disappear altogether. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have no other effect except to relieve pain and quiet nervous irritation.

"We are never without Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. My husband and son, aged 15 were always subject to sick headache until we began using these Pills, and they have broken them up entirely. Don't think they have had to use them for six months. I recommend them to every one. A few weeks ago I heard an old lady friend was sick. I went to see her. She was down with LaGrippe, and nearly crazy with awful backache. I gave her one of the Anti-Pain Pills and left another for her to take in a short time. They helped her right away, and she says she will never be without them again. Last winter my husband was taken with pluerisy on both sides, and I know he would have died if it hadn't been for the Pills. In less than half an hour he was sweating, and went to bed and slept."

SUFFRAGISTS MEET TONIGHT

Leaders of Movement at Lecture in Historic Cooper Union, New York.

New York, Feb. 1.—In historic Cooper Union, where Lincoln delivered his famous address just before the beginning of the civil war, the active woman suffragists of the country will meet tonight to hear Professor Charles Zueblin, the well known sociologist, deliver a lecture on woman suffrage.

The meeting will be held under the auspices of The People's institute and the Equality League For Self Supporting Women. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the International Suffrage alliance; Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, head of the Equal Suffrage league; Miss Mary Coleman and many other suffragists will attend.

ARE SUMMONED TO WASHINGTON.

Labor Leaders to Participate In "Council of Labor."

Washington, Feb. 1.—Invitations have been extended to more than a score of prominent labor leaders in all parts of the country, asking them to participate in the proposed "council of labor," to be held on Feb. 10 at the department of commerce and labor, when questions of vital moment to the wage earners of the country will be discussed.

It is the earnest hope of those who will attend this conference that plans may be evolved which will promote the welfare of the wage earners. The subjects with which the conference will be called upon to deal are indicated in the invitations, which have been addressed to the heads of the principa labor organizations by Daniel J. Keefe, commissioner general of immigration, who was designated by Secretary Straus as one of the committee on arrangements.

The problem of the unemployed, and how and to what extent the division of information in the department of commerce and labor can be most helpful to that class, especially during periods of depression, is perhaps of chief significance. It is declared that immigration figures indicate that much of the immigrant influx to the United States is due to misleading information as to labor conditions here, and this will form one of the chief topics to be threshed out.

The conference also will consider "how the Nobel peace prize which President Roosevelt devoted to the foundation for the promotion of industrial peace can be made most effective."

CONVENTION IN A CHURCH.

Pastor Favors Mixing Politics With Religion—Talk on Merchant Marine.

New York, Jan. 29.—The first of five meetings to be devoted to the advancement of the interests of the American merchant marine will be held tonight in the Metropolitan temple, this city, of which the Rev. John Wesley Hill is pastor. The meetings are to be held under the auspices of the National Merchant Marine league.

Letters from President Roosevelt and President Elect Taft commending the purpose of the meetings, which is the stimulation of public interest in the growth of the merchant marine, will be read. Among the prominent men who will take part in the conferences are the Hon. James E. McCleary, representative from Minnesota; John Barrett, director of the bureau of American republics; Henry Clows, Leslie M. Shaw, John J. McCook and Myron T. Herrick. One purpose of the conferences is the advocacy of legislation compelling the carrying of American mail to Europe and elsewhere in American ships. The members of the league generally favor the ship subsidy plan.

The pastor of the temple is in favor of the mixture of politics and economics with religion, with a view to the uplifting of the former. With that end in view he has invited the promoters of meetings of public interest to hold them in the temple.

WHY THEY FELL OFF.

Reduction in Prices to Blame For Lowering of Imports and Exports.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Reduced prices were largely the cause of the fall of $307,000,000 in value of imports and $167,000,000 in exports in the foreign trade of the United States during the year 1908, according to an analysis of the year's trade made by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor.

The decrease in value, it is stated, does not mean so large a reduction in quantity of merchandise imported and exported as the figures would indicate. The lower prices have been in many cases an important factor, and in some cases responsible for the entire reduction.

ERRATIC SCIENCE.

Some Wonderful Answers by Schoolroom Small Boys.

"Mushrooms always grow in damp places, and so they look like umbrellas," wrote a small boy in the science examination. Other examples of the "howler" are compiled by a writer in the Scientific American:

"Air is the most necessary of all the elements. If there were no such thing as air I would not be writing this essay now, also there would be no pneumatic tires, which would be a sad loss.

"Electricity and lightning are of the same nature, the only difference being that lightning is often several miles in length, while electricity is only a few inches.

"Air usually has no weight, but found to weigh about fifteen pounds to a square inch.

"The axis of the earth is an imaginary line on which the earth is supposed to take its daily routine.

"The difference between air and water is that air can be made wetter, but water cannot.

"Gravity is chiefly noticable in the autumn when the apples are falling from the trees.

"Things which are equal to each other are equal to anything else.

"A parallel straight line is one which if produced to meet itself does not meet.

"The blood is putrefied in the lungs by inspired air."

Best Stomach Remedy Free

It is an old saying that if the stomach is sound the whole body is safe, because so much depends upon the proper working of the stomach. Many persons find themselves with a disorder of the stomach which produces dyspepsia or a peculiar state of biliousness.

If you suffer from both stomach trouble and constipation you are on the way to a very serious disease. From just such conditions come appendicitis, rheumatism, skin diseases and similar disorders, because the waste matter that should have been dispelled from the system through the bowels has found its way into the blood and vitiated it. What is needed at this point is not simply a violent cathartic tablet or salt, which usually does more harm than good, but a gentle laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which people have been using for these ailments for nearly a quarter of a century. It cured J. C. Lanham, of Warrensburg, Mo., of stomach trouble of long standing, also William Voll, of 903 Ellison St., Louisville, Ky., who had the trouble for fifteen years.

However, if you have stomach trouble you want to know from personal experience what Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do for you. If so, send your name to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you. You are urged to send for the free bottle, as the results from it will be the best recommendation of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then you will do as over two million people did last year—go to your druggist and buy a regular bottle at 50 cents or $1, according to the size you prefer. We could mention hundreds and hundreds of families who are never without it. You can never tell when some member of the family will need a laxative, and then no time should be lost taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

BUSSE'S BROTHER KILLS WOMAN.

Relative of Chicago's Mayor Cause of Sad Accident.

WAS SHOWING SERVANT PISTOL

Weapon Was Discharged — Bullet Passed Through Windows Into Another Apartment of Building and Pierced Mrs. L. C. Tuckerman's Heart.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—George Busse, a brother of Mayor Fred A. Busse of Chicago, has accidentally shot and killed Mrs. L. C. Tuckerman, thirty-two years old, of Milton, N. Y. The bullet struck Mrs. Tuckerman in the heart, and she died almost instantly. The shooting occurred in the Walton apartment building, 305 North Clark street. Mrs. Tuckerman was visiting her father, General A. C. Girard, retired, who occupies an apartment in the building.

George Busse, in his apartment across an areaway from General Girard's apartment, was demonstrating the use of a revolver to Miss Bertha Lambke, his housemaid, so that she could employ the weapon in case burglars came. The revolver was accidentally discharged, and the bullet went through two windows, crossed the areaway into the Girard apartment and pierced Mrs. Tuckerman's heart.

Mayor Busse was present at the shooting, and as soon as he learned of the fatal consequences informed the police.

Mrs. Tuckerman was in a bedroom, dressing, when struck by the bullet.

Mayor Busse and his brother, George, were horrified to find that Mrs. Tuckerman was struck by the bullet and was dying. Mayor Busse's wife and mother tried to assist the wounded woman, while the mayor summoned a physician. But the woman died before the physician arrived. No arrests were made. General Girard expressed himself as satisfied that the shooting was accidental.

UNKNOWN VESSEL SINKS.

Another Ship Meets Her Fate in "Graveyard of Atlantic."

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 1.—Hidden beneath the turbulent waves that roll wildly over Diamond shoals, fourteen miles off Cape Hatteras, lies the secret of the identity of a mysterious steamer which has gone down there, probably with all hands on board.

News of the catastrophe comes from those few men aboard the Diamond shoals lightship, who witnessed the accident, helpless to aid in this latest tragedy of the well named "Graveyard of the Atlantic."

TIPS IN SCOTLAND.

An Example of How Some Servants Win Their Wages.

A gentleman was invited to a shoot in Scotland at two places close together. He arrived at the first place, and immediately after his arrival at the first house received a telegram calling him back to town. He, however, determined to have one day's shooting and to proceed to town by the night mail.

At the end of the day he gave the head keeper £1 and asked him to send his gun and cartridge bag over to the other place for which he had an invitation and where he proposed proceeding in three or four days' time.

On his arrival there after his visit to town he found his gun, etc., had not arrived, whereupon he wrote to the keeper, asking him to forward it at once, and he received a reply stating that when he (the keeper) had received the other £4 to which he was "entitled" the gun would be forwarded. It was detained till payment was made.

The gentleman wrote to the keeper's master and received a reply that "he (the master) never interfered between his guests and his servants in the matter of tips." The gentleman ascertained that the master in question paid the keeper no wages, but left him to get what he could out of the guests.—London Times.

SPERRY AND SHIPS AT GIBRALTAR.

Battleships of Several Nations There to Welcome Them.

PEOPLE LINE WATERFRONT.

Arrival Was Made Two Days Ahead of Scheduled Time — Preparations For Fleet's Arrival Home Completed—Will Enter Hampton Roads on Washington's Birthday.

Gibraltar, Feb. 1.—The first division of the United States Atlantic fleet composed of the Connecticut, Vermont, Kansas and Minnesota, under command of Rear Admiral Sperry, has arrived here from Villefranche.

The British welcome was very hearty and cordial. When the battleships rounded majestically into the harbor the entire population seemed to be massed on the water front.

The two battleships Albemarle and Albion and the four ships of the second cruiser squadron, just returned from South American waters; the Russian battleships Tsarevitch and Slava and the protected cruisers Bogatyr and Oleg, the French gunboat Cassini and the Dutch gunboat Neimdal, lying inside the breakwater with sides manned, flags dipping and bands playing, greeted the Americans as each in turn entered and was berthed. The American battleships responded with flags and music.

Official calls were exchanged as soon as the ships were moored.

Numerous Entertainments.

Despite the rather unofficial character of the visit and Rear Admiral Sperry's disconcerting appearance with his fleet two days before a single division was expected, the English evidently intended to give the Americans a reception they will long remember. Numerous entertainments for the men and officers are planned.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The program for the reception of the fleet on its return to Hampton Roads has been completed. It practically reverses the program carried out when the fleet sailed. President Roosevelt, on board the Mayflower, anchored between the Horseshoe and Lynnhaven bay, will review the fleet as it passes in at noon on Feb. 22.

Rear Admiral Sperry, the other commanders and executive officers will then go aboard the Mayflower to receive the president's greeting, after which the president in turn will visit the flagship of each division and meet the assembled officers and six representative sailormen selected from the division.

Eat What

You want of the food you need Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

WIDOW DINGLEY ASKS ACCOUNTING

Begins Proceedings In Kalamazoo Against Son.

FORMER MANAGER TELEGRAPH

Aged Woman Traveled Alone From Maine—Bill Charges Editor With Putting Funds of Dingley Estate to Private Use—Sensational Evidence Predicted.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 4.—Salome M. Dingley of Lewiston, Me., widow of the late Congressman Nelson Dingley, author of the tariff bill which bears his name, has filed a bill in the chancery division of the Kalamazoo circuit court, asking that her son, Edward N. Dingley, until Nov. 1 last manager of the Kalamazoo Telegraph, be compelled to give an accounting of the money of the estate of her husband used by him. The case, it is said, will bring out bits of sensational evidence.

Mrs. Dingley, who is seventy-seven years old and who made the trip from her home in Maine unaccompanied, asserts in her petition that she has been forced to take action against her son, Edward N., because of the recent demand of two other of her children for an accounting of the estate in which they also share.

Nelson Dingley died some time ago.

Didn't File Accounting.

The bill charges Dingley with putting the funds of the estate to his own private use and failing to file an accounting of the management of the Kalamazoo Telegraph with those in charge of the estate. The sum of $134,000 is alleged to have been misapplied by the former editor, and, according to the bill, he overdrew his personal account to the amount of $29,000.

The Kalamazoo Telegraph building, in which was published the paper of that name and which cost $60,000, Mrs. Dingley claims was built with money of the estate, and she says her son borrowed $35,000 for that purpose without the consent of any one of the various heirs. Dingley says that when he sold the building a joint deed bearing his and his wife's name was turned over to Fred W. Rockwell, proprietor of the Ten Eyck House at Albany, N. Y.

The bill asks that Dingley, his wife, Mirion Dingley, and Rockwell be restrained from in any way disposing of the proceeds from the Telegraph building during the pendency of the suit.

The bill also charges that Dingley accepted money, through his newspaper, from politicians, which he diverted to his own use.

Another allegation is that the editor drew $4,788 as salary from Nov. 1, 1907, to Oct. 31, 1908, when he was entitled to only $3,640.

The suit is begun under the name of the Old Kalamazoo Telegraph Company. The present Kalamazoo Telegraph company is in no way connected with the proceedings.

ANGELL WANTS TO SEE 'EM.

Friars, a Student Society, Will Likely Be Disbanded.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 4.—Seven officers of the Friars, a student society, have been served with notices to appear before President Angell and show cause why the society should not be disbanded.

It is probable that this action sounds the knell of the Friars, the oldest society on the campus. The faculty base their objection to its further continuance on the allegations that its rooms are above a saloon, that beer and liquor are kept in the rooms and that members of the club have taken friends there after saloons were closed and allowed them to become intoxicated.

Sign to Play With Minnesota.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 4.—Michigan and Minnesota have signed articles calling for a game during the football season of 1909. No further information was given out. The news comes to the student body as the greatest surprise in years. Ungrounded rumor had it that Michigan would re-enter the conference, play Brown, Carlisle, Wisconsin and various other large schools. A game with Minnesota was hardly expected.

Adventist Church Sold.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 4.—Battle Creek's Seventh Day Adventist tabernacle has passed out of the hands of the local Adventist church. It now belongs to the western Michigan conference, which secured it through assuming the $6,500 debt outstanding against the property.

LAWLESSNESS MUST CEASE.

Pittsburg Officers Continue to Closely Watch Negroes.

RACE WAR IS IMMINENT.

Police Force Doubled—Negroes and Whites in Herron Hill District Go Armed—Nearly Two Score Colored Men Sent to Workhouse—No Recent Attacks on Women.

Pittsburg, Feb. 4.—In spite of many threats of armed resistance upon the part of negroes if the police continue their wholesale arrests of members of their race without employment in the Herron Hill district of the city, no outbreak of any kind has occurred. Following the arrest of 126 negroes and the release later of but forty-one, the police force in the district has been doubled, and every patrolman has orders to arrest every suspicious negro.

No further attack upon women or girls has been reported since Tuesday night, and should one occur the temper of the citizens is such that violence very probably would be meted out to the assailant if caught. Men and women throughout the section involved are carrying revolvers, and the negroes are said to be well armed also. Should a clash come, as is considered not at all improbable if more arrests are made, the result would be serious.

Local orators are inflaming the negroes to resistance, and the feeling is high. The police, however, seem to have the situation well in hand and probably will not make further indiscriminate arrests.

Of the negroes arrested thirty-nine were fined, most of them going to the workhouse, and two, Mack McGee and Edward Armstead, were held over for further evidence, having been partly identified as perpetrators of one of the attacks on girls.

BILL IS REJECTED.

California Legislature Refuses to Indorse Measure Against Japs.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 4.—After a debate extending nearly all day, the assembly by a vote of 48 to 28 rejected the bill drawn by A. M. Drew barring aliens from ownership of land in California.

The bill had been amended at the request of President Roosevelt and Secretary Root so that the clause applying it to Japanese only was eliminated, making the bill apply to all aliens; but the measure aroused such a storm of opposition that long before the debate was closed by Mr. Drew it was apparent that the measure would be defeated.

In substance the objection to it was that it would drive at least a billion dollars of foreign capital out of the state and might jeopardize the present friendly commercial relations with Japan.

The supporters of the bill contended that the state was being overrun by thrifty Japanese, who were gradually gaining an impregnable position as land owners and whose government was trying to dictate to California regarding legislation.

BOY GETS LIFE.

Hazel Lad is Sentenced For Killing His Mother.

Toledo, O., Feb. 4.—Harvey Hazel the seventeen-year-old boy found guilty of the murder of his mother, has just been sentenced to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary.

Hazel was convicted of slaying his mother Jan. 11, 1908, by beating her to death with a hammer, after which he robbed her of $57.

NO ELECTION PROBABLE.

Wisconsin's Deadlock on Senatorial Question Continues.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 4.—That there will be no election of a United States senator to succeed Isaac Stephenson before an investigation of the senatorial primary election has taken place seems probable.

With both branches of the legislature unable to agree on the terms of a resolution pointing to that end, motions for conference committees of three members each have been agreed to in the assembly and the senate, and it is now the duty of the joint committees to arrive at some agreement in the line of an investigation that will be satisfactory to both houses.

The committee is equally divided as to factions, the assemblymen being Stephenson adherents, while the senators are supporters of the Lafollette wing.

Senator Stephenson lacks four votes of re-election.

PRESIDENT AGAIN OBJECTS

Protests Against Restricting of Secret Service Department.

MUST HAVE HELP OF SLEUTHS

Else Government Cannot Act With Full Efficiency Against Evildoers Anywhere—Limitations Have Tied Hands of Secretary of Treasury. Statement From White House.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Declaring that "if the government is to act with full efficiency against criminals, it must have some force of secret service agents who can act against criminals anywhere," President Roosevelt, in a statement made public from the White House, emphatically reiterates his opposition to restricting the field of usefulness of the secret service.

"The position of the administration is," said the president, "that it is against sound public policy to discriminate in favor of criminals by discriminating against the use of the secret service to detect and punish them."

The text of the statement in part is as follows:

"At no time has the president or any administrative officer claimed that the restrictive legislation of the last session affected the secret service division of the treasury department in the matter of suppressing counterfeiting or protecting the president.

"The effect of the limitation was materially to circumscribe the field of usefulness in which the trained agents of the secret service had hitherto been advantageously employed. Under the limitation it became impossible to use these investigators in the class of cases in which they have been conspicuously successful for many years.

"The limitations tied the hands of the secretary of the treasury and made it impossible for him to continue the employment of these men in any cases of irregularities or wrongdoing in those branches of the treasury department devoted to the issuing, redemption and handling of the obligations, securities and coins of the government.

"The question is, is it right or wise or proper specifically to discriminate against one particular division of the government's investigating forces and prevent its employment where it might be used to great advantage?

"If the government is to act with full efficiency against criminals it must have some force of secret service agents, by preference under the department of justice, who can act against criminals anywhere."

GET AROUND RESTRICTIONS.

Government Department Able to Obtain Help From Secret Service.

Washington, Feb. 4.—That it has been possible for the various departments of the government to obtain the services of secret service men in spite of the restrictions placed upon the secret service by the amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill last year is apparent from the testimony of Chief Wilkie made before a sub committee of the house committee on appropriations, but apparently the outside use of the men was limited.

In reply to various question, Mr. Wilkie stated that one man was assigned from the secret service to the navy department to investigate a theft in the navy yard at Norfolk, Va., and another to the state department to investigate the Mexican revolution under the neutrality act. Both men are carried on the rolls of the secret service, but are paid by the departments to which they have been assigned.

Another case brought out at the hearing is that of the assignment of two men to accompany President Elect Taft, for which there is no provision in law.

WROTE PRIZE POEM.

Chicago School Principal Honors and Is Honored by Suffragists.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—After considering more than 1,000 poems, sent in from all parts of the United States, a committee of judges selected to award the $100 prize offered by Mrs. L. B. Bishop of Chicago for the best verses supporting woman's suffrage has awarded the prize to Louis J. Block, principal of a Chicago high school.

The verses are entitled "The Marching Song," and are to be sung to the tune of "John Brown's Body." The first reference to woman is in the third stanza, which follows:

"Mother, prophetess, and holy, through the ages of the clan,
Uttering words of potent wisdom in the ear of struggling man;
Woman rose and strode beside him
'mid the dangers of the van—
Kindly hope that led him on."

ANGELL TO RESIGN.

Will Probably Be Made Chancellor of University.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 4.—It is known that the resignation of James B. Angell as president of the university is imminent.

Dr. Angell's present plan is to present his resignation at the next meeting of the board of regents, which was planned for Feb. 17, but which may be postponed a few days. The document was written previous to the latest meeting of the board, and it was Dr. Angell's intention to present it at that time. But the attendance was not satisfactory, and President Angell yielded to the request that this step be deferred until the next meeting.

A few years ago he resigned because he was of the opinion that his years were such as to make his resignation proper and desirable. Forthwith he was overwhelmed by the loving assurances of citizens and regents that he was still the man for the head of the greatest university in the country.

But every indication is that the office of chancellor of the university will be created and that it will be promptly filled by the election of Dr. Angell. This position wil be of great dignity and will allow Dr. Angell to keep in such touch with the university affairs as his pleasure and strength may dictate.

STATE BREWERS LOSE THEIR FIGHT.

Sought to Have Names Taken From Local Option List.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 4.—The campaign of the Michigan State Brewers' association to invalidate the action of boards of supervisors in several counties in calling local option elections in connection with the regular spring contests has received a set back here. The association's attorneys were overruled by Judge Kinne in the Washtenaw circuit.

Action has been begun in three counties, Washtenaw, Calhoun and Ionia, and it is probable tha the brewers will extend the fight to other districts. They will appeal to the supreme court.

The question in Washtenaw county involved the right of 565 persons who signed local option petitions to withdraw their signatures. If their plea had been allowed, the petitions would have lacked the requisite number of signatures for an election, and the question of local option could not have been submitted to the voters.

The board of supervisors passed on the petitions some weeks ago and decided that the local option question should be placed on the ballot. After that time the 565 asked to be allowed to withdraw their names.

Judge Kinne decided that the action of the board of supervisors in calling the election was final and not subject to review by the court.

DIES IN CAPITOL.

Alexander Smith, Journal Clerk of House, Passes Away Suddenly.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 4.—Alexander H. Smith of Farmington, journal clerk of the house, dropped dead in the capitol building here.

Mr. Smith had just entered the basement of the building when he met State Accountant Fred Z. Hamilton, with whom he was on intimate terms.

"Hello, pard," was his cheery greeting.

He then started to remark about the arrest of Warden Armstrong. In the midst of his sentence he staggered, clutched his throat and toppled over into Hamilton's arms. The latter carried the stricken man into the office of Superintendent of the Capitol Bennett and placed him on a sofa. He soon passed away.

Mr. Smith was fifty-five years old. He first came to Lansing in 1899 as reading clerk of the house, which position he held at the sessions of 1901, 1903, 1905 and 1907. He served as journal clerk during the special session of 1908 and also during the constitutional convention. He was reappointed journal clerk at the opening of the present session.

YOUNG MAN KILLS SELF.

Leo Perry of Howard City Commits Suicide at Muskegon.

Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 4.—Domestic trouble and continual brooding because he was unable to secure work are believed to have driven Leo B. Perry, thirty years old, of Howard City to end his life. His dead body was found near a clump of bushes near the Rogers Iron works plant here.

It is the opinion that Perry came here with the avowed purpose of killing himself.

HONOR KAISER'S ENVOY IN NEW YORK TODAY.

Reception and Dinner For Count von Bernstorff.

New York, Feb. 4.—Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, the new ambassador from Germany, is the guest of the city today. This afternoon he was entertained at a reception by the chamber of commerce, at which the leading lights of the city in commerce and the law and other professions were present. Tonight he will be the guest of honor at a banquet at the Manhattan club.

In his address at the Chamber of Commerce Count von Bernstorff said:

"From the time of the birth of the people of the United States as a nation down to the present day there has been unbroken friendship between Germany and the United States. My mission to this country can be summed up in the one wish that this friendship may continue and always deepen.

"The enormous development of wealth and industry, based on the great natural advantages which nature has given to the United States and due to the active, enterprising and courageous spirit of their people, has never been regarded with unfriendly or jealous eyes from our banks of the North and Baltic seas.

"Great and civilized nations consider the prosperity and happiness of other people not as hindering but as helping their own."

Most of the prominent German-Americans of this city and many from other places will assemble at the dinner, which will be given in honor of the diplomat by the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung. Herman Ridder, manager of the Staats-Zeitung, will preside at the dinner. With him at the guests of honor at the speakers' table will be Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university; Philip T. Dodge, president of the Engineers' club; Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador to Great Britain, and other distinguished men.

Thus far there has been nothing in the proceedings to indicate a filibuster by the Democrats, although it is known that there are a number of senators who are ready to speak at length in opposition to Crum.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Carelessness is really laziness under a more polite name.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by all dealers.

Ever see the man who works like a bee every place but at home?

This is just the time of year when you are most likely to have kidney or bladder trouble, with rheumatism and rheumatic pains caused by weak kidneys. Delays are dangerous. Get DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills, and be sure you get what you ask for. They are the best pills made for backache, weak back, urinary disorders, inflammation of the bladder, etc. They are antiseptic and act promptly. We sell and recommend them. Sold by all druggists.

C. R. Kluger, the Jeweler, 1060 Virginia Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "I was so weak from kidney trouble that I could hardly walk a hundred feet. Four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cleared my complexion, cured my backache and the irregularities disappeared, and I can now attend to business every day, and recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to all sufferers, as it cured me after the doctors and other remedies had failed." Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good."

Mental Hygiene

Some Excellent Reasons For Being Cheerful—An Instance of Mental Suggestion—Secret of Happiness—Advice to Parents. Hygienic Thoughts.

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.

"A LAUGH," says Lamb, "is worth a hundred groans in any market." A hopeful, cheerful spirit in meeting every circumstance gives moral brace and tone. It acts as a powerful and constant stimulant, with none but the most beneficial and strengthening results. The functions of the body are also invigorated in a marked manner.

Cheerfulness promotes the circulation, warms the hands and feet and relieves congested lungs and livers. Laughter is its natural language. "Ten hearty laughs," says a popular writer, "real shouts, will do more to enhance the general health and vitality than an hour spent in the best gymnastic attitudes and motions if done in a sober, solemn spirit." "Laugh and grow fat," is an old time maxim, full of sound sense. And Solomon was cognizant of its truth when he wrote, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine, but a broken spirit drieth the bones." And again, "He that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast."

This tonic of cheerfulness is the easiest thing in the world to take and remarkably prompt in its beneficial action. It has its effect primarily on the individual, then upon those with whom he comes in contact. Cheerfulness always wins friends. Try it when you go down to business. Start in with a cheery "Good morning!" Keep it up through the day. Think about happy things. Have a funny story ready for the man with whom you have an appointment. It is not necessary to give all the details of how to be cheerful. Make a beginning and the details will work themselves out with scarcely an effort.

You will find that you can do your own work much more easily and satisfactorily to those above you and that those under you or in your employ will increase their efficiency in a way to astonish you. Cheerfulness is not a difficult habit to acquire and is as great an asset to its possessor as its opposite, depression, is a detriment.—Samuel Fallows in "Health and Happiness."

Power of Suggestion.

Dr. Coste de Lagrave, a French physician, in an interesting paper read before the first Paris international congress of experimental and therapeutic hypnotists tells of a number of remarkable experiments which he made upon himself. He had been troubled with neurasthenia, prominent among the symptoms of which was an extraordinary sense of fatigue, preventing him from making more than the slightest physical exertion. He could not walk a mile without feeling utterly exhausted.

One evening he suggested to himself that he should be able to walk without fatigue. The next day he walked seven miles with ease, breaking the journey only once. On another occasion while riding horseback he suffered greatly from cold feet. He closed his eyes and began suggesting that his feet should feel warm, a result which was actually attained.

By auto-suggestion Dr. Lagrave similarly developed a high degree of conversational power, a talent in which he had hitherto been conspicuously lacking. Similarly he found that by suggestion he could increase his facility at literary composition. He assured himself mentally that he should have an abundance of ideas about which to write and should experience no difficulty in putting them on paper. The result was exactly as he had hoped it would be. By auto-suggestion he also was able to produce dreams and even hallucinations. "I lived," he writes, "among the living, but in another world—a world that thought and reasoned quite differently from this one."

Being a sensible man, he soon perceived the risk he ran of unbalancing his mind if he carried his experiments to such an extreme, and thereafter he confined himself strictly to suggestions of a reinvigorating, curative, wholly beneficial character.

Secret of True Happiness.

It is not for our happiness to believe any proposition about the nature of man, the universe or God which is really at war with our fundamental instincts of honor or justice or with our ideals of gentleness and love, no matter how those instincts and ideals have been implanted or arrived at. The man or woman who hopes to attain reflective happiness as he works his strenuous way through the world must bring all beliefs, old and new, to this critical test and must reject or refuse to entertain beliefs which do not stand the test.—Charles W. Eliot in "The Happy Life."

A Word to Parents.

If you have a child who is afraid to go to sleep in the dark do not scold or threaten him. This will only aggravate the trouble. Instead, see that the little one gets plenty of open air exercise and nutritious food and avoid overstimulation of his brain by too much mental work. Above all things, do not read or relate to such a child any exciting or morbid stories.

Hygienic Thoughts.

All nature is remedial.—Emerson.

We may become gods, walking above the flesh.—Athanasius.

A man that is young in years may be old in hours if he has lost no time.—Bacon.

A Wheat Hospital.

"This wheat has been through the hospital," said a miller. "I can tell by the fine polish on the grains. Wheat that has been through the hospital for smut disease comes out better than well wheat."

The wheat grains, in truth, shone so that one could almost see one's face in them.

"You can see your face in them, can't you?" said the miller. "And no wonder. They've been through drastic treatment—drastic. Smut is a nasty disease, a kind of mold, that changes the starch and gluten in wheat to a black powder. When you see flour full of black specks it is a sign that some of the wheat was smutted. The cure is first to wash the wheat thoroughly. Then you dry it. Then you scour it. Then you dry it again. Finally you brush it. Wheat hospitals—they are found in most grain elevators nowadays—have big machines for washing, drying, scouring and brushing the grain, and wheat on its very last legs comes out of those infirmaries as spruce and blooming as a football girl."—Buffalo Express.

An Astrologer's Letter.

An astrologer's letter to President Van Buren forecasting the results of his election in 1840 is in the library of congress and perhaps gives a crude idea of some of the fallacies of our grandfathers. The following are some extracts: "In this horoscope the ascendant directed to the semisquare of Mars would be in operation about the middle of the fourth year, October, 1785, and might cause sickness, * * * flux or hurt by wounds," etc. * * * "I have opened the horoscope for General Harrison, which accords with the chief events of his past life and which if right he will not fill the office of president during the next term even if elected. And the danger I apprehend to yourself is not from your public opponents, but from those on whom you repose confidence." Those who are superstitious may be inclined to credit this star gazer with some measure of wisdom, for Harrison, although elected, died a month after his inauguration.—New York Post.

Home Loving Montenegrins.

Nowhere is love of country more intense than among the Montenegrins, to whom exile is the greatest of punishments. When W. J. Stillman was there in the seventies all the free men were away fighting, and he observed that when a messenger was wanted the official took a man out of the prison and sent him off, with no fear that he would not return. One such messenger was sent to Cattaro, in Austrian territory, with a large sum of money for the bank, and he duly came back. Another asked a Russian at Cattaro to intercede with Prince Nicholas for his release from prison. "But you are not in prison," said the Russian. "Oh," said the man, "I have only come down for a load of skins for So-and-so, but I must go into prison again when I get back to Cettinje." One prison guard watched all the prisoners when they sunned themselves out of doors, and if he was called away a prisoner would take his rifle and act as sentry for the time.

Abroad.

Abroad is a locality entirely surrounded by seasickness. In another view it is a bourne more or less mysterious, bounded on its farther side by your income and on its hither side by custom houses where you have to declare everything you bring back with you except a foreign accent and one change of hosiery.

Abroad is where—

1. They put
   a. Labels all over your luggage and
   b. It all over you.
2. You are almost always going down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and the good Samaritan invariably wants a tip.

Abroad is the stage of history, but that is only because history made the too common mistake of not seeing America first.—Puck.

Keeping Up the Limit.

In J. Comyns Carr's reminiscences is a characteristic anecdote of Burne-Jones, who had consulted his doctor about certain symptoms which seemed alarming.

"How many cigars do you smoke in a day?" the doctor inquired of his patient, to which Burne-Jones had carelessly replied, "Oh, I think about six." "Well," replied his adviser, "for the present you had better limit yourself to three." And in detailing the incident to me afterward Burne-Jones added, with a chuckle, "You know, my dear Carr, I never did smoke more than three."

Nicotine.

"If excessive smoking alone could cause heart degeneration," writes a correspondent of the London Mail, "such cases would be common instead of extremely rare. The fact is that only an almost infinitesimal amount of nicotine is absorbed in smoking. An ordinary sized cigar or an ounce of smoking tobacco contains enough of this virulent poison to kill two men. The only reason all smokers are not killed at once is that the nicotine is destroyed in the combustion of the leaf."

Procrastination.

"Why is procrastination said to be the thief of time?" asked the teacher.

"'Cause it takes a fellow so long to say it," answered the bright boy at the foot of the class.—Chicago News.

Mrs. James Burdette.

Mrs. James Burdette died at her home in Macon, Feb. 1, 1909, aged 40 years, 4 months, 7 days. She was born the 23rd day of September, 1868, in Ridgeway, her parents being Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Jackson. In early life she sought Christ for a Savior and joined the Methodist church when a young girl. She was an active worker in the Epworth League and will be greatly missed in church circles as well as by her host of friends. She was preceded to the better land by her sister, Mrs. Geo. Higdon, 13 years ago last September. She is survived by her husband, James Y. Burdette; one sister, Mrs. L. W. Randall, of Adrian, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Jackson of Macon, besides many other relatives and friends. She was a loving wife and a true daughter, always thinking of the comfort of others. In her last illness, during all the terrible suffering, her last thoughts were of her lonely husband and the grief-stricken father and mother.

A Difficult Task.

One of the greatest puzzles, said a member of parliament, is how to concede the most worthy and honorable intentions to an opponent, how to profess an unswerving and unfading belief in his uncompromising veracity and bona fides and at the same time to convey a distinct conviction that he is an impostor and a humbug of the first water and an accomplished Ananias carrying a welter of thirteen stone seven pounds in the mendacity handicap.—London Opinion.

Net Bull Run.

The story was told of an American who happened to be crossing the ocean some years ago on the Fourth of July, which national holiday was celebrated with great enthusiasm by the Americans on board.

"I say," asked one of the Englishmen, "what is this the anniversary of anyhow? Isn't it to celebrate the battle of Bull Run or something of that kind?"

"No," promptly spoke up an American, "not Bull Run—John Bull Rus."

The Secret Of Long Life.

A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. But long ago millions of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolongs life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, rebuilds wasted nerve cells, imparts life and tone to the entire system. Its a godsend to weak, sick and debilitated people. "Kidney trouble had blighted my life for months," writes W. M. Sherman of Cushing, Me., "but Electric Bitters cured me entirely." Only 50c. at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated nearly many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. These small little granular wafers, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need of acute pain, nor of suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Present: Trustees VanWinkle, Slater, Sherman, Magers, Teachout, Lowry.

Moved and supported that the report of the Public Lighting Committee be be accepted and placed on file and the report published. Carried.

Tecumseh, Michigan.

Mr. President and Council:—

Your Committee on Electric Lighting, to whom was referred the matter of a change from our present system, beg leave to submit the following report for your consideration.

We understood the appointment of this Committee by the Council to investigate the question of Municipal Lighting in other villages and cities of Michigan, was caused by the numerous complaints from our citizens made to the Council from time to time that our present street lighting was inefficient, that many lamps were dark, and that the rate for residence lighting was considered too high and exorbitant, as compared with service given; also, that because of said complaints from so many of our citizens, it was the intention of this Council to consider the advisability of submitting to the people at some future time the question of a Municiple Plant for Tecumseh.

With this in view, your Committee made special effort to ascertain in every town visited, the efficiency of service, cost of maintaining, cost of plant, rates charged and general satisfaction or dissatisfaction of whatever system was used.

In every town visited, we found a much lower rate for residence lighting than Tecumseh, and in some towns a lower rate on street lighting; and every town having a Municipal Plant—either separate or in connection with their water works system—reported it as giving entire satisfaction; as being self-sustaining at a moderate rate of 10c or less; and in many cases was a source of large revenue to the city as compared with size and cost of plant.

The first town visited was

In summing up this matter much has been said about some towns being very nicely lighted by the use of porch lights, in addition to arc lights, we only found two towns using porch lights extensively, one place they charge 10c per lamp per month, the other town furnish them free. Porch lighting in these two towns was not as good as it should be for the reason too many old and worn out lamps are used. We are satisfied the porch lighting system is a splendid idea for lighting up the town, but good lamps should be used.

The question has been asked as to how municipal lighting plants compare with lighting plants operated by private corporations as to operation, maintainance and efficiency. To this we have to say that in all the municipal plants we visited they were fully up to the standard in every way.

We believe that our village can be very much better lighted by using two 40 candle power Tungsten lamps on each street corner where the arc lamps are now in use. Place one on each pole, about ten or fifteen feet from the ground, and suspend them from an iron bracket extending out about five or six feet from the pole, also place one lamp same make on either side of the street on the curb line and middle of each block, this would get all the light under the heavy foliage, where it should be, and the expense would be no greater.

We would further recommend a municipal electric light plant for the village of Tecumseh to be operated in connection with our water works, with sufficient power to take care of the street lighting, commercial lighting, and motor service, with one 115 kw., 900 RPM, 2300 volts, 3 phase, 60 cycle, belted alternator with exciter.

One 200 kw., 600 RPM. like preceding.

One 4-panel switchboard.

One 16x30 Reynolds-Corliss belted engine.

One 18x36 Reynolds-Corliss belted engine.

Three 72x18 horizontal return tubular boilers.

This plant installed in connection with the water work plant would cost $30,000.00, for which bonds would have to be issued for 15 years, payable $2,000.00 per year with interest would cost the village $3,500 00 the first year and decrease by the amount of interest each year, and with a share of commercial lighting, all of which would increase very fast with municipal ownership, we could have a plant in 15 years that cost the village practically nothing.

We also believe that a large majority of the taxpayers and the people generally would be pleased to see this village have a municipal lighting plant and that the citizens be given an opportunity to vote on this question at an early date.

ANOTHONY FENCE COMPANY

Make Their Seventh Semi-Annual Dividend.

The Anthony Fence Company have just made their seventh semi-annual divident of 3 per cent on all common and preferred stock. The past year has been hard for all manufacturing industries, but certainly the Anthony Fence factory will compare favorably with the best. They have just completed two new warehouses, one 30x60 feet to be used for the storage of wire, the second, 100x118 feet, for the storage of fence. In the fence warehouse they have installed an over head electric crane for convenience in piling fence, also loading cars for shipment which enables them to do in one-half day what has previously taken two days to accomplish. It also increases their warehouse capacity about one third.

An Ideal Sunday Newspaper.

Recent issues of THE SUNDAY RECORD-HERALD remind one that Chicago may fairly lay claim to producing the best newspapers in the world, not excepting those of New York. THE SUNDAY RECORD-HERALD, in foreign news alone, has its own special cable service in addition to those of the New York Herald, World, Journal of Commerce and Associated Press. This is a fair example of the completeness of the paper in every department.

Aside from the regular news features, there is something in THE SUNDAY RECORD-HERALD for every member of the family. The special articles by William E. Curtis and Walter Wellman are always interesting. The sporting section offers four whole pages of fresh and authentic news in every line of sport. The woman's section is filled with illustrated articles on the latest wrinkles in fashion and domestic science, with Marion Harland and Mme Qui Vive as regular contributors, and Dame Curtsey's "Novelties in Entertainment" as a valued feature. The dramatic page, written by James O'Donnell Bennett, is admittedly without an equal in the West. The array of splendid special articles by skilled writers, finely illustrated, also is typical of the high literary quality of THE RECORD-HERALD. In the way of humor there is the comic colored supplement for children, besides Richard H. Little's laughable articles for adults and S. E. Kiser's delightful "Alternating Currents" for everybody.

But the thing that lifts THE SUNDAY RECORD HERALD most emphatically above all its rivals is its magazine section. There is nothing else that can touch this in American journalism. The Sunday Magazine of THE RECORD-HERALD is a real magazine, full of stories and articles by the most famous writers of our day, illustrated by celebrated artists. In quality and beauty it compares favorably with the best monthlies. No wonder THE RECORD-HERALD is regarded as the ideal Sunday newspaper!

Soldier Balks Death Plot.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a civil war veteran of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." GROVER GILLEN

Will Not be a Member of the Toledo Club in the American Association This Year.

Failed to Renew Contract with Armour, Because of Too Little Pay.

PRESIDENT ARMOUR HAS TIED THE CAN TO HIM.

Grover Gillen, who played on the Tecumseh base ball team a few years ago, and who has helped Ann Arbor on their indoor baseball team with his clever work at first base this winter, has heard the rattle of the tinware. Grover failed to attach himself to a Toledo contract this year, because he felt that he was not getting enough money, and now word comes from Toledo that Pres. Armour has tied a can to the tall Saline gentleman, and it will be back to the bushes for him.

Gillen was looked upon as one of the most promising pitchers in the American Association and the action taken by the Toledo club has surprised a good many. However the other clubs in the association could not see him even with a spy glass, and the Toledo club had no difficulty in securing waivers on him. A Toledo dispatch says.

"Grover Gillen will not be a member of the Toledo pitching staff the coming season, for President Armour has decided to sell the Saline slanter to some minor league team. Waivers have been obtained on Grover on every club in the American association and eastern league and just as soon as a deal now hanging fire is closed, the slim-legged slabber will be cut loose.

Gillen's departure puts it up to President Armour to dig up another twirler, for only Dattimore. West and Nagle are known quantities. As Nagle and Latty are southpaws, the new man must need be a right hander, for President Armour will hardly carry more than two twirlers who pass the sphere from the sinister mitt. But that is another story, which will be of more interest when the deal is nearer completion.

"Grover pitched some good games for Toledo during the two or three years he was with the club, but he did not improve as much as hoped for last year. He is young and strong however, and with proper care of himself and attention to instructions he may find his way back to the A. A. The fact that all the managers in the association waived claim on Gillen indicates that they are of opinions similar to Armour's relative to the boy's ability.

ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY

Ask for a New Contract with the City for a Term of Five Years

GAVE A LOWER RATE, BUT THE COUNCIL REJECT THE PROPROSITION.

Matter rests now with Public Lighting Committee.

The Tecumseh Electric company made a proposition Monday evening to the common council of the village, at their regular meeting, to have their contract which expires in May, annulled, and a new one entered into, for five years.

The electric company as an inducement offers to give a rate for residence lighting at 11 cents a kilowatt up to 50 kilowatts a month thereafter, with a discount of 10 per cent if paid before the 10th of the month, which is much lower than the present rate.

A special meeting of the council was held on Wednesday night, to consider the proposition made by the electric company. The proposition made by the electric company was turned down by the "city dads," and a much lower rate proposed by them was given the electric company to consider.

The matter rests now with the Public Lighting Committee who will confer with the Tecumseh Electric company and report at the next meeting of the council. The readers of the Herald will find the report of the public lighting committee, as given to the council, which is printed in this issue of the Herald, very intereating.

HIGH-O-ME

That's the Way to Pronounce Hyomei, the Money-Back Catarrh Cure

As doubt exists in the minds of many readers of the Herald let us say that the above is the proper pronunciation of America's most wonderful catarrh cure.

C. A. Wright & Son are the agent for Hyomei in Tecumseh and he will sell you an inhaler, a bottle of Hyomei, and full instructions for use, for only $1.00.

And if it fails to cure acute or chronic catarrh, asthma, bronchitis, croup, hay fever or coughs and colds, he will give you your money back. The person who suffers from catarrh after such an offer as that, must like to snuffle, spit and wheeze, and be generally disgusting.

Read what Mr. G. F. Lowe says:

"I have used Hyomei for a case of nasal catarrh which had bothered me for a long time. I can say that Hyomei killed the germs of the disease and gave me the much sought and needed relief. From this experience I know Hyomei to be a reliable remedy, and I give it the praise and recommendation that it deserves."—G. F. Lowe, R. F. D. No. 7, Allegan, Mich., September 19, 1908.

FEEBLE OLD LADY

Has Strength Restored By Vinol

Mrs. Michael Bloom of Lewistown, Pa., who is 80 years of age, says: "For a long time I have been so feeble that I have had to be wheeled around in an invalid's chair. I had no strength and took cold at the slightest provocation, which invariably settled on my lungs, and a cough would result. My son learned of the cod liver preparation called Vinol, and procured a bottle for me. It built up my strength rapidly, and after taking three bottles I am able to do most of my work, and I can walk a quarter of a mile easily. Every aged or weak person who requires strength should try Vinol. I am delighted with what it has done for me."

As a body builder and strength creator for old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, and after sickness, Vinol is unexcelled. If it fails to give satisfaction we will return your money.

Disease Scents.

"Every disease almost has its peculiar odor," said a doctor. "This odor helps us greatly in diagnosis.

"Gout imparts to the skin a smell precisely like whey. Diabetes causes a sweet, honey-like smell. Jaundice occasions a smell of musk. Smallpox has a very strong and hideous smell. It is like burning bones. Measles has a smell as of fresh plucked feathers.

"The fevers have the most distinctive odors. The odor of typhus is ammoniacal; that of intermittent is like fresh brown bread hot from the oven; that of typhus is musty, recalling to the mind old, damp cellars; that of yellow fever is like the washings of a dirty gun barrel.

"So, you see, to speak of a doctor scenting our disease is not to use a mere figure of speech."

A Willing Victim.

"Well, Mr. Bickers," said Lawyer Breef, "your wife sues for divorce and asks $5,000 a year alimony. Of course we will defend it."

"But that is an enormous alimony."

THE BASILISK.

How the Fabulous Monster Was Pictured by Ancient Writers.

The basilisk was the most famous of the many fabulous monsters of mediaeval folklore. According to the popular notion, it was hatched by a toad from an egg laid by the cock of the common barnyard fowl. In the ancient picture books it was usually represented as an eight limbed serpent or dragon, sometimes with and sometimes without wings. Its name is derived from basilisco, meaning a little king, and was applied because the creature was figured with a circle of white spots on its head which much resembled a crown. The cockatrice, a species of basilisk, besides having a crown, possessed a comb which was an exact counterpart of the cock's.

Pliny assures us that the basilisk had a voice which "struck terror to the hearts of men, beasts and serpents." The Bible classes it with the lion, the serpent and the dragon as one of the most formidable creatures. Old writers—Pliny, Bascho and others—say that its bite was mortal in every case, that its breath was suffocating and that no plant would grow in the vicinity of its lair. Its dead body was often suspended in belfries to prevent swallows from building there.

Carving Scissors.

"I thought I knew all about scissors," said the man. "I had seen tailors' scissors for cutting heavy cloth, dressmakers' scissors for cutting flimsy fabrics and lace and still other scissors for cutting paper, finger nails, grapevines, all kinds of metals and even for shearing sheep, but in spite of that wide knowledge of scissors I was puzzled when I saw the large, peculiarly shaped pair of scissors lying in the showcase.

"'What are these scissors for?' I asked the clerk.

"'Carving meat,' he said. 'With scissors of this kind carving becomes mere child's play.'

"'I never saw anybody use them,' said I.

"'Nobody does use them,' said the clerk—'that is, only a very few. In Europe carving scissors are popular because they cut right through meat, gristle, bone and all, but it takes a little practice to learn to manipulate the things, and nobody in this country has patience enough for that.'—Exchange.

The Talking Pots.

"Yes, these pots of mine are all right," said the potter. "They don't talk, though."

"No pots do."

"Don't they? Look here."

He took from the shelf a strange, crude pot daubed yellow and blue that had the shape of a duck. He filled it with water; then he poured the water out again. "Quack, quack, quack!" said the pot distinctly. Every gurgle was a distinct quack. "There's art for you," said the potter. "Every gurgle of that duck pot is a quack. Wonderful Astec art! And I have an Astec pig pot that grunts like a pig and a dog pot that barks like a dog. Wonderful chaps, those Astec potter fellows! I wish I knew their secret. Imagine an Astec banquet," he said after a pause. "Pots filled, you know, with wine. And every time you pour yourself a drink 'Quack!' go the ducks, 'Bowwow!' go the dogs. Regular pandemonium!"—New York Press.

The Light of the Firefly.

When man will attain the perfect vacuum, then the rude ether blush of the electric light bulb will give forth many times more light, purified and heatless, soft and healing, as the light of the stars, penetrating as the sun. An examination of the firefly when emitting flames or light shows bodily movements that cannot be understood to mean anything else than vacuum producing. The lights are always seen in the vacuum sack on the back. Immediately before emitting light the insect will flatten the body, draw the legs in, droop the head, seemingly contracting in all directions; then with the relaxation come the flame and light. The bodies of the glowworm and firefly always are transparent when filled with flame. The blades of grass or other debris are seen plainly through the bodies. Here are cases of nature dealing with X rays.—Chicago Tribune.

How Marshall Field Made Money.

In the early eighties, when the First National bank of Wallawalla was not as big as it is now, I pretty nearly had my breath taken away one day by a good looking stranger hailing from Chicago. He threw a letter of credit for $80,000 from a Chicago bank on my desk and quietly said, "Can you cash that?" I looked him over once or twice, made a quick estimate of all the loose cash I thought we could scrape up and said: "Yes. How do you want it?" He gave a smile, sat down and said, "I think I'll take it in land." In a month's time, as his authorized agent, I bought about 30,000 acres of cheap railroad land for my Chicago friend, taking the deeds in my name at his request, paying an average of $2.65 an acre. He cleared over $1,000,000 on this one deal. His name was Marshall Field.—Senator Ankeny's Reminiscences in Leslie's Weekly.

In Great Luck.

"I have been looking over my financial operations," said Mr. Easigo. "I must say they are more successful than usual."

"Have you been making large profits?"

"No. I don't expect anything like that."

"But you say you were successful?"

"Comparatively successful. During the month I have loaned money to five friends, and only three of them have quit speaking to me."—Washington Star.

No straining of medical ethics can find any fault with it. THE PRINCIPAL ACTIVE INGREDIENTS are prominently incorporated in the label on the bottle, that the people may know that the claims made for Peruna have a true justification.

The only departure we shall make from medical ethics in the conduct of Peruna affairs in the future, is the fact that we shall continue to advertise and sell our product TO THE PEOPLE.

If we would agree to sell to doctors only, to advertise for doctors only, then the medical fraternity would be obliged to recognize Peruna as being entirely within their approval.

BUT WE SHALL NOT DO THIS.

We shall continue to offer Peruna to the people. We shall continue to convey to the people our claims for Peruna as a household remedy. We shall continue to supply the people with free literature, teaching them how to use our medicine, teaching them how to avoid disease, teaching them many things of benefit to the home. We shall continue to do this, whether the medical profession like it or not.

We are proposing from this time on to take the public into our confidence. Notwithstanding that some imitators and substitutors will be attempting to put up something which they consider just as good as Peruna, we are going to draw aside the veil of secrecy and allow any one who chooses to know exactly OF WHAT PERUNA IS COMPOSED.

This ought to disarm all honest criticism. We expect, however, that criticism will continue. On some pretext or other those who are envious of the success of Peruna will continue to find fault. But we are determined to give such people no just complaint. PERUNA IS A GREAT MEDICINE.

People Who Object to Liquid Medicines Can Now Secure Peruna Tablets.

It has become a household word in millions of homes. Our faith in the remedy is stronger than ever. Every year we expect to establish new plants in foreign lands until the people of all the world are supplied with this valuable household remedy.

WE CLAIM PERUNA TO BE A CATARRH REMEDY. Buy a bottle and try it. If it helps you, be honest and acknowledge that it has helped you.

If you want us to we will publish your statement exactly as you furnish it to us. We will add no words, take away no words. If you wish us to we will publish your portrait in connection with it. We will not do this without your written request, without your entire consent.

Peruna has cured thousands of people of chronic catarrh, in many phases and locations. At least, that is what the people say to us, through unsolicited testimonials. Peruna will cure many thousand more, in spite of fabricated slanders to the contrary.

WE GUARANTEE EVERY BOTTLE OF PERUNA TO CONTAIN THE INGREDIENTS PRINTED ON THE LABEL.

We guarantee that every testimonial we use is absolutely true—in the exact language of the testifier.

We guarantee that every photograph published is the photograph of the person whose name it bears, that every word of every testimonial was authorized by the hand that signed it.

We are determined to beat our opponents by being fairer than they are, by dealing squarer than they dare to. We are determined to meet falsehood with truth, duplicity with candor, insincerity with sincerity.

We know that the users of Peruna will appreciate our stand. We believe that the dealers in Peruna will applaud our course. We expect even our opponents will be obliged to acknowledge finally that Peruna is not only an honest and useful remedy, but one of the GREATEST HOUSEHOLD MEDICINES ON THE CONTINENT.

Know His Limitations.

"I proph'sied he'd make a living," Mr. Hobart said, speaking of a New York painter who spent a summer at his farm, "because he knew what he could do, little as 'twas, and didn't try to fly too high.

"Yes," Mr. Hobart continued, with a thoughtful smile, "you couldn't get him to attempt any foolish flights. All that summer he set out in the hen yard, painting hens, or else out back o' the barn, painting pigs. And when I said to him, 'Look a-here, when Abe Fowler comes to paint the house I'll get him to show you how and let you take a hack at the side end, where 'twon't show so much and allow it on your board,' he just shook his head and smiled that kind o' gentle, sorrowful smile o' his, and says he: 'I couldn't think of it, Mr. Hobart. I should just ruin the looks o' the house. I'll keep to the pigs and the hens, for I know my limitations.'

"Well, 'twas a real relief to me, for I suppose likely he would have botched the job consid'able. And I said to him then real hearty, 'Young man, you'll earn your living yet, for you ain't all et up with pride and ambition,' and my words have come true, by what I hear."—Youth's Companion.

The Retort Final.

The garrulous old lady in the stern of the boat had pestered the guide with her comments and questions ever since they had started. Her meek little husband, who was bunched toad-like in the bow, fished in silence. The old lady seemingly exhausted every possible point in fish and animal life, woodcraft and personal history when she suddenly espied one of those curious paths of oily, unbroken water frequently seen on small lakes which are ruffled by a light breeze.

"Oh, guide, guide," she exclaimed, "what makes that funny streak in the water? No, there—right over there!"

The guide was busy rebaiting the old gentleman's hook and merely mumbled, "U-m-mm."

"Guide," repeated the old lady in tones that were not to be denied, "look right over there where I'm pointing and tell me what makes that funny streak in the water."

The guide looked up from his baiting, with a sigh.

"That? Oh, that's where the road went across the ice last winter."—Everybody's Magazine.

Emerson's Memory.

Emerson was a notable sufferer from the vagaries of memory. His biographer relates that he met him one day in Boston apparently at a loss for something and asked him where he was going. "To dine," said Emerson, "with a very old and dear friend. I know where she lives, but I hope she won't ask me her name." And then he proceeded to describe her as "the mother of the wife of the young man—the tall man—who speaks so well," and so on, until his interlocutor guessed to whom he was referring. Even the names of common objects often failed him completely. On one occasion when he wanted an umbrella he said: "I can't tell its name, but I can tell its history. Strangers take it away." This failing of Emerson led to a pathetic scene when he attended Longfellow's funeral and remarked as he gazed at the coffin, "He was a sweet and beautiful soul, but I have entirely forgotten his name."

Nero's Golden House.

The "golden house" of Nero seems from all accounts to have been the most stupendous dwelling place ever built for a mortal man. Even if we regard the ancient descriptions as somewhat exaggerated it remains one of the largest royal houses ever built, and the internal decorations seem to have been incomparably magnificent. It was surrounded by parks, woods and pools of great size, which appear to have been entirely within the walls. The colonnades of the house itself extended a mile in length and crossed one of the main thoroughfares of the city. The cities of the east were ransacked for masterpieces of Greek art for the interior. The walls shone with gold and pearls, and the roof rested on marble columns of enormous size and beauty.—New York American.

ATTELL FIGHTS TONIGHT.

Defends His Title Against Eddie Kelly in New Orleans.

New Orleans, Feb. 4.—There will be some easy picking for Abe Attell featherweight champion of the world, tonight at the Southern Athletic club, when he meets Eddie Kelly of Chicago, unless the stars in the pugilistic sky are lying. Kelly has heard the referee's "nine, ten," twice before when he met Attell, and it will be three times and out for Eddie tonight. If not, there will be a new featherweight champion tomorrow.

The bout will go ten rounds unless one of the boys goes to the hay sooner. There will be a big crowd of sports at the ringside.

GOVERNOR INDICTED.

Oklahoma's Chief Executive and Others Charged With Fraud.

Muskogee, Okla., Feb. 4.—The federal grand jury that is investigating town lot frauds has made its final report and has found indictments against eight prominent men on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government.

There is an indictment against Governor Haskell.

Another Venire Exhausted.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 4.—After obtaining two new jurors, making eleven now in the box, the trial of Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, Robin J. Cooper and John D. Sharpe for the murder of E. W. Carmack was abruptly interrupted Wednesday because of a lack of veniremen. A fifth venire of 500 men was ordered in court on Monday, when an effort will be made to complete the jury.

May Put Hains In Asylum.

New York, Feb. 4.—Rather than have Captain P. C. Hains, Jr., put on trial for his life for the slaying of William E. Annis, at the Bayside Yacht club landing, his parents and attorney have decided, it is said, to apply to the supreme court for the appointment of a commission to pass on his mental condition.

Eat What You want of the food you need Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

SKIRMISHES IN SIGHT.

State Senate to Tackle Dickinson Primary Bill.

ALSO WATKINS LOBBY BILL.

Fact That Dickinson Measure Is Considered "Administration" Presupposes a Fight—Collins Bill May Be Substituted—But Slight Difference Between Two Epistles.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 8.—Two lively skirmishes are in prospect in the senate this week. One will be over Senator Dickinson's primary election bill which comes up as a special order of business Wednesday, and another is expected at the final consideration of the Watkins lobby bill.

The Dickinson bill is branded as an "administration measure," which fact no matter what the merits of the bill may be, is sure to incur the opposition of several. Just what tactics these anti-administrationists will pursue is merely a matter of conjecture, since they are pursuing a close-mouth policy, but it is not at all unlikely that an attempt will be made to sidetrack the Dickinson bill entirely and put Senator Collins' primary bill on the main line.

Between the Dickinson and Collins bills there are but two marked differences. The latter applies without option to all offices from that of governor to ward councilman, while the Dickinson bill provides that the question of the nomination of city officers by direct primary may be submitted to popular vote in the respective cities on presentation of a petition signed by 10 per cent of the voters.

The most material difference, however, lies in the clause of the Dickinson bill providing that whenever a United States senator is to be elected any candidate for the legislature may, if he so desires, file with his nomination petition a statement that he will or will not vote for the candidate for the United States senate who receives the highest number of votes of his political party in the state as a whole at the primary. This clause or any equivalent is not to be found in the Collins bill.

SICK AND ALONE.

Woman Rescued From Her Burning Home.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 8.—When fire broke out in the home of Walter Cummings, in the south end of this city, at night, none except his wife, who for several weeks has been critically ill, was in the building. Mrs. Cummings was awakened by the smoke and flames, but owing to her weakened condition was unable to give alarm or crawl from the house.

It was nearly ten minutes later before neighbors discovered the structure ablaze and rushed in and carried the sick woman out.

Former Legislator Dies.

Grand Ledge, Mich., Feb. 8.—Levi P. Partlow, a well known resident of Clinton county, is dead at his home in Eagle township after an illness of several months. Mr. Partlow represented his district in the legislature during the sessions of 1903 and 1905 and has been prominent in this locality for many years. He was born in 1846 on the farm where he died.

Two Baptized in Icy Lake.

Cedar Springs, Mich., Feb. 8.—Two converts braved the icy waters of Baptist lake Sunday afternoon in order to become Christians and members of the Baptist church at Grove, situated near here. The Rev. F. L. Springs performed the ceremony. The lake was frozen over, and it was necessary to cut a hole in the ice.

Young Journalist Dies.

Alpena, Mich., Feb. 8.—Frank E. Larrett, a prominent young newspaper man of this city, is dead after a brief illness of typhoid fever. He was twenty-four years of age. Mr. Larrett was born in Bay City and started on his journalistic career shortly after completing his schooling a few years ago.

Train Cuts His Legs Off.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 8.—James Holbrook, aged twenty-one years, whose parents reside in this city, was run over by an Ann Arbor train near Marion and had both legs cut off. He may not recover. Holbrook, with Van Horn, a fellow laborer, was "beating" his way and fell off the train.

West Branch Girl Missing.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 8.—Cora Embury, seventeen years old, and up to last Tuesday residing with her parents at West Branch, is being sought by the police. The young woman left her home suddenly, not telling any of her friends of her intentions.

PEOPLE NOT WILDLY EXCITED.

California Isn't Greatly Stirred Over Japanese Question.

LEGISLATORS MAKING NOISE.

Los Angeles Citizens Opposed to Legislation Against Japs—San Francisco More Interested in Factional Struggle—Final Contest Comes This Week.

San Francisco, Feb. 8.—That Californians in general are not taking great interest in the proposed Japanese legislation at Sacramento is apparent from replies to inquiries sent by the Associated Press to all portions of the state. Seemingly, no one is excited over the situation but the legislators themselves. Where opinions are expressed there is a division of sentiment as to the advisability of the state taking action that might embarrass the national government.

Los Angeles reports that the sentiment in that city and its vicinity is opposed to legislation against Japanese at this time. Stockton, Fresno, San Jose and other interior cities are taking little interest one way or the other in the contest at the state capital.

In San Francisco the main question as to the necessity for Japanese legislation is lost sight of in the interest with which the general public is watching the contest between the president, aided by Governor Gillett and the Republican organization, and the Japanophobic faction.

Aside from a protest from San Francisco business men against action on the subject by the legislature at this time, there have been no public meetings or other demonstrations for or against the Japanese measures now before the legislature.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 8.—Japanese legislation will be to the fore this week in both branches of the California legislature. Two bills, drawn by Grove L. Johnson of Sacramento and aimed at Japanese, will be the subject of discussion on reconsideration in the assembly on Wednesday. One of these, already passed by the house, segregates Japanese in public schools of the state, while the other, which was refused passage, empowers municipalities to segregate in residential quarters all undesirable aliens whose presence might in the opinion of boards of supervisors be inimical to the public health and the morals of the various communities affected.

CHURCHMEN MAY UNITE.

Many Protestant Organizations Join in Big Conference.

Pittsburg, Feb. 8.—The most important conference of the Protestant church laity said to have ever been held in this country will take place in this city on Feb. 26, when executive officers representing men's organizations totalling upwards of 1,000,000 members will meet with a view of national co-operation and discuss the possibility of a united federation. Canada will also be represented at the conference.

The conference will follow and will be a part of the third annual convention of the Presbyterian Brotherhood of America, to be held in this city on Feb. 23, 24 and 25. February 26 the executive officers of these church organizations will go into conference.

One of the important features of the conference will be the discussion of a proposition to arrange for co-operation of the various men's organizations of the different denominations in the larger cities as well as nationally with a view of unity and co-operation both in church work and municipal improvement.

The proposed national and local co-operation will be entirely free from political purpose, though it will be proposed to use the co-operation, strength and influence of the united organizations—if a federation is approved—for municipal and civic improvements in all American cities insofar as such civic movement and social improvement movements are non-partisan and without specific political purpose.

Wireless Operator and Seaman Drown.

Woodshole, Mass., Feb. 8.—While standing on the ice of a pond in a cedar swamp near this village, Charles Gottliebson, a wireless operator of the revenue cutter Acushnet, broke through the ice, and both he and Seaman Oscar Rongved, also of the Acushnet and who made a brave attempt to rescue him, were drowned. Several of their shipmates made an effort to reach the drowning men from the shore by tying their handkerchiefs to make a lifeline, but the ice kept breaking under them. A tree was then secured, but before it could be put out on the ice both men had gone under.

DIGNIFIED PROCEDURE.

It Will Attend Declaring Taft and Sherman Elected.

TAKES PLACE ON WEDNESDAY.

Senators Will March in Procession to House, Where Electoral Votes Will Be Counted—Vice President Will Preside—Senator Burrows One of the Tellers.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The formal ratification of the election of William Howard Taft of Ohio and James Schoolcraft Sherman of New York to be president and vice president of the United States respectively, to be held in the hall of the house of representatives next Wednesday, will be one of the most ceremonial events attending the political life of America.

The senate and house will assemble at noon as usual. After being called to order by their respective presiding officers and listening to the usual prayer by their chaplains, the senate will proceed to the hall of the house, where a joint meeting will be held to formally count the electoral vote.

The ceremony will begin at 1 o'clock. Shortly before that time Vice President Fairbanks will leave his chair as presiding officer of the senate and will proceed to the east door preparatory to leading the procession of senators to the south wing of the capitol. He will be accompanied by the secretary of the senate, and a squad of capitol police will be in waiting as an escort. Colonel Daniel M. Ransdell, sergeant at arms of the senate, will immediately precede the vice president, senators falling in line two by two. The procession will then move along the marble corridor to the house of representatives. The assistant doorkeepers of the senate, carrying two boxes containing the electoral votes previously received by Mr. Fairbanks from special messengers from the several states, will closely follow the vice president.

Fairbanks Wields Gravel.

Speaker Cannon will be informed of the coming of the senate, and representatives occupying seats on his right hand will vacate them in order to make room for the ninety-two senators.

The vice president will take a seat provided for him at the right of the speaker and will be presented with the gravel. Mr. Fairbanks will then unlock the wooden boxes and, announcing the purpose of the gathering, will open the packages in alphabetical order, handing the certificates to the four tellers, Senators Burrows of Michigan and Bailey of Texas having been appointed on the part of the senate and Representatives Gaines of West Virginia and Russell of Texas on the part of the house. When the counting has been concluded, showing that Taft and Sherman have received 321 votes and Bryan and Kern 162, the vice president will inquire whether any one desires to file a protest against the result as announced, and in the absence of such protest he will declare the successful candidates duly elected.

As soon as this simple function has been performed the senate will return to its chamber, and both bodies will resume the ordinary work of legislation.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

Part of the distilling plant of Bernheim Brothers, beyond the city limits of Louisville, Ky., has burned. The damage is $75,000, insured.

It is stated that Wilbur Wright, the American aeroplanist, who is now at Pau, France, will go to Rome some time in March for the purpose of giving instructions to two Italian aeronauts. It is understood that he will receive $12,000 for his work.

The famous and somewhat historical "Black Horse Troop" of Cleveland again will come into its own on the fourth of next March, when it will act as the personal escort of another Ohio president. The inauguration of President Elect Taft will give the opportunity.

Confusion bordering on a panic ensued in a crowded five cent theater in Halsted street in Chicago when a patron, quarreling over a seat, drew a revolver and shot a man. The audience rushed to the street. The wounded man, Daniel Zincarelli, probably will die. His assailant escaped.

John Hughes and George Ketcherside fought a duel in the main street of Leadwood, near Des Loge, Mo., and each suffered fatal wounds. The shooting was in front of the home of Mrs. Adams, a widow with whom Ketcherside had boarded. He saw Hughes talking to Mrs. Adams and became jealous.

TAFT LEAVES FOR UNITED STATES.

Declares He Found Canal Progressing Satisfactorily.

Colon, Feb. 8.—President Elect William H. Taft and party have left here on board the North Carolina for New Orleans accompanied by the cruiser Montana. Just previous to embarking Mr. Taft gave out the following:

"I am not prepared now to make a statement as to the results of the trip to the isthmus except to say that we have found the work progressing in a most satisfactory way; the organization better than ever before; the esprit de corps excellent and the determination of all, even the humblest laborer, dedicated to the building of the canal. This has impressed itself upon every one of the board of visiting engineers as it has upon me.

"With reference to the type of canal and the continuance of the present plans the engineers promise that they will be able to hand me their report by the time we land at New Orleans."

Governor Melendez and a large gathering of the Panama railroad and the isthmian canal commission employes were present at the dock to bid the president elect farewell. Lieutenant Colonel Goethals, chief engineer of the canal, accompanied Mr. Taft on the North Carolina. He will proceed to Washington to discuss the matter of appropriation necessary for the completion of the work.

GALA TIME FOR TAFT.

New Orleans Plans Many Functions In His Honor.

New Orleans, Feb. 8.—Quotations on high silk hats and frock coats have taken a sudden jump in the local market owing to the demand for them for the reception of President Elect Taft this week. Mr. Taft will return from Panama via New Orleans next Thursday and will be this city's guest for two days. Several dozen committees are busy at work arranging a program for the entertainment of the distinguished guest.

The president elect is to arrive at the mouth of the river late next Wednesday night or Thursday morning. There he is to leave the battleship North Carolina and go aboard the lighthouse tender Oleander, which will convey him to the scout cruiser Birmingham. The cruiser will bring him within sight of New Orleans. The steamer General Newton will bring him to the landing.

Parades, receptions and balls have been arranged in his honor. The festivities will close with a big banquet Friday evening at the Hotel Grunewald. Cardinal Gibbons will deliver the invocation.

The president elect will leave Saturday morning for Cincinnati.

MANIAC ATTACKED HIM.

Rockefeller's Son-in-Law Had Trying Experience on Ship.

New York, Feb. 8.—Charles A. Strong, professor of psychology at Columbia university, who is a son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, was attacked on the North German Lloyd liner Barbarossa by a young Brazilian, Louis Leite, who is now a prisoner on Ellis Island pending an investigation of his sanity. Professor Strong was bitten twice on the fact by his assailant, who sprang upon him suddenly.

STILL MYSTERY.

Dayton Officers Unable to Determine What Caused Girl's Death.

Dayton, O., Feb. 8.—With the exception of a miscroscopal examination of the stomach in search of possible traces of poison, the final autopsy on the body of Elizabeth Fulhart of Vandalia, O., Dayton's latest murder victim, has failed to reveal the immediate cause of the girl's death.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Carelessness is really laziness under a more polite name.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see. Sold by all dealers.

Darwin's Centenary

Part First—The Nineteenth Century Newton—Unpromising In His Youth—His Early Interest In Science . . .

By Oliver Leigh

Copyright, 1909, by the American Press Association

HE CARED ONLY FOR SHOOTING.

THE name of Luther marks the fierce ecclesiastical convulsion of the sixteenth century. That of Isaac Newton recalls the no less momentous reformation in the peaceful field of thought caused by his discovery of the law of gravitation. So in his chosen department of knowledge has Darwin given distinction to the nineteenth century by his demonstration that man is not a special creation, but a development from the humblest form of life. This much we all know of the man and his mighty influence; also that "Darwinism," as it came to be called as a convenient cover for our general inability to give a concise definition, stirred the religious world as profoundly as when under Luther's sway.

In Darwin's case happily the man is more interesting than his ism to us who dwell below the clouds, for scientific subjects float themselves up among the moonbeams as a halfway house until they reach the sunlight of demonstration. Even at this very hour there are indications that Darwin's own strongest convictions are likely to be modified in one direction, and this we gather from no less authoritative source than his son, Dr. Francis Darwin, whose address as president of the British Association For the Advancement of Science at Dublin last October arrested universal attention by its bold dictum that plants have eyes and see. Dr. Darwin was his father's associate in all his patient botanical investigations, and our portrait of the apostle of evolution will be drawn from his interesting memoir.

Charles Darwin himself expressed his painful surprise that orthodoxy should have flown into so wild a fury over his very simple, very fascinating and reasonable theory that our wonderfully complete organization started from the lowest living organism and has been perfected by slow processes of adaptation and variation called for by the struggle for existence. Those that developed their powers were the strong ones and reproduced their kind to develop superior powers in their turn. Those less able to adapt their organs to the necessity of finding food were the weak ones, whose race and generative power perished. We cannot help but see this identical process at work all around us today, and it does not disturb the faiths of the multitude. Yet even Leibnitz, as Darwin reminds us, clear headed philosopher that he was, attacked "the greatest discovery ever made by man, Newton's law of the attraction of gravity," on the ground that it was subversive of religion. Today the law of evolution demonstrated by Darwin (and discovered for himself by Alfred Russel Wallace independently, to whom reference is made in what follows) is accepted in substance by the scientific world. A celebrated author and divine (unnamed) had the courage to write to Darwin when his great book, "The Origin of Species," first inflamed the churchmen: "I have gradually learnt to see that it is just as noble a conception of the Deity to believe that he created a few original forms capable of self development into other and needful forms as to believe that he required a fresh act of creation to supply the voids caused by the action of his laws."

Great minds of every school unite in doing homage to Darwin as a "great man." For the encouragement of ambitious boys and youths, their parents and friends, we now use Darwin as an object lesson, which if rightly pondered will prove of greater practical value in life than the usual tales about "genius," which often spoil excellent budding brains. Here we have the self revealed portraiture of an actually "average man" who somehow in the Darwinian way developed into "a great man." It is only fair to admit that his good luck in not having to work for his daily bread gave Darwin the full chance to put his "average abilities" to the best use. He frankly acknowledges this immense advantage.

His good angel, if such rarities occur in the evolution of celestials, also favored him with a distinguished grandfather and a father described by Darwin as "the wisest man I ever knew," though only a country doctor, of ample private fortune, who lived from 1726 until 1848. Erasmus Darwin, the grandfather, was a physician, a naturalist and a poetizer of plant life. His writings had great fame in their day, but only a small part of their genius was resurrectionized in our Darwin. This resemblance in particular is notable. Speaking of his grandfather, Charles Darwin says, "I am struck with his indifference to fame, the complete absence of all signs of overestimation of his abilities or of the success of his works." By this we see that modesty may be a hereditary virtue.

In his deliberate, matter of fact way Darwin tells us that he was a slow and A naughty child—teachable, but his little ambitions he fulfilled much too quickly and easily. "I was much given to inventing deliberate falsehoods, and this was always done for the sake of causing excitement"—in other words, getting glory. He stole a lot of fruit from his father's best trees and hid the plunder in the shrubbery; then he rushed around proudly telling his "discovery" of the theft and its hiding place. When he found that his wonderful stories were received in strict silence he realized that the punishment was severer than a thrashing. His mother died when he was eight without leaving any conscious influence on his nature.

CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN.
[Born Feb. 12, 1809; Died April 19, 1882.]

Very amusingly, Darwin rather brags of his humaneness as boy and man. Like David of old, he pleads that his slips could be counted on one finger of one hand usually. "I never stole more than one egg out of a nest." It remained on his conscience that once, just once, "I beat a puppy simply from enjoying the sense of power," but he cherishes the belief that he could not have hurt it much, "as it did not howl." Perhaps that was where he hurt it. He was only so-so as a schoolboy. "I left school rather below the common standard in intellect." His "wisest" father seems to have despaired of the growing youth. It staggered him when his parent told him flatly, "You care for nothing but shooting dogs and rat catching, and you will be a disgrace to yourself and all your family."

However humane (and the rats may rise against him on the judgment day on this), Darwin always dwells lovingly on his mighty shooting exploits. No wonder that in after life "I wholly lost all pleasure from poetry of any kind." Shakespeare was impossible. He had read his grandfather's work on natural history, "Zoonomia," in his early years twice, which one would suppose must have inspired his own work, but it left "no effect," nor on being read again fifteen years later.

First he would follow his father and be a doctor. A year or two at the schools sickened him, and the dissecting table gave him the horrors. Then he dabbled in geology, but soon decided that of all odious professions the worst was that of a geologist. As a lad he developed a craze for collecting letter franks, seals, coins, minerals, anything, and no one but himself was interested. He would take long solitary walks. Then he took a fancy for beetles and developed an enthusiasm for catching them. He tells how on stripping a bit of bark from a tree he spied two uncommon specimens. These he secured, one in each hand, when out popped an entirely new kind of beetle. In his eagerness not to lose it he put one of the others in his mouth while he grabbed the third, but the prisoner gave him a dose of a fluid so acrid and nauseous that he had to let him go. Another lesson in humaneness.

So successful was Darwin in forgetting everything he had learned but the humane act of shooting that when he decided to enter Cambridge in 1827 he had to engage a private tutor to teach him his Greek alphabet over again and rub up the classics on which he had spent two industrious years. Why enter Cambridge? Because some one had the happy thought that Darwin would, at any rate, make a passably good Church of England parson, and he thought so too. It is a humane profession. All the good he got from all his studies which were helpful throughout his life he credits to Euclid and Paley's "Evidences of Christianity." Before he had blossomed into a surpliced deacon Darwin fell under the fascination of science.

Professor Henslow, the great botanist, honored Darwin with unwonted friendship. Darwin was dubbed by his fellow students, "The man who walks with Henslow," a genial suggestion that his reverence bordered on worship. He says somewhere that Henslow's friendship had the greatest influence on his life. The right man at the right period in one's history can do more for us than all the schools and preachers and libraries. Henslow implanted a living interest in the despised geology, botany and other such studies. Under Sidgwick, the great geologist, Darwin developed unsuspected powers. Yet—"How I did enjoy shooting!" On one of his visits to the family home in the old town of Shrewsbury he found new interest in looking at the familiar big bowlder known as the bell stone. The local wise man had long had but one answer to questions as to how it had got there, "Ah, the world will come to an end before any one will know the secret!" Now that Darwin had learned how the sliding of the vast primeval glaciers had transported these mysterious bowlders across Wales and left them in his town he felt repaid for his pains. "I gloried in the progress of geology."

"Looking back," he writes, "I infer that there must have been something in me a little superior to the common run of youth," or these and other distinguished men would not have allowed him to associate with them so intimately. The privilege had its penalties. He had his little humiliations. One day he happened to find a shell in a spot where he thought no shell should be. He rushed with it to Sidgwick, expecting fine compliments. To his surprise, the great geologist did not think it the prize he had supposed. "Nothing before," says Darwin, "had ever made me thoroughly realize, though I had read the scientific books, that science consists in grouping facts so that general laws or conclusions can be drawn from them."

Here we have the open secret of Darwin's greatness.

He was now started on his life work, the patient, exhaustive, merciless task of overhauling all that was written about the facts of nature, of classifying it for his special purpose, of accumulating more facts from every source and then slowly building up a structure of verifiable theory on the mystery of what we call creation. Darwin's career comes near to justifying the worthless sneer that genius is the art of taking pains. His greatness shows in the herculean labor of those twenty invalid years between the conception and completion of "The Origin of Species." His genius glows in the interpretation of his labors.

"THE WORLD WILL COME TO AN END."

The Silver Thread.

A matron in Harlem was calling upon another matron in Harlem. Neither was young, but one looked more so.

"Really, my dear," said the one that looked more so, "you ought to have your hair treated. It's becoming quite gray in spots. See what a difference it has made with me. You would look much younger—really."

"But I don't care to look much younger if I must dye my hair to do so," was the reply. "I prefer to be natural. If the Lord sends me gray hair there's a good reason, and I'm satisfied."

"But think of your children, my dear. They're grown up now."

"What have they got to do with it?"

"Why, don't you see? The younger you look the younger it makes them appear. And your girls are way past twenty, you know."

The matron who was gray in spots was still looking dazed when her visitor departed.—New York Globe.

What They Said.

"Did the girls say anything when they heard of my engagement?" she asked, with a little curiosity.

"Very little," was the reply of her dearest friend.

"But they said something?"

"Oh, yes; they said something."

"Well, what was it?"

"Well, most of them merely exclaimed, 'At last!'"

There was a pause, and then she asked:

"Well, what did some of the others say?"

"One of them said, 'Who'd have thought it?' Another, 'Will wonders never cease? And a third'—"

"Oh, never mind the rest," interrupted the fiancee. "I never did have much curiosity."

Making It Easier.

Little Jean's dolly had met with an accident, and her mother had procured a new head for it. The removal of the old head proved to be a rather difficult task, which Jean watched with great interest.

"I'm afraid, Jean, I can't get this old head off," said the mother.

Jean's face glowed with the light of an inspiration as she said:

"Never mind, mamma; just take the body off."

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the Stomach and Kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds! It strengthens! It offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6, 1909.

The best known street of Washington, Pennsylvania Avenue is beginning to assume an inaugural holiday appearance. Seats and grand stands have been built in front the White House where the President, after his inauguration on the 4th of March, the diplomatic corps, and high government officials will sit to observe the grand parade. Thousands of others will here occupy seats on both sides of the Avenue at prices varying probably from one to two dollars. As usual the mile stretch of avenue from the Treasury Department to the Capitol grounds on the south side will be lined with seats or bleechers very much after the manner of those used in baseball, football or after athletic spectacles. Windows all along the avenue on both sides are rented at exhorbitant prices and from these thousands will gaze at the military, political and civic processions as they pass to and from the Capitol on the 4th of March.

As has been already observed President Roosevelt will be seen in the carriage only as it proceeds to the Capitol. He will not return with his successor to the White House but will go direct to the Union Station from the Capitol, and there take a train for his home at Oyster Bay. This is an inovation; but by no means, as the public well knows, unusual for Theodore Roosevelt.

His personal household goods are already in process of shipment to his New York home and after President elect Taft shall have taken the oath of office, Theodore Roosevelt will become a private citizen. There is good sense and propriety in his effacing himself and turning his back on the White House and the Capitol, and leaving the glory and the burden, without diversion of his conspicuous presence, entirely to his successor.

Congress is, to all appearances, wasting its time discussing nonessentials and having furious debates as to whether an appropriation of twelve thousand dollars shall be made for automobiles for the coming big president, involving a question as to whether the machine shall supercede the horse or whether the horse shall stand pat and defy the machine.

Important differences have developed among the members of the Committee on Ways and Means that are expected to involve a bitter fight over the tariff bill when it comes up before the House at the special session to be called for the fourth of March. The Republican standpatters on the committee are in the minority. It appears that Sereno Rayne, leader of the House, and John Dalzell, the leading standpatter are not working harmoniously on the new tariff bill.

The President, as was expected, has vetoed the Census Bill appointing three thousand clerks without civil service examination. His most remarkable words in the message vetoing the bill were: I do not believe in the doctrine that to the victor belong the spoils; but I think even less of the doctrine that the spoils shall be divided without a fight by the professional politicians on both sides; and this would be the result of permitting the bill in its present shape to become a law.

The message was received with the accompaniment of laughter which has been the recent fashion of receiving messages from the President by the House and Senate.

A Spanish War Criticism.

When the Spanish war came upon us Commodore Dewey was at Hongkong. The navy department had sent him no preliminary orders. He didn't know anything about the ultimate policy or what the ultimate plan of campaign would be. The navy department didn't itself know. Dewey should have moved two or three days sooner than he did, and two or three days sometimes are vital. But our Washington officials were only aroused to the necessity of giving Admiral Dewey an order by a cablegram from Dewey informing them that the British governor of Hongkong insisted that our fleet must leave there. We were so dazed by the immediate exigencies of war that the English government had to prod us in the ribs to wake us up. Then our Washington authorities issued an order and not till then. They told Dewey to proceed to the Philippine Islands and capture or destroy the Spanish fleet. In other words, they gave him the stereotyped war order in the phraseology of the signal code, which, literally translated, read: "Go ahead and do the best you can. We give it up."—Collier's.

A Teaser.

"There is one subject on which it is difficult to keep up interest?"

"What particular subject is that on which it is difficult to keep up interest?"

AUTOMOBILE SHOW.

Detroit long has enjoyed the reputation of being the greatest automobile manufacturing center in the world, but this is the first time that it has given the best automobile show in the country. The annual show will be held at the Wayne Casino, February 15 to 20, and the management announces that it will be the most complete and beautiful of the year.

In the first place the association has twice as much floor space as in other years, and this allows the exhibiting of upwards of two hundred automobiles. Neither New York show had that number, and while Detroit could have increased it materially, the limitation is to the advantage of the patrons as only the best cars are to be shown. These include the 1909 models which have been the trade success of the greatest year in the industry, and every particular will be explained by the experts in the booth.

The Casino will be decorated at a cost of $10,000, which will make it far more attractive than any other show in the country this year. It is not a copy; it is entirely original, and automobile enthusiasts are coming from all the big cities to see it. From a rustic setting in the entrance the lower floor of the Casino turns into a Venetian garden of lattice work and clinging smilax. Hidden in the foliage hundreds of canary birds will sing and give an outdoor atmosphere, which is furthered by the road scene paintings which form the background of the booths.

The second floor is entirely of stucco, the designing having been done by Edward Wagner, an eminent New York sculptor, whose work at various world's fairs won for him universal commendation as a master of his craft. The fountain in the middle of the room is thirty feet high and is supported by four figures of a chauffeur-merman, a wonderful conceit. There are panels and figures of automobile girls with flying veils, parties, racing cars and other unique ideas. In all six thousand incandescent bulbs are required to light the Casino, making the scene unrivaled in the history of the state. The national importance of the show and its beauty are attracting automobile enthusiasts from all over Michigan, who will make the week one long to be remembered in the Wolverine metropolis.

How to Make a Cup of Cocoa.

Take a tablespoonful of cocoa and put it in a tin cup. Add one teaspoonful of granulated sugar and one tablespoonful of boiling water. Mix well, so that there will not be any lumps of cocoa. Pour a little less than one-half pint of milk into a saucepan and cook it, stirring all the time, until it is scalded—that is, until a film forms on it and it begins to bubble a little. Stir the cocoa mixture into this and cook until it boils up.—Delineator.

Costly Law Robes.

An English judge's outfit in the way of robes imposes a heavy tax upon the newly appointed judge, although the cost is not nearly so great as it was in the early days of Queen Victoria. Then it was the custom for the law luminaries to attend court functions in figured damask silk gowns, with costly lace bands and ruffles. Jeffreys, a celebrated legal dignitary of that day, is said on one occasion to have spent £100 on bands alone. The lord chancellor's robes cost something like £150, and even a judge's stockings are an expensive item. The wardrobe of a judge costs anything from £500 to £600, and if the newly fledged "my lord" is attached to the king's bench division he will require five gowns, a girdle, a scarf, a casting hood, a black cap, a three cornered cap, a beaver hat, a cocked hat, a silk hat, lace bands and two full court suits, swords, etc., to keep up the majesty of the law.—London Globe.

MILLIONS OF LIVE LOST

The Awful Toll Collected by Consumption.

If people could only understand that Catarrh is an internal scrofula—that nothing applied externally does much good—they would not need to be warned so often about this fatal disease, which, when neglected, invariably ends up in Consumption, at the cost of millions of lives every year. Yet Catarrh is easily cured if the right treatment is employed.

Catarrh is caused by germs in the blood which circulate throughout the entire system. External remedies give but temporary ease. Although the effects are often seen in the form of pimples, rash, eczema or dry scaly skin, the trouble is internal, and can never be cured by external remedies.

The only way to cure Catarrh is by employing a medicine which is absorbed and carried by the blood to all parts of the system, so that the mucous membrane or internal lining of the body is thoroughly medicated, soothed, disinfected of germ matter, and the soreness healed.

We have a remedy prepared from the prescription of a physician who for thirty years studied and made Catarrh a specialty and whose record of success was a cure in every case where his treatment was followed as prescribed. That remedy is Rexall Mucu-Tone. We are so positive that it will cure Catarrh in all its various forms, whether acute or chronic, that we promise to return every case where it fails to cure or for any reason does not satisfy the user.

We want you to try Rexall Mucu-Tone on our recommendation and guarantee. We are right here where you live, and you do not contract any obligation or risk when you try Rexall Mucu-Tone on our guarantee. We have Rexall Mucu-Tone in two sizes. The prices are 50c. and $1. Very often the 50c. size effects a cure. Of course, in chronic cases a longer treatment is necessary. The average in such instances is three $1.00 bottles. B. J. Pulver, the druggist.

A CALIFORNIA CHRISTMAS TWO VIEWS.

We take the first view purported to be written from Los Angeles on Christmas day to the Oceana Co. News published at Shelby, Mich.

"This is a day of disappointments. It has been raining for forty-eight hours. Policemen go about on stilts, traffic is at a stand still, the windows are filled with disappointed faces, those who wanted to go to the beaches have to stay in the house and blow soap bubbles for a California Christmas. Few ventures out of the back door with the table oilcloth over their heads and etc."

The facts in the case we had not up to that date had a 48 hour rain this season. (We are now Jan. 14 having a steady soaking rain which may last for 48 hours and is worth millions of dollars to this section of country.) The several beaches adjacent to Los Angeles were thronged with people both Christmas, and New Year and Long Beach received her full quota of those who prefer a clean quiet prohibition resort to those which are open to the rougher element who patronize the saloons.

On New Year's day not far from 10,000 spent the day here. Many sported in the surf more lounged on the sands. There were several neighborhood and family picnics on the sand, many enjoyed launch rides on the ocean and many fishermen were dropping the "season's greetings" to the people from the pier.

The evenings were spent in the accustomed dance and roller skating and from it all was eliminated the roughness accompanying such days as prevail wherever the open saloon prevails.

It is to be regretted that some people who come to Calif. and are disappointed in some feature of the country can see nothing agreeable about any part of it and go back home with unfair and unjust reports of us or write back similar letters to the one quoted.

California is not perfect but it is about as near it as any country on this continent and Long Beach is about as near an ideal resort city as one will be likely to find on this continent. Christmas and New Year's day as I watched the thronges of people enjoying the pleasures of boating, bathing, the roller coaster, the many ground and the picnicing my thoughts went back to my boyhood days in dear old Tecumseh and to some of Christmases and New Year's I spent there coasting on the hills, skating on the ponds, snowballing and washing each others faces. I often wish that I could take some of these California youngsters who have never felt snow, back with me to those good old days and pleasures and let him enjoy them as I did. Only today I saw a young miss on her rollers handling herself in a way showing that she was mistress of them.

As she stopped near me I asked her if she thought she would like to skate on ice with ice skates? She said she had used those in Illinois before coming to Calif. I asked her which she liked best? She said she thought she liked rollers best. She was bareheaded in short dresses without any outer wraps on the 15 day of January.

Now if it isn't asking too much of the editors I'd like to close this somewhat lengthy and prosy letter with the following little poem by a Los Angeles poet in his quaint style. Some may think that it is over drawn but it is not.

Christmas in California

Christmas in California? Say, ain't it jest a dream,
With all the flowers a-bloomin' an' all the hills a-gleam?
With skies so bright an smilin', so balmy an' so blue,
An' petals from the orange trees a-showerin' on you.

Winter in California—an' all the birds a-tune,
A-singin' Christmas carols jest as if 'twas early June!
An' hearts a-lilt with laughter an' little voices gay,
To match the peerless sunshine upon the Christmas day.

Christmas in California—an' roses smilin' there,
An' violets by millions perfumin' of the air;
An' only jest the gurgle an' murmur of the rills
A-singin' Christmas lullabys off in the dreamy hills.

Christmas in California—an' Love a-beamin' there,
To kiss away the darkness an' make a world so fair.
Christmas in California, an' from the gleamin' skies

Soldier Balks Death Plot.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a civil war veteran of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." The first lesson in fence breaking may come from a little neglect on the part of the farmer to keep the boards or rails all whole. One board off and the mischief has been commenced. Look out for the beginning of such things.

Dabbling in stocks and leaving the farm to run itself is not a good way to do business. It is the surest way to trouble and loss. Money out of pocket every time for the man who follows it.

A good many of the bruises on our hearts come from climbing over conscience.

SAD ACCIDENT

Miss Irene Kenrick, the 9 Year Old Daughter of L. M. Kenrick in Brownville, Accidentally Shot.

Harold, the 12 Year Old Brother of the Little Girl, was Fooling With a Rifle.

When it was discharged, the bullet entering arm and lung.

A sad accident occured about 10 o'clock Sunday morning at the home of L. M. Kenrick when his little son Harold aged 12 years, accidentally discharged a 22 long cartridge from his rifle, the bullet striking his little sister, who was standing about 12 feet from him, passing through her side, penetrating the lower part of the lung and coming out of her body about the center of her back within an inch of the spinal column. Dr. Conklin was called as soon as possible and after examining the wounds did not consider them fatal, expressing his belief, if nothing complicated sets in hereafter, that the little girl will recover within a reasonable length of time. Everything is being done which is possible for the comfort of the little one and she is resting quietly at the present time.

This accident which came so near being fatal, not only to the girl but also to a friend standing just in front of her, was caused by the gun being left loaded in an old house at the rear of their residence, used as a barn and play-house. The boy and a companion went out to the old house and in a few minutes after, the little girl followed them and just after she entered the front door, the boy came through an inner door with the gun in his hands not knowing it was loaded and in some way he cannot account for, the gun was fired, the little girl doubled up and took a few steps forward then shrieked "Oh I'm shot," but did not fall and was caught up and carried to the house immediately by this other companion who proved himself to be a very heroic and faithful friend to the little girl and her grief-stricken parents, rushing off for a doctor as soon as he had placed his charge in her father's arms. The girl's chances seem very favorable for a speedy recovery, and the parents feel indeed very grateful to the many neighbors and friends who offered their help and many consoling words in this trying ordeal.

THOMAS FLORANCE.

Thomas Tobey Florance died at his home in Ridgeway township, February 3, 1909 after a brief illness of only eight days.

He was born at the same place August 13, 1867 and with the exception of less than two years, his whole life has been spent on the old home farm.

December 29, 1891 he married Eva L. Putman of Dundee, New York, and leaves besides the wife, one daughter Bertha now seven years of age.

On Tuesday night January 26, he was taken with a severe pain in his head, which grew rapidly worse in spite of the best medical skill until the following Sunday morning when he became unconscious and from that time he gradually grew weaker until Wednesday when he passed away without an opportunity to speak to the many friends who were gathered about his bedside.

Besides the wife and daughter and his mother Mrs. Juliette Florance who completed his home circle, he leaves one sister Mrs. Charles Culbertson of Ridgeway and one brother Floyd G. Florance of Sioux Falls, South Dakota and a wide circle of relatives and neighbors to mourn his loss.

As a progressive and industrious farmer he has been very successful. He has managed the home farm for the past twelve years, and since his father's death eight years ago, the widowed mother has made her home with him.

He was most kind and thoughtful in every relation in life, not only in the home, but toward all who needed his sympathy and help.

He was a Master Mason and also a member of the K. O. T. M. of Holloway, and of the Raisin Grange.

The funeral was conducted under Masonic auspices from the home Saturday, Feb. 6, the Rev. H. B. Dunning of Raisin officiating, assisted by the Rev. Arthur Camburn of Ridgeway.

DR. ELMER HAUSE,

Former Resident of Tecumseh Died at His Home in Sorrento, Fla.

Dr. Elmer Hause, an old resident of Tecumseh, died at his home in Sorrento, Florida, Tuesday Feb. 2nd. The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late home.

A short but very impressive service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Sutherland, after which the Eustis Lodge, F. & A. M. took charge and gave him the regular Masonic burial. There were three present from the doctors own lodge, Tecumseh, No. 69, one from Deerfield and one from Milan.

Dr Hause leaves one son, a daughter and an aged widow, who has the sympathy and love of the entire community, as was shown by their many acts of kindness during the doctors sickness and death.

Mrs. Hause expects to remain in Sorrento until spring.

If our gubernatorial candidates could but remember one-fiftieth of the people "they are glad to meet" during the campaign, their minds would indeed be marvels.

We observe that some of our exchanges are telling "how the farmer's wife can earn money," just as though she was not every day earning a great deal more than she gets.

Some Women Are Models of Grace and Beauty

All the skin foods, all the new fangled methods, all the exercise in the world, won't make a woman beautiful if her stomach isn't in good condition.

It is the pure, nutritions matter which the digestive organs extract from your food that makes rich, red blood, and it is the rich, red blood that makes women perfect in form and complexion.

Mi-o-na tablets are guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son to cure dyspepsia, or money back. They give the most gratifying relief in a few hours.

They cure constipation by removing the dyspepsia, which is the cause of constipation. They promptly relieve sea sickness, vomiting of pregnacy, and morning sickness after any dissipation of the night before, and the price is only 50 cents for a large box.

"I have the best kind of an opinion of Mi-o-na. I used this reliable remedy for the cure of cramps and pains in my stomach and bowels, hard side and back aches, and a kidney trouble. The best kind of relief was given me by the use of Mi-o-na, and I praise it highly. This medicine helped me after the use of many others failed entirely." Ed. A. Mattis, Adrian st., Tecumseh, Mich., Oct. 16, 1908.

Husbands to Burn.

The elderly spinster in the rear of the drawing room car had no more than settled in her seat when her attention was attracted to a woman a little farther front who was garbed in the deepest mourning. As Miss Spinster adjusted her nose grabber glasses for a better inspection of the one in widow's weeds she saw the conductor lean over and converse with her earnestly for several minutes.

When the conductor got back to her seat taking the passenger's tickets Miss Spinster was consumed with curiosity about the woman in mourning.

"Conductor," she asked in her sweetest tones, "what's the trouble with the lady up there in widow's weeds?"

"Oh, that's Mrs. Gettem!" replied the obliging conductor. "She's just taking her third husband out to a crematory."

"Oh, how dreadful!" exclaimed Miss Spinster. And then in a faraway voice she added:

"And just think of it! Here I am past fifty and never had a husband in my life, while that woman up there has them to burn!"—New York Times.

Strong Monosyllables.

Instructors in the art of literary composition usually condemn a string of monosyllables, but in the well known hymn "Lead, Kindly Light," written by a master of the English language, you may count thirty consecutive words of one syllable only. They offend neither the eye nor the ear.

Milton often uses a series of monosyllables. In the second book of "Paradise Lost" we have:

The fiend
O'er bog or steep, through strait, rough, dense or rare,
With head, hands, wings or feet pursues his way
And swims or sinks or wades or creeps or flies.

Such lines are not uncommon in the book:

Rocks, caves, lakes, fens, bogs, dens and shades of death.

And again:

Of neither sea nor shore nor air nor fire.
—London Notes and Queries.

Courtship in Ireland.

An Irish boy marries when he has a rid house and an Irish girl just when she pleases. Sometimes she so pleases while yet her years are few; at other times she is content to wait upon wisdom. In the latter case, of course, she makes a wise choice, but in the former almost always a lucky one, for luck is the guardian angel of the Irish.

"You're too young to marry yet, Mary," the mother said when Mary pleaded that she should grant Laurence O'Mahony a particular boon.

"If you only have patience, mother, I'll cure meself of that fault," was Mary's reply.

"And she's never been used to work, Laurence," the mother said to the suitor discouragingly.

"If you only have patience, ma'am," was Laurence's reply to this, "I'll cure her of that fault." And he did too.—Seumas MacManus in Lippincott's.

The Nervous Mother.

An Atchison woman who is very nervous and inclined to worry is the mother of a boy. She recently read of a boy who was killed while roller skating and immediately put her son's roller skates in the fire. Another newspaper told of a boy who was killed riding the street cars, and as boys are frequently killed while walking by street cars running over them she chained her boy to the front door. Then she read of a boy who died of blood poisoning caused by his shoe rubbing his heel, and her boy's shoes and stockings came off. The story of a boy who bit off a button on his waist and choked to death resulted in her taking off her boy's clothes. He had left only a flannel shirt, and she is reading now that wearing flannel shirts is the cause of great mortality and is thinking of removing that.—Atchison Globe.

The Bloom on the Egg.

"I know these eggs at least are fresh," said the young housewife. "As I took them from the basket a white bloom, like the down of a peach, came off on my hands."

Her husband, a food expert, gave a sneering laugh.

"In that case," he said, "I'll forego my usual morning omelette. That bloom, my dear, proves your eggs to be a year or so old—maybe four or five years old.

"The bloom, as you so poetically call it, is lime dust. It shows that the eggs are pickled. Lime dust, which rubs off like flour, is the surest test we have for pickled eggs—a not unwholesome article, but not to be compared with the new laid sort."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

HER MISTAKE.

The Way It Was Explained to Her by the Clumsy Man.

Owing to the fact that the car lurched suddenly as he was passing along the aisle Bronson was deprived of his balance, with the result that in attempting to save himself from falling he clutched one of the shoulders of a handsome woman who had succeeded in getting a seat. Moreover, he knocked her beautiful hat awry and with great difficulty avoided stepping on her toes. As he succeeded in recovering his equilibrium the lady turned toward him and said:

"You contemptible pup! I wish you to understand that I am not a lamppost or a piece of furniture to be clung to for support. You ought to ride in a cattle train. You have no right to crowd in where you can tear other people to pieces with your big, awkward hands. You pitiful clown! You ought to be thrown out into the street. You are not fit to be allowed to go where you are likely to interfere with the comfort of refined people. You unmannerly bumpkin! You deserve to be"—

"Excuse me, madam," Bronson managed to say, "you have made a mistake."

"A mistake!" the lady demanded, her eyes flashing with wrath. "What do you mean?"

"I am not your husband."—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE CLERMONT.

First Passage by Steamboat From New York to Albany.

In August, 1808—the exact day is a matter of dispute—the steamboat Clermont made the first passage by steam from New York to Albany. The distance, somewhat less than 150 miles, was covered in thirty-two hours, a record hailed as a triumph in speed, for previously the passage between the two cities averaged four days.

Robert Fulton had experimented with steam several years, but the Clermont was the first boat he constructed on a large scale. As he could not get the engine he wanted in this country he ordered one from England. The Clermont was so reconstructed in the following winter that it gave more commodious accommodations to travelers, and the year 1808, which was the first year of regular travel by steamboat, Fulton made it a point to start his boat precisely on scheduled time. Curiously enough, a portion of the public complained of this. It was not until well along in the summer that travelers got accustomed to it. Previously boats had been held for two hours at the request of passengers who weren't ready. Fulton's perseverance won public approval before the season closed.—Anaconda Standard.

Cleared His Doubts.

A well known English gentleman engaged a tall and powerful highlander to act as gamekeeper on his estate. Having been a considerable time at his post and not having caught any poachers, the gentleman suspected his gamekeeper of carelessness. So one dark night he disguised himself and went out with a gun to poach on his own ground. He had fired only one or two shots when he was suddenly pounced upon from behind and his gun wrenched away. Then kicks and blows were showered upon him until he fell down half insensible. The highlander then walked away quietly, and when the gentleman recovered sufficiently he crawled home and took to his bed for two weeks. He has now no doubts as to whether the man can perform his duty or not.

Home, Sweet Home.

The old man sat on the park seat, rivers of tears flooding his clothes. A sympathetic passerby, noting the high tide, stopped and asked if he were ill.

"Yes, sir," said the sorrowing old fellow. "I've jest 'ad bad news from 'ome. The 'ouse that 'as sheltered me for years is to be torn down, and I 'aven't a penny to my name to stop it. Everybody will be turned out, and goodness knows what'll 'appen to 'em!"

"Poor soul!" said the sympathetic passerby, bestowing a penny on the sad old man. "That isn't much, but you are welcome to it. And where is this old home of yours, my friend?"

"Up at the joil, sir," replied the old man. "It seems very hard. I've lived there five and twenty years."—London Opinion.

CURE

An Indigestion Remedy Free

Many people who are otherwise healthy suffer from indigestion, or dyspepsia. When you consider that the stomach and allied digestive organs are the most important organs of the body, it would seem that a disorder there is to be taken very seriously.

Dyspeptics cannot eat the things they like; food sours in the stomach; then chronic constipation begins, or, as is often the case, you have been constipated all along, and the stools are forced and irregular.

But there is no use letting indigestion go until it becomes chronic and undermines your health. It is good advice to suggest to you that you go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the wonderful cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. That is what C. Fowler, of Carson City, Mich., did and he is well today. Others who did the same and are cured are Ida A. Fortune, of Grand Junction, Tenn., R. F. Thompson, of Shenandoah, Ia., who actually considers that it saved his life. You can obtain a 50-cent or $1 bottle of the druggist, and, taken according to directions, it will probably be all you need. It is a liquid, acts gently, never gripes, and besides the laxative effect, contains exceptional tonic properties which tone the stomach, and that is what is especially needed in indigestion.

All sufferers from indigestion who have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can obtain a free test bottle by writing the doctor. It will be sent direct to your home without any charge. In this way thousands have proven to their own satisfaction Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the very remedy they needed to cure indigestion. When once you use this grand remedy you will throw violent cathartics, tablets, salts, etc., away.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

MADMAN AT LARGE.

Kills and Injures Several Persons Near Shelbourne, Ont.

Shelbourne, Ont., Feb. 8.—Two persons are dead and three so seriously injured that they may not recover as the result of murderous attacks made by George Stewart, a young farmer of Maple Valley.

Stewart, who is mentally unbalanced, was staying with his brother and started out in the early morning with a rifle. His brother attempted to restrain him and was attacked and beaten, but not seriously injured. Stewart then went to the nearby home of John Spanhouse and fired upon Mrs Spanhouse twice, wounding her in the eye and arm. Her husband rushed to her assistance and was shot dead. A son, James, who was sleeping upstairs, ran down at the sound of the shots, and Stewart, whose rifle was empty, beat out his brains with the butt of the weapon.

Stewart then started for his own home, but stopped on the way at the house of Edwin Pounds, who at the time was absent. Here he attacked the hired man, George Beaumont, and the housekeeper, Mrs. Gowans, with the empty weapon, beating them both unconscious and fracturing the hired man's skull. He then fled to his father's home at Maple Valley, where he was arrested and lodged in jail.

NOT INCENDIARY.

Fire Chief Declares "Dust Chute" Caused Orphanage Fire.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 8.—Search of the Haskell home ruins has brought no particular evidence to establish the theories as to the cause of the blaze or to lead to the recovery of the bodies of Lena McClavy, Cecil Coutant and George Goodenow, the missing children.

Fire Chief Weeks states that he puts no credence whatever in the stories of incendiarism. He now blames a "dust chute," running through the entire building from attic to basement, into which the dirt was swept daily.

A child from the home told Weeks that the chute frequently contained paper, and the chief thinks rags or waste paper, becoming heated, ignited, causing the fire to break out on every floor in the building almost simultaneously. An agitation has been started favoring the erection of a monument to the dead children, to occupy the side of the home, the new orphanage to be erected north of the ruined building.

Mrs. C. L. Williams, wife of the business manager of the Grand Opera House, Philadelphia, was probably fatally injured in an automobile accident near Egg Harbor, a few miles from Atlantic City. The automobile was running at a high speed, when a rear tire blew out. Mrs. Williams was hurled from the automobile.

Injured Woman Gets $1,500.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 8.—Miss Ruth Gardner, a resident of Marine City, has been awarded a judgment of $1,500 against the city of Marine City by a jury in the circuit court. The woman claimed that by a fall on a defective foot bridge she sustained permanent injuries.

Falling Tree Kills Man.

Camden, Mich., Feb. 8.—Caught in the path of a falling tree, Adam Friend, aged fifty years, living near this place, was killed. The man's body was pinned to the ground and horribly crushed. He was felling several trees at the time.

Was He Delirious?

"Almost every man," says a Baltimore specialist, "learns sooner or later to think of his doctor as one of his best friends, but this fact does not hinder the world from laughing at the profession.

"'How is our patient this morning?' asked a physician, a fellow graduate of mine, of a patient's brother.

"'Oh, he's much worse,' came from the other in a tone of dejection. 'He's been delirious for several hours. At 3 o'clock he said, "What an old woman that doctor of mine is!" and he hasn't made a rational remark since.'"—Lippincott's.

A Rising Fall.

A certain member of the British government who was admittedly a great failure was being discussed by two of his colleagues.

"And now," concluded one, "they want to make him a peer!"

"No," said the other, with greater acumen; "they want to make him disappear."

Pontiac Determined to Prevent Spread of Tuberculosis.

Pontiac, Mich., Feb. 8.—Beginning today, a milk ordinance, designed to prevent the spread of tuberculosis from infected animals, will be rigidly enforced in this city.

The crusade for pure milk was started by public spirited citizens last November and is based on an ordinance passed by the city council last summer and since amended. This ordinance had been more or less of a dead letter until Health Officer Ellsworth Orton took steps for its enforcement.

Preliminary to drastic action a meeting was held on Dec. 16 at which the health officer and other local medical men met with the milk dealers and laid the situation before them, urging them for their own interests to observe the law.

The ordinance in brief provides that all dealers before being allowed to peddle milk in the city shall file a certificate with the health department showing that every head of cattle in their herd has undergone the tuberculin test.

WARDEN PRIZE GRAFTER.

Alleged There Is Evidence of Many Other Illegal Deals.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 8.—A dispatch from Jackson to the Free Press says:

So overwhelming is the evidence which tends to establish Warden Allen N. Armstrong of Jackson prison as the prize grafter of the present decade that Judge Parkinson is seriously considering the advisability of summoning a grand jury to investigate the prison.

The bribery charge on which Armstrong was arrested is set for hearing in the justice court tomorrow (Monday) morning, and the prosecutor has the evidence in this case well in hand. But wipe the bribery charge off the slate Monday and there are ten other cases left, and the list is steadily growing. They bear upon his management of the prison, and when the facts are given out by the prosecuting attorney they will astonish the people of the state.

Caught Burglarizing Store.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 8.—Edwards Edmunds, thirty-four years old, and a Polish boy named Miller were caught red-handed burglarizing a grocery store. The proprietor happened to pass the store, and, noticing a light in the store, he investigated and discovered the two robbing the store. Both fled, but were later captured.

W. L. Agnew, formerly connected with the Adrian Times, is treasurer of the association.

In a search for Dolly Dimples, which is part of an advertising scheme of a Grand Rapids newspaper, two women were mobbed on the street. One of the women, Mrs. F. R. Carpenter, was pinned to an iron bar on the door of the building and was badly injured. The police were called to disperse the crowd.

The Riddle.

Here is a strange riddle which we have never met before. It is sent us by a friend from Jhansi, India:

Divide 150 by 0. Add two-thirds of it; 50 ends the riddle.

Here is the answer: COLENSO.

C—100.

L—50.

EN—two-thirds of TEN.

SO—ends the riddle.—London Scraps.

Eat What
You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

DEFENSE OF EX-WARDEN.

It Will Be Insanity 'Tis Rumored in Lansing.

ALLEGED HE USED DRUGS.

Governor Sends Private Secretary to Jackson to Order Armstrong to Vacate Prison—Armstrong's Hold Made Particularly Strong Because His Wife is Matron.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 11.—It was rumored here that Warden Armstrong's defense will be based on the grounds of insanity.

The news came from Jackson and was discussed at length in a conference held in the governor's office, attended by the governor, Attorney General Bird, Assistant McGill, Prosecuting Attorney Reese and Thomas J. Navin. It is said that Armstrong is charged by close friends with the excessive use of drugs.

Governor Warner and Navin have told the prosecuting officers that if they found further obstacles placed in their way that would hinder them in securing desired information about prison affairs to let them know and the obstacles would be removed.

Bird will draw up charges at once to oust Armstrong from the warden's residence in case he should be backward about moving. He has consented to move. The governor has sent the ex-head of Jackson prison a notice to vacate at once.

Governor Warner sent his private secretary to Jackson to notify Warden Armstrong to vacate his residence at the state prison.

Wenger's Bond No Good.

It developed here that Acting Warden Wenger's bond for $20,000, which he sent to the auditor general's department several days ago, was returned as unsatisfactory. Wenger has not sent an approved bond. Neither has he filed the $50,000 bond required as custodian of the binder twine plant and twine stock. So Wenger is now acting warden and custodian of the twine plant, and the state has no bond from him.

There was no meeting of the Jackson board here Wednesday, as Judge Adams of Kalamazoo is sick.

When the senate and house adjourned Wednesday afternoon for the day they were dead locked over the question of whether there should be a legislative committee investigation into the Jackson prison scandal in addition to the investigation the grand jury will make.

The senate voted before they got information that Judge Parkinson had been asked to have a joint committee investigation only in the event of no grand jury being summoned in ten days. The house voted for a legislative investigation irrespective of the grand jury.

Both the attorney general and the prosecuting attorney at Jackson are opposed to a legislative investigation while the grand jury is in session.

Armstrong Would Like It.

There is talk here that the accused warden would probably not like anything better than a legislative investigation, for it would reveal to him all the evidence in the possession of his accusers and their witnesses, which would not be the case were the investigation confined to a grand jury.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 11.—Allen N. Armstrong still holds the fort. Despite all that has been said so far about getting him out of the Michigan state prison warden's residence he's right there.

And when it comes to ousting him there's a peculiar situation on hand. Mrs. Armstrong is matron of the prison. If he's thrown out, he must go without her, or she must give up the matronship.

The grand jury has been ordered. Judge Parkinson has entered the necessary order in circuit court, and Saturday morning at 10 o'clock two justices and the sheriff will draw a panel of not less than sixteen nor more than twenty-three to report for service on it March 1.

Not a Legal Holiday in Michigan.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 11.—Customers of prominent banks and large business houses have been inquiring if Lincoln's birthday, tomorrow, is a legal holiday. Many bankers themselves are not positive about the matter. The question is definitely settled by a letter sent out to the state banks by Banking Commissioner Zimmerman, in which he says the day is not a legal holiday in Michigan.

ANTI JAP SCHOOL LAW IS KILLED.

Measure Ousted by California Assembly.

IT WAS RECONSIDERED.

Effort of Voters For Further Consideration Lost—Measure Was Downed Only After Hours of Debate—President Wires His Thanks to Governor Gillett.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 11.—Yielding to the pressure brought to bear by President Roosevelt and Governor J. N. Gillett, the California assembly has reversed its previous position by reconsidering the former vote on segregation of Japanese students in the public schools and finally rejecting the measure by a vote of 41 to 27. An effort by the supporters of the bill further to reconsider was lost by a vote of 38 to 38, and the assembly is now clear of any Japanese measure objected to by the national administration.

The fight for the suppression of the bill was won only after many hours of heated debate on the floor. The struggle started on the presentation by Assemblyman J. N. Transue of Los Angeles of a bill affirming the right of the state to govern its schools, but withdrawing the Japanese segregation measure because of the president's objection to it and lasted until Grove L. Johnson made a motion further to reconsider his defeated school segregation bill which was defeated.

The school bill is still to be considered in the senate, having been presented there by Senator A. Caminetti, but there is little chance that the measure will be approved when brought up.

"I am highly pleased with the action of the assembly," said Governor Gillett. "The east has been deeply concerned in the measures pending here, and I fear that if the anti-Japanese legislation was pressed at this time it would have a disastrous effect."

President Roosevelt sent a telegram to Governor Gillett in which he said:

"Accept my heartiest congratulations. All good Americans appreciate what you have done."

HELP KNOX INTO CABINET.

Senator Hale Introduces Bill Repealing Wage Increase.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Just before the senate adjourned last night Senator Hale, acting chairman of the appropriations committee, introduced a bill to reduce the salary of the secretary of state from $12,000 to $8,000 a year.

This action was the outcome of several hours of consideration by the senate leaders of the point raised that Senator P. C. Knox (Penn.) is ineligible for appointment to the office of secretary of state in Mr. Taft's cabinet for two years from March 4, because the federal constitution provides "that no senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time."

The time for which Mr. Knox was elected will not expire until March 4, 1911. The emoluments of the office of secretary of state were increased in Mr. Knox's present term from $8,000 to $12,000 a year.

THREE ROBBERIES.

Thieves Ransack Homes of Detroit Citizens.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 11.—Burglars last night robbed three Detroit residences of jewelry, silverware and clothing valued at nearly $2,000 and made good their escape without leaving the police a clue that might lead to their detection. These are the residences robbed:

Frank D. Taylor, 105 Watson street, jewelry, silverware and clothing valued at $1,500.

N. Burroughs Gilbert, 264 Joseph Campau avenue, silverware and clothing valued at $400.

Mrs. Sarah McLean, 821 Woodward avenue, jewelry valued at $350.

Young Kings Will Hobnob.

Lisbon, Feb. 11.—King Alfonso of Spain is expected to arrive at Villaviciosa on Friday on a two days' visit to King Manuel. The latter, accompanied by his mother, has arrived at that place. The Portugese foreign minister, Dr. Wenceslan de Lima, and the Spanish minister to Portugal, Count de Luis, will be present at the meeting between the two sovereigns. This, it is announced, will be of an absolutely private character.

NATION WILL HONOR LINCOLN

Celebrations In Many Cities to Be Held Tomorrow.

WILL BE GENERAL HOLIDAY.

Southern States Join With North In Paying Respect to Memory of Martyred President—Features of the Day in New York, Chicago, Washington Include Mass Meeting.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Reports reaching here from all parts of the United States indicate that the observance of Lincoln centennial day will be general throughout the country. All of the northern states will celebrate the day, and many of the southern states will follow the lead of Arkansas, where Governor Donaghey issued a proclamation setting aside Feb. 12 as a semi holiday and calling attention to the greatness of Lincoln as a man. The governor's proclamation declared that Lincoln should be more honored by the south.

The celebration in the national capital will take the form of meetings, at which addresses will be made by men of national and local prominence. President Roosevelt will be at the Lincoln farm in Kentucky, Vice President Fairbanks will be in Harrisburg, Pa., and many of the other leaders of public life here will be at their homes, but a sufficient number will remain in Washington give the celebration a national character to some extent. The large negro population of the city has made elaborate preparations for honoring the one hundredth birthday of the great liberator. By act of congress tomorrow will be a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and the territories.

A feature of Lincoln day at the capital that will be of national interest will be the issue of special Lincoln two cent stamp. It will be red and will bear a portrait of Lincoln taken from the statue by St. Gaudens in Chicago.

LINCOLN DAY IN NEW YORK.

School Children to Have Prominent Part in Celebration.

New York, Feb. 11.—As the greatest city of the nation which will honor the memory of Abraham Lincoln tomorrow, New York will have a notable part in the celebration of the one hundredth birthday of the emancipator. Lincoln's birthday has been a legal holiday in New York for several years, and the general cessation of work is an annual occurrence, but tomorrow even those business houses which have heretofore failed to observe the holiday will close their doors. Stores, offices, shops and dwelling houses will be adorned with flags, and a greater display of bunting than has ever before marked a holiday in the metropolis is expected.

Mayor McClellan has issued a proclamation calling on citizens to decorate their homes, and he has asked President Roosevelt to order the firing of the national salute from every United States warship, wherever it may be. Lincoln's Gettysburg address is to be read in every army post and on every war vessel. Governor Hughes has been requested to have a salute fired from all the state batteries.

Probably the part of the city's program that has attracted most attention among the people is the gathering of the city's school children in the public schools to hear the character of Lincoln extolled, to listen to the reading of the Gettysburg address and to sing patriotic songs. The school children, numbering more than 600,000, have been instructed for weeks in the life of Lincoln and the lessons to be learned therefrom, and they are displaying eager interest in tomorrow's celebration.

CHICAGO'S CELEBRATION.

Great Mass Meeting Will Be the Principal Feature of Lincoln Day.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Chicago's Lincoln day celebration tomorrow will take various forms. The principal feature will be the great mass meeting in the Auditorium, in which the city's leading citizens and the guests of the municipality will join. In addition, there will be meetings in schoolhouses, halls and in the field houses of all the public parks. The municipal playgrounds will be decorated with flags and bunting, and pictures of Lincoln will be displayed conspicuously.

All the nations of the world represented by consular officers in Chicago have been invited to join in the city's tribute to Lincoln.

IN LINCOLN'S CITY.

Famous Speakers at Celebration at Former Home of the Liberator.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11.—In this city, the home of Abraham Lincoln until his inauguration as president, the centenial of his birth will be generally observed tomorrow. There will be meetings in halls and in the public schools, and the city officials will be busily engaged in receiving the distinguished persons who will partake of the Lincoln banquet tomorrow night.

The banquet will be the most prominent feature of Springfield's celebration. Among the men who will make addresses will be Ambassador Bryce, Ambassador Jusserand, William J. Bryan, Senator Cullom of Illinois and Senator Dolliver of Iowa.

Fairbanks Speaks in Harrisburg.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 11.—Vice President Fairbanks will be the principal speaker at the big mass meeting with which this city will honor the memory of Lincoln tomorrow. Governor Stuart will preside at the mass meeting. There will be other features of the celebration, and business will be suspended during the day.

DETROIT TO OBSERVE DAY.

Reports Indicate Even Villages and Hamlets Will Also Celebrate.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 11.—Elaborate arrangements are being made for the celebration of Lincoln's one hundredth anniversary next Friday afternoon, and memory of the martyred president will be consecrated with exercises in the public schools, a parade and patriotic singing and speechmaking in the Light Guard armory.

If the weather permits, the military and naval companies will do considerable marching through the downtown streets. If not, the shortest cut to the armory will be followed in double quick time.

At the armory, after the meeting is called to order by Mayor Breitmeyer, ex-Mayor William C. Maybury will make a short address. The speaker of the day is Professor Herbert L. Willett of the University of Chicago, an acknowledged authority on Lincoln and his times. The Seventh regiment military band will discourse military airs, and Professor Thomas Chilvers has trained a school children's chorus of 500 voices for the occasion.

Reports reaching here from all sections of the state are to the effect that every town, village and hamlet will hold exercises in commemoration of the birth of Lincoln, one hundred years ago.

In some places elaborate programs have been arranged.

GREAT TIME THERE.

Grand Rapids To Have Program on Lincoln Day.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 11.—This city is all fussed up over her coming celebration. The legislature will attend en masse. Most of the members will come as delegates to the Republican state convention.

The legislature adjourned this afternoon in time to give everyone a chance to leave for Grand Rapids over the Pere Marquette. Friday morning the convention will be held. In the afternoon the cornerstone of the new federal building will be laid, the Masonic grand lodge of Michigan being in charge of the ceremony, while various fraternal and other organizations will assist.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of the president, will be present at the ceremony. She is coming with her husband, who will be one of the speakers at the banquet, which will close the day.

The speakers at the banquet include Richard Pearson Hobson, Congressman Duncan McKinlay of California, W. H. Montague, former secretary of state of Canada; Rev. Dr. M. Wolsey Stryker, president of Hamilton college; Brigadier General Sanger, who was a close friend of President Lincoln, and Senator William Alden Smith.

NOT CONSUL'S BODY.

That Found in Ruins of Santiago, Chile, Mystifies Officers.

Santiago, Chile, Feb. 11.—Baron Von Bodman, the German minister to Chile, has made the official declaration to the Chilean government that the body of the man found in the ruins of the office of the German legation, destroyed by fire on Friday last, was not that of Chancellor Beckert. This gives the affair a very serious, though not expected, turn.

Medical examination established the fact that the man, whose body was burned beyond recognition, had been murdered, three knife wounds having been discovered. A report has reached here that Beckert has been captured at Chillan, the capital of the province of Nuble.

Manceiona Farmer Tossed in Air.

Traverse City, Mich., Feb. 11.—Charles Johnson, a farmer of Manceiona, is thanking his lucky stars today that he is alive. He was driving home in a sleigh when the G. R. & I. snow plow, going at a rate of thirty miles an hour, struck his vehicle. He was thrown thirty feet in the air, but he alighted in a snowbank.

When You Buy Oysters Don't Pay For Water

Why should you get a pint of water with every quart of Oysters? Water is cheap—bloats and bleaches the oyster—spoils its natural flavor.

You have never known how good oysters can be unless you have had

"Sealshipt" Oysters

They are shucked into air-tight steel cans and shipped direct from the beds—packed with ice around the container, not in contact with the oysters. You get all solid meats. And how fresh, wholesome, appetizing and deliciously different they are!

Ask for "Sealshipt Sense," a booklet containing new and attractive ways of preparing oysters.

If your dealer doesn't sell "Sealshipt," here are some who do:

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Carelessness is really laziness under a more polite name.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by all dealers.

The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

1809—The Year of Genius—1809

Darwin's Centenary

Part Second—His Epoch Making Voyage In the Beagle—"The Origin of Species"—Darwin at Home

By Oliver Leigh

Copyright, 1909, by the American Press Association

THROUGH Henslow Darwin was honored with an invitation to join the government expedition being planned to sail on H. M. S. Beagle as naturalist. It was to circle the globe in three or four years on scientific researches, and there was to be no salary. Darwin would share the captain's quarters and the ship's fare. On this peg hangs a fact of great significance, but not generally known. If the total could be calculated of all the spoils of learning acquired, digested and given to the world by Great Britain during past centuries, we would be astounded to discover what a large proportion of all the arts, sciences and general scholarship has been freely contributed by rich and titled men and their sons who have devoted their talents and wealth to the promotion of their country's glory in this direction, as others have in naval and military service, in colonization and statesmanship.

After declining, on his father's advice, Darwin changed his mind and won Henslow's ardent applause. His father gave in after arriving at the conclusion that the voyage need not necessarily "be injurious to his character" if on his return he entered the church. The Beagle sailed on Dec. 27, 1831, a brig of 235 tons and ten guns. Darwin had long been anxious to see for himself the indescribable glories of the South American forests. The collections he made were to be his own property. "The voyage was by far the most important event of my life and determined my whole career."

He returned in October, 1836, and married his cousin in 1839. That same year he published his "Journal of Researches During a Voyage Round the World," which won him honors. The long spell of sea life, from which he suffered, impaired his health, so that in 1842 he withdrew to the retirement of the country house at Down, not far from London, in which he remained a recluse until his death.

It was curious that he all but lost the opportunity of his life because of the shape of his nose. Captain (afterward Admiral) Fitzroy, whose barometrical improvements have been adopted, had the choosing of the naturalist and decided that the owner of so inartistic a nose must be deficient in energy and determination. Darwin only remarks that Fitzroy soon learned that "my nose had spoken falsely."

Henslow considered that Darwin's letters to him more than justified the fine things he had said about the young man to the government, so he had them privately printed and distributed among scientists. This doubtless made Darwin famous in quarters where ordinarily genius has to knock long before it can enter.

It is not necessary here to give the titles of the five important books that followed the "Journal," each teeming with fresh facts and weighty reasonings that stirred the scientific world. He covered an immense field and with an authority that seemed the summary of a long life work on each distinct subject. In 1859 appeared "The Origin of Species," the book that turned the world upside down in its way. While it was accepted and will always rank as a work of original investigation and philosophy, Darwin's opening pages are devoted to honoring the pioneers in the line of thought which he has made his own.

He names Buffon, Lamarck, Saint-Hilaire, W. C. Wells, Rev. W. Herbert, dean of Manchester cathedral; Professor Grant of Edinburgh, Professor Haldeman and others as having foreshadowed the theory which he was the first to demonstrate. This and many other features which cannot be noticed now exemplify the simplicity and loftiness of Darwin's mind, his humility and modesty.

This fine magnanimity was shown by Darwin and Alfred Russel Wallace in equal degree in the remarkable incident which we now relate. Darwin opens his introduction to "The Origin of Species" with the statement here condensed: "On my return in 1837 from the Beagle voyage it occurred to me that something might perhaps be made out on this question, the origin of species, the mystery of mysteries, as one of our greatest philosophers had called it. After five years' work (on his Beagle facts) I allowed myself to speculate on the subject and drew up some short notes. These I enlarged in 1844 into a sketch of the conclusions which then seemed to me probable. * * * My work is now (1859) nearly finished; but, as it will take me many more years to complete it and as my health is far from strong, I have been urged to publish this abstract, more especially as Mr. Wallace has arrived at almost exactly the same general conclusions that I have on the origin of species. In 1858 he sent me a memoir on this subject."

This is a mild telling of how, after you have been pegging away for nearly twenty years at working out a great idea, a stranger pops up and shows the world that he has got ahead of you, and in lightning speed too.

The Linnean society of London met on July 1, 1908, to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the joint communication by Charles Darwin and Alfred Russel Wallace "On the Tendency of Species to Form Varieties and on the Perpetuation of Varieties and Species by Natural Means of Selection." Dr. Wallace was present and made an address. Referring to the undue credit that had been given him as simultaneous if not the first discoverer of the theory, he wished again to state the facts clearly and finally. The idea of "natural selection," or "survival of the fittest," occurred to both Darwin and himself independently. But what is often forgotten is that it occurred to Darwin in 1838, and during most of those years Darwin had been laboriously collecting evidence and carrying out ingenious experiments and original observations. As far back as 1844 Darwin had sent an outline of his views to his friends Lyell and Hooker, who strongly urged him to publish it at once lest some one should forestall him, but he always refused till he had got all his materials together for his great work.

HE TOOK A WALK THROUGH THE GROUNDS, RAIN OR SHINE.

HE ALWAYS WORE A SHAWL INDOORS.

Then came the fulfillment of their prediction when he (Wallace) sent his essay, which fell on Darwin like a thunderbolt. How different Darwin's long preparation and caution to his own (Wallace's) conduct! "The idea came to me, as it did to Darwin, in a sudden flash of insight. I wrote it out, developed it, then copied it on letter paper and sent it to Darwin, all in one week. I was the young man in a hurry; Darwin was the painstaking and patient student." Dr. Wallace then showed how they had worked on parallel lines, from beetle collecting, through foreign travel in search of truth, and, singularly, their final stage was Malthus' "Principles of Population." Sir Charles Lyell and Dr. Hooker decided that the proper course was to couple an early memoir on the subject by Darwin with Wallace's just received memoir, and so they were read together at the Linnean society's July meeting in 1858.

Forty years Darwin lived a hermit life amid his family, secluded from the outer world. In the first year or two they went a little into society and received a few friends, but even that mild excitement prevented sleep and induced violent vomiting. So most of those forty years were lived in the home circle, and the visits of intimate and valued friends, like Huxley and distinguished men of science, were perforce very rare. It was an ideally happy home. His only absences were when overwork drove him for a few days' rest to the seaside or to the London homes of a son and a daughter. He spent years over each of his books, large or small. All were great. This was the routine of his average day: He rose early summer and winter, took a short walk before breakfast, in winter at daybreak; then breakfasted alone at quarter to 8 and worked over his plants, insects, microscope and rough notes until half past 9—he called these hours his best time; then to the common room, where he would view the pile of letters for him and rejoice when it was small. Every one was answered. They were read to him as he lay on the sofa. At half past 10 he listened to a chapter of a novel. The kind he liked were those of ordinary life told with ordinary skill. For heroine he preferred a pretty woman, and he said a law ought to put down novels with unhappy endings.

After this recreation he would go and work till a quarter past 12, when he took a walk through his grounds, rain or shine, with his white terrier, Polly. He was six feet tall, had a swinging walk, and the ring of his iron shod walking stick was cheery. While dictating in his workroom he would skip occasionally across the hall for a pinch out of the snuffbox he kept there to lead him not into the temptation it would be nearer at hand. Though a confirmed invalid, he was ruddy cheeked. His blue gray eyes hid themselves in the recesses of the deep overhanging brow fringed with thick projecting eyebrows. He talked vivaciously, laughed loudly and was free in gesticulating, but had to move slowly and clumsily around the house because of frequent giddiness.

He was forbidden to eat sweet things and often vowed he would not, then broke his vow. Wine he enjoyed and was bettered by it, but he took very little. When walking he observed all the birds, animals, beetles, flowers, with the double interest of a child and a scientist. Inspecting some seedlings with which he was experimenting, he flew into a mock passion with them—"the little beggars are doing just what I don't want them to do!" At 8 o'clock he rested in his bedroom on a sofa, smoking a cigarette and listening to more light reading. If he dozed Mrs. Darwin would continue reading lest her silence would wake him. From 4 to half past 5 he was in his workroom, after which he would rest and smoke. In the later years he had a plain tea, with an egg or piece of meat, instead of dinner, and would take leave of the diners, saying, if visitors were there, "I am an old woman now and must leave with the ladies." He always wore a shawl indoors and had lined cloth boots to slip over his indoor shoes for a walk. When intent on something in his work he would pull off his coat, though very subject to chills. He played two games of backgammon with his wife after dinner with great gusto.

Often he lamented that the nature and long continuance of his labors had turned his mind into a machine for grinding general laws out of endless collections of facts. The minutest detail was as important as a large view. Each book was a final abstract of numerous earlier abstracts. He always had several distinct subjects in hand at the same time, which he systematized his own way in about forty large portfolios. He made a rule of jotting down a thought on the instant and placing it where it belonged. This indicates his methodical habit and his slow and sure way of working.

Even ill health had its compensation. "Though it has annihilated several years of my life it has saved me from the distractions of society and its amusements." He laughed at the high flown talk of artists as if art were something sacred. His library was for use, not show, and his work went on seven days to the week. The village parson was an almost daily visitor, but Darwin could not return his calls in church. When he ventured there in 1871 on the occasion of his daughter's wedding he was overcome with the exertion and strain.

He gladly served as treasurer of the church and village benefit societies. With all around him, and especially with the servants, he was kind and considerate. It was always, "Would you be so good as to" do this or that. He died April 19, 1882, and was buried in Westminster abbey, Dr. Wallace being the chief pallbearer.

The non-scientific reader will find many fascinating pages in some of Darwin's apparently driest works. He is not a stylist—in fact, he bewails the difficulty he always had in hitting on the best expression of what he had to say. He succeeds in being clear and impressive. In his "Descent of Man and Variation In Relation to Sex," the "Expression of the Emotions In Man and Animals" and the "Insectivorous Plants" there is a wealth of strange material which it would be well for the dissipated novel reader to explore between his and her fiction spasms.

A hundred years ago this epoch marking man of science was born, and fifty years ago his book saw the light. Some of Darwin's contemporaries whose centenaries are to be celebrated or remembered were born with a gold spoonful of what is called genius in their brain pans. The child in their case was father to the man, the halo adorned their heads from the cradle, according to the fond memories of the nursery. The average lad is a bit disheartened at finding his fingers are not scorched as they timidly grope where the ring of glory should be. Let him read the history of the juvenile Darwin's body and mind and as he grew from boy to youth and from youth to manhood. It will be a surer tonic than any that comes in bottles. Here is an unpromising boy, a solitary, an ungainly form, a dull brain, sees no good in schooling, forgets all it taught him, takes his own unpromising course and so drifts along till the lucky hour comes that flashes into activity the dormant quality that lurks in every one of us, but too often dies for want of the magic touch of opportunity. Darwin's tomb in Westminster abbey is the rightful due of a rarely great life of toil in pain, a workman whose model motto was, "It's dogged as does it."

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strongthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with FLOWERS.

Those wanting narcissus, hyacinths, and trim roses in bloom, will find them at Mrs. Robert Crosby's.

S. A. CLAUHARTY.

S. A. Clauharty died at his home in Adrian Tuesday morning after an illness of eight weeks.

Samuel Alexander Clauharty was born March 18, 1831 in the village of Havana, now Montour Falls, N. Y. and there remained most of the time until he was thirty years of age. Mr. Clauharty came to Michigan about 1877 locating on a farm near this village, for three years, then purchasing a farm west of Adrian where they resided twenty years. Six years ago they moved to the city of Adrian, where they had a nice home at 12 Mixer St.

Mr. Clauharty married in 1864, Miss Fidelia Coddington, a sister of O. P. Coddington, who resided north of Tecumseh.

The funeral services were held at the Baptist church in Adrian yesterday morning, burial at Brookside cemetery in Tecumseh.

The first lesson in fence breaking may come from a little neglect on the part of the farmer to keep the boards or rails all whole. One board off and the mischief has been commenced. Look out for the beginning of such things.

FRANK HURST

Tendered his Resignation as Secretary of the County Y. M. C. A.

Frank Hurst of this village has tendered his resignation as County Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and on Wednesday at the County Committee meeting in Adrian, his successor will be chosen.

Mr. Hurst will take up county work in the state of Ohio.

Mr. Hurst's resignation is regretted by a large number of people, for, during his three years work in Tecumseh, his sunny disposition and pleasing manner has won for him countless friends.

Mr. Hurst is very popular with the young people, and competent in his chosen line of work.

The best wishes of a host of friends go with him.

PETITION SIGNERS.

Mrs. Hardy and her Helpers are Receiving a Large Number of Signers.

The Petition to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, which is being circulated by Mrs. Hardy in Tecumseh, and several assistants, asking for an amendment to the National Constitution to enable women to vote is meeting with great success.

The experience of the ladies, who have canvassed for the Petition, is that people have, with few exceptions only to be asked for their signatures, in order to obtain them. The work has been pleasant and easy, but there are at present not enough workers to cover the county.

Mrs. Hardy would be glad to hear from any ladies in Lenawee county, who are in sympathy with the cause, or would be willing to take a Petition around, or otherwise obtain signatures.

Among those, who are assisting with the petition are: Miss Ella Hathaway of Ridgeway, Miss Edith Cotton, Miss Nellie Mingay, Mrs. Howland of Tecumseh, Dr. Julia P. Green of Adrian, and Mrs. Julia Reed of Onsted. A number of the ladies interested in the work met with Mrs. Hardy in the doctor's office, Thursday afternoon and laid plans for carrying on the work.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

With Appropriate Exercises the Schools of Tecumseh Celebrate His Birth.

ONE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Members of Beers Post also celebrate his anniversary this evening.

A proclamation was issued recently by the Govenor, Fred M. Warner, to the State of Michigan that they should take time to do special honor to the memory of the Great Emancipator Abraham Lincoln on the occasion of the One Hundredth Anniversary of his birth. Therefore in accordance with this proclamation every grade in the Tecumseh schools observed the event today with appropriate exercises.

Abraham Lincoln was one of the gentlest, greatest characters the world has ever known. He came into being in a humble Kentucky home just a century ago. Born, Feb. 12, 1809, he was one of the common people whose interests he ever guarded and whose rights he defended to the end.

Destined to serve as chief executive of this Nation through the years of its greatest trial, he rendered his country a service that has no parallel.

In performing this loving service of honoring his birth, the citizens will benefit themselves by learning anew the lesson of this great life, and thus come to a greater appreciation of privileges they enjoy and of the sacrifices of those who preserved for them this government, and all the benefits it confers upon even the humblest citizen of America.

It was at the great republican convention which was held in Chicago, on the 16th day of June 1860, that Abraham Lincoln received the nomination, from among the eleven candidates.

Little did he then dream of the weary years of toil and care, and the tragic death, to which his nomination doomed him, and little did he dream that he was to render services to his country which would fix upon him the eyes of the whole civilized world, and which would give him a place in the eyes of his countrymen, second only, if second to that of Washington.

On election day Mr. Lincoln received 180 electoral votes out of the 203 cast, and was therefore, constitutionally elected president of the United States.

On April 14, 1865, he attended the Ford's Theatre, and while listening to the play, an actor John Wilkes Booth, entered the box occupied by the President and family, fired a bullet into President Lincoln's brains. The president died the next morning at 7 o'clock.

The entire nation was thrown into deep grief. His was a life which will fitly become a model.

His name, as the savior of his country will live with that of Washington's, its father; his countrymen being unable to decide which is the greater.

Postmaster Bidwell placed on sale this morning, 3,000 Lincoln postage stamps, which will be left on sale until all are disposed of. The stamp bears the likeness of Lincoln in profile. BLANCHARD COUNCIL VISITS ADRIAN.

Forty-five members of Blanchard Council journeyed to Adrian last evening and paid the Adrian Council a fraternal visit. A special train at 6:30 carried them to the Maple city where the Adrian brothers met them and escorted the guests to their hall. At seven o'clock a dinner was served after which the Adrian Council exemplified two degrees upon a class of ten candidates. The Super-excellent degree was conferred by the Tecumseh Council. The Tecumseh boys returned at 11:30 and cannot say enough of the royal good time they were given by the Adrian brothers.

NASAL CATARRH

C. A. Wright & Son Sells the Great Remedy that Cured Mrs. Karberg

Here is a very simple yet wholly sincere statement of a Michigan woman, who was cured by using Hyomei—the no cure no pay remedy for catarrh, asthma, hay fever, croup, coughs and colds.

"A bad case of catarrh was cured for me by the use of Hyomei. The trouble affected my head, nose and eyes, and was very annoying and disagreeable, and the cure, from the use of Hyomei, was very gratifying. Hyomei has from me a strong recommend and endorsement."—Mrs. E. Karberg, 213 Kingsley St., Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 16, 1908.

Thousands of just such letters are in existence, and thousands more would be but for the desire to avoid publicity.

If you have catarrh, beatir yourself, and drive it out of your system. Kill the germs. You can do that easily if you use Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me).

It is a dry, antiseptic and very pleasant air that, when inhaled, quickly relieves all forms of catarrhal inflammation, stops snuffles, hawking and blowing. The price for a complete outfit, including inhaler, is only $1.00, at C. A. Wright & Son.

This is unusually important news for the deaf, for by this can the final selection of the ear completely satisfactory hearing aid is made easy and inexpensive for everyone. This new invention (U.S. Patent No. 793,511) renders unnecessary such clumsy, unsightly and frequently harmful devices as trumpets, horns, tubes, ear drums, fans, etc. It is a tiny electric telephone that fits on the ear, and which, the instant it is applied, magnifies the sound waves in such manner as to cause an astonishing increase in the clearness of all sounds. It overcomes the buzzing and roaring ear noises, and also so constantly and electrically exercises the vital parts of the ear that, usually, the natural, unaided hearing itself is gradually restored.

MRS. LYDIA H. JOSSELYN

MRS. EMILY KELLOGG

MRS JOSEPH VITTUR

MRS. LENA R. MOUDY

MISS BESSIE FARRELL

Pe-ru-na a Spring Tonic.

Miss Lucy Ingram, 521 Ellis St., Augusta, Ga., writes:

"I have used your Peruna as a tonic and found it counteracted the debilitating effects of warm weather.

"I cheerfully recommend those who have that languid feeling which is customary to most of us in spring, to try Peruna. It will prove an invigorator. It is also good to break up colds and the grippe."

Catarrh and Stomach Trouble.

Mrs. T. Frech, R. R. No. 1, Hickory Point, Tenn., writes:

I am happy to tell you that I am cured of catarrh. I have followed your good and kind advice faithfully. I bless the day when I wrote you of my condition, and I will always praise Peruna. I think it is one of the grandest medicines on earth.

"Having been afflicted with catarrh and stomach trouble for seven years and after having tried four different doctors they only relieved me for a little while. I gave up all hope of being cured. I only weighed 130 pounds, and was so weak I could hardly get around the room.

"I was induced to try Peruna, and to my great surprise I am now entirely well. My weight is now 188 pounds, my health never was better in my life.

"I shall always praise Dr. Hartman and his remedies."

Thousands of families have learned the use of Peruna and its value in the treatment of catarrhal ailments.

Tired, Worn-Out Mothers.

Mrs. Lydia H. Josselyn, 501 Westminster St., Providence, R. I., is Treasurer of the Editors League of Rhode Island, chartered in Providence. She writes:

"My experience with Peruna has been most gratifying. Last winter I contracted a severe cold, and for several days I coughed until my voice failed me. When other remedies did me no good, I decided to try Peruna, and within four days the cold was broken up, and the cough abated.

"Within another week an increase in my usual strength and vitality told me that Peruna was doing all that it promised, and more. I also consider it very superior for tired, worn-out mothers, and have advised several to try it, and have seen most gratifying results from its use.

"I give it highest praise."

Bowel Trouble.

Mrs. Maggie Durbin, 1332 North St., Little Rock, Ark., writes:

"I was troubled for five years with a chronic disease. I tried everything I heard of, but nothing did me any good. Some doctors said my trouble was catarrh of the bowels, and some said consumption of the bowels.

"One doctor said he could cure me. I took his medicine two months. But it did me no good.

"A friend of mine advised me to try Peruna and I did so. After I had taken two bottles I found it was helping me, so I continued its use, and it has cured me sound and well.

"I can recommend Peruna to any one, and if any one wants to know what Peruna did for me if they will write to me I will answer promptly."

Peruna is a household remedy of great merit, and is useful in a great many climatic ailments, such as coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis and catarrhal diseases generally.

Biliousness, Indigestion.

Mrs. Lena R. Moudy, 556 Caywood St., Portland, Oregon, Sec'y Royal Tribe of Joseph, writes:

"For the past six years biliousness and pains in my back and limbs made life miserable to me. My skin was sallow and dry, and indigestion was added to my troubles. I was wakeful at night and would get a weak, faint feeling during the day so that I was not fitted to attend to my regular duties. This caused me serious annoyance and trouble, and I naturally tried many remedies, hoping to get relief.

"Peruna came as a friend in need. It toned up the system, relieved the blood of the poisons and induced a healthy action of the stomach, a fine appetite and restful sleep.

"Within three months I was a changed person, and for nearly a year now I have enjoyed splendid health."

A Grateful Patient.

Mrs. Eliza J. Cazee, R. F. D. 8, Bedford, Ind., writes: "I have been cured by using Peruna and Manalin. I thank you for your advice."

Restorer of Lost Strength.

Miss Bessie Farrell, 1011 Third Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., is President of the Young People's Christian Temperance Association. She writes:

"Peruna is certainly a valuable nerve and blood remedy, calculated to build up the broken-down health of worn-out women. I have found by personal experience that it acts as a wonderful restorer of lost strength, assisting the stomach to assimilate and digest the food, and building up worn-out tissues. In my work I have had occasion to recommend it frequently, especially to sick women.

"I know of nothing which is better to build up the strength of a young mother, in fact all the ailments peculiar to women, so I am pleased to give it my hearty endorsement."

Pe-ru-na a Woman's Friend.

Mrs. Ella Embree, Clark, Mo., writes: "I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I can truthfully say that Peruna is a woman's friend. I have no more terrible pains and am stronger than I have been. Your medicine has worked like a charm."

Bilious Headache.

Mrs. Emily Kellogg, 548 S. Lawrence St., South Tacoma, Wash., member of Ladies of the Maccabees, writes:

"Three months ago I had an attack of biliousness which threatened to undermine my health and strength. Luckily for me, I tried Peruna at the suggestion of my friends before it was too late.

"I found in a few days time that I did not have the usual sick headache, neither did food nauseate me any longer. In two weeks' time Peruna had completely rid my system of the poison and bile, and I was in a much better condition. My skin assumed its normal color, I had a splendid appetite, and I was in every way improved in health. I used Peruna for a month longer, and it wrought a wondrous change in my entire system. I consider it a most wonderful medicine."

Nervous Dyspepsia.

Mrs. J. C. Jamison, 61 Marchant St., Watsonville, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled with cramps in the stomach for six years. I tried many kinds of medicine, also was treated by three doctors. They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I was put on a liquid diet for three months. I improved under the treatment, but as soon as I stopped taking the medicine, I got bad again. I took the medicine for two years, then I got sick again and gave up all hopes of getting cured.

"I saw a testimonial of a man whose case was similar to mine being cured by Peruna, so I thought I would give it a trial. I procured a bottle at once and commenced taking it. I have taken nineteen bottles and am entirely cured. Have gained in strength and flesh and feel like a different person.

"I believe Peruna is all that is claimed for it."

Catarrh of Head.

Mrs. Joseph Vittur, 5709 Erie St., Austin Sta., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"Your medicine, Peruna, was of great benefit to me. I suffered with catarrh of the nose and head for many years. Three bottles of Peruna cured me, after I had considered it impossible to ever be cured again.

"I now always keep Peruna in the house, and recommend it to every one suffering from catarrh. As soon as one of my children commence to cough I give them Peruna, and their cough is soon gone.

"This medicine is surely a great boon to suffering humanity."

Pe-ru-na the Family Doctor.

Mrs. M. E. Seymour, R. F. D. 2, Bowman, Ga., writes:

"I am ready to speak a few words in favor of Peruna and Manalin. I have tried them for nearly every ill of life for myself and family, and find them to be all the doctor claims them to be. Peruna cured me of internal trouble when my doctor could not.

"My advice to all suffering women is, consult Dr. Hartman. What he has done for me he will do for you."

Pe-ru-na in Tablet Form.

For two years Dr. Hartman and his assistants have incessantly labored to create Peruna in tablet form, and their strenuous labors have just been crowned with success. People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna tablets, which represent the medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

MACON.

Sarah E. Jackson was born in Ridgeway, Mich., Sept. 23rd, 1868, and departed this life at her home in Macon, Feb. 1, 1909. In 1878 she came to Macon with her parents and this had been her home ever since. April, 1897, she was married to James V. Burdett, who survives her and with the father and mother, one sister and other relatives mourn their loss. Previous to her marriage, she followed various vocations, principally school teaching and type setting. For the past twelve years she has been the faithful correspondent of one of our county papers.

Mrs. Burdett was converted and united with the M. E. church of Macon in 1886 under the pastorate of Rev. E. P. Pierce. Her church home was ever dear to her. She appreciated its privileges and did all she could to promote its prosperity. Although deprived of the privilege of attending its services for so long a time, her interest in the work continued unabated and she frequently inquired of her pastor and others as to its interest. She was an active member of the Epworth League and for many years one of the Cabinet. In the Sunday school she was always interested and was for a long time secretary and treasurer. As long as her health permitted, she was regular in attendance, ever doing what she could to help the work along.

Mrs. Burdett had not enjoyed very good health. Her last sickness was of forty-one weeks duration, being confined to her bed most of the time. Through all her suffering she felt herself comforted and supported by her heavenly Father in whom her trust and confidence continued unshaken. Frequently did she express herself to her pastors and friends as to the consolation and comfort she derived from her religion in these days and weeks of trial. She bore her suffering with great fortitude and patience until the call of the Master came early on Monday morning last, and her emancipated spirit winged its flight to the paradise of God, passing forever beyond the reach of pain and sorrow and death. The funeral services were held from the M. E. church of Macon, on the 3rd of February and were conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. D. Halliday. His remarks were based on 2nd Cor. 5-1. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in heaven." The burial was in Macon cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS.

LEFT ON HER DOORSTEP FOR THIS MOTHER

Mrs. A. G. Tuson, of Livermore, Cal., writes: "I picked up from my doorstep one day a little book in which I soon became very much interested. My little girl of five years of age had been troubled for a long time with loss of appetite, extreme nervousness and undue fatigue. She was all run down and in a very delicate condition. "This little book was very comprehensively written, and told of the new method of extracting the medicinal elements of the cod's liver from the oil, eliminating the obnoxious oil which is so hard for children to take.

"'Just the thing,' said I, 'for my little daughter,' and I immediately went for a bottle of Vinol. It helped her wonderfully. She has gained rapidly in flesh and strength, and she does not take cold half so easily.

"I am extremely grateful for the good it has done her, and I hope other mothers who have weak, delicate or ailing children will be benefited by my experience and just give Vinol a trial."

HIS FAMILY GONE.

Ovid (N. Y.) Citizen Comes to Ann Arbor on Singular Quest.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 11.—Samuel Covert of Ovid, N. Y., has arrived here in pursuit of his wife, two children, his sister-in-law and a gentleman friend of Mrs. Covert.

"I gave my wife $165 to do some shopping in Geneva," said Covert. "She took the children with her, and I haven't seen or heard from them since. That was two weeks ago. At Geneva I found that she had purchased tickets to Ann Arbor for herself, the little boy and girl, her sister and a man. I don't want my wife back again; I'm not anxious to revenge myself on any man who may have run away with her, but I want my little ones."

At the Cook House it is recalled that a party answering the description given by Covert spent about two hours in the parlor, afterward inquiring when an interurban car would be leaving for Saline. Covert will follow up this clue.

EVIDENCE LACKED.

There Will Be No Investigation Into Orphanage Fire.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 11.—There will be no investigation of the Haskell Home fire, which cost the lives of three little children. Local officials announce that there is not enough evidence perceptible that the fire was incendiary to warrant them in going into what would be a police investigation of the subject.

Accordingly, unless pressure is brought to bear from unofficial sources the orphanage fire will go down into local history along with several other unsolved mysteries in connection with the burning of Adventist institutions here.

Eat What
You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

BABE ON VERANDA.

New Born Child Left in Blinding Storm in Early Morning.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 15.—Loosely wrapped in a few old garments, a baby girl, but a few hours old, was left on the front porch of the residence of Harriet S. Duncan, 39 Woodward terrace, in a blinding snow storm, sometime before 5 o'clock in the morning. The abandoned child was not discovered until 1 o'clock in the afternoon, when Miss Dorothy Laurie and her mother, roomers at that address, were leaving the house.

The child was taken into the house, where it was discovered that since its birth it had not been even properly cared for. Miss Laurie called up the police, and the wee babe was taken to the Woman's hospital. A newsboy declares he saw the bundle on the veranda about 5 o'clock in the morning, but thinking it a package of old rags gave it no attention.

REMEMBER MAINE IN WASHINGTON

Capital Pays Honor to Battleships Dead Today.

ANNIVERSARY OF DISASTER.

Eleven Years Ago Today the Vessel Was Blown Up in Havana Harbor. Sigsbee Principal Speaker at Memorial Services—Pilgrimage Made to Graves of Crew at Arlington.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The national capital "remembered the Maine" on two occasions today and will pay further tribute this evening to the memory of the men of the battleship which sank in Havana harbor eleven years ago. Three separate celebrations of "Maine day" were planned by the Maine Memorial association. Many persons participate in all three ceremonies.

The day was opened by mass at St. Patrick's cathedral in memory of the Roman Catholics who lost their lives in the disaster. Among the priests who officiated at the services was the Rev. Eugene Hannan, who is a personal friend of Father Chadwick, chaplain of the Maine, and represented him at the services.

This afternoon the members of the association, with members of the Spanish War Veterans, the Army and Navy union and other patriotic organizations, made a pilgrimage to the "Maine section" of Arlington cemetery, where the recovered remains of the men of the Maine are buried. Many well known navy and army officers made the pilgrimage. Rear Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee, retired, who commanded the Maine when she sank, represented the navy, and General Andrew S. Burt, retired, represented the army.

Wreaths For the Maine's Dead.

The ceremony of placing floral tributes on the giant anchor of the Maine, which stands among the graves, was performed by ladies of the Maine association. The pieces included two wreaths from President Roosevelt, one from the National Woman's Relief corps, another from the Phil Sheridan Woman's Relief corps and others. There was a firing party of troopers of the Thirteenth United States cavalry, and a bugler closed the exercises with "taps."

The speakers for the meeting this evening in the First Presbyterian church will include Rear Admiral Sigsbee, Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, General Andrew S. Burt, Colonel John McElroy, Rev. Father Eugene Hannan, Rev. Donald MacLeod, pastor of the church, and others. Dr. Thomas Calver will read an original poem on "The Men of the Maine."

CARRY 'EM DOWN LADDERS.

Firemen in Toledo Rescue Women From Burning Apartment House.

Toledo, O., Feb. 15.—With the wind blowing a gale and driving sleet in their faces, firemen early in the day carried eighteen women down ladders to safety when a blaze routed out the tenants in a four story apartment house at the corner of Adams and Seventeenth streets.

No one was injured. The property loss was about $5,000.

Further 'Quakes at Reggio.

Reggio, Italy, Feb. 15.—Earth shocks, more or less strong, have just been experienced here.

Believed He Took His Life.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 15.—Lying face upwards, with a coarse sack hiding his features, the body of Frank Hutchins, foreman on the dairy farm of Edwin S. Roberts on Joy road, about a mile north of the boulevard, was found in the engine room of the farm pump house. Coroner Burgess says it is a case of suicide. County Physician Grimes and Stapleton, who conducted a post mortem, were unable to determine the cause of death, and the stomach was removed and turned over to County Chemist Clark for analysis. Hutchins had been employed on the farm for nearly two years. He was forty-three years old and had a wife and three children living in Benton Harbor.

Hold-Up Men Get but $2.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 15.—Three strange men held up John Middleton, a Mt. Morris farmer. They got but $2. Middleton notified the sheriff, but the latter was unable to locate the holdups.

Candidate For Wardenship.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 14.—Former State Senator Archie Peek of this city is a candidate for the wardenship of Jackson prison, and a number of his friends are urging his selection.

TAFT GOES TO WASHINGTON.

Leaves Cincinnati Today For Capitol.

WILL REPORT ON THE CANAL.

He Will Convey Statement of Engineers to President—Present Methods of Procedure Indorsed—Cabinet Prophets Have Taft's Official Family All Picked Save Treasurer.

Cincinnati, Feb. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Taft, who arrived in this, their home city, from New Orleans Sunday, left for Washington today. Mrs. Taft contemplates a visit to New York, while the president elect will spend one day at the capital and then return here and remain until Saturday.

The trip to Washington has importance inasmuch as its primary object relates to the report of the engineers who accompanied Mr. Taft to Panama. This report is expected to be placed in his hands upon his arrival there tomorrow morning.

With the engineers, he will take the document to the White House, where it will be the subject of a general conference with President Roosevelt. The contents of the report, it is intimated, are a strong endorsement of the carrying of the present canal plans and the commendation of the organization under Colonel Goethals and recommendations tending to show that whatever error has been made has been on the side of the unnecessary precautions for safety.

While in Washington Mr. Taft expects to have conferences with Senator Knox and with others whose advice he values relative to cabinet appointments.

The cabinet gossip which is regarded as the most reliable, and stated with the understanding that Mr. Taft has declared he would reserve the right to deny all cabinet suggestions, is that no one has been determined upon for the treasury portfolio.

Senator Knox and Frank H. Hitchcock have been asked and have accepted the positions of secretary of state and postmaster general.

As to the other places, unconfirmed rumor, with a fair percentage of likelihood for correctness, makes the cabinet of Mr. Taft as follows:

Attorney general—Mr. Wickersham of New York.

Secretary of war—Mr. Wright of Tennessee.

Secretary of the navy—Mr. Meyer of Massachusetts.

Secretary of the interior—Mr. Ballinger of Washington state.

Secretary of agriculture—Mr. Wilson of Iowa.

Secretary of commerce and labor—Mr. Nagel of Missouri.

It is the general understanding that Mr. Taft wishes to fill the treasury portfolio either from Illinois or Ohio.

KING MANUEL TO WED.

Portuguese Press Declares Bride Elect is Princess Beatrice.

Lisbon, Feb. 15.—Although not yet confirmed in official quarters, the entire press of Portugal states that the royal interview between King Alfonso and King Manuel related chiefly to the projected marriage of King Manuel to Princess Beatrice, daughter of the late Duke of Edinburgh and niece of King Edward.

Such a marriage, in addition to meeting with the entire approval of the Portuguese royal family, is favorably commented upon by the whole country and the press, the opinion being that it would greatly strengthen the bonds of friendship between Great Britain and Portugal and would consolidate British influence in the whole peninsula.

CHESS CHAMPIONS PLAY.

Masters' Tournament Begun in St. Petersburg Today.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 15.—One of the greatest events in the history of the ancient game of chess is the masters' tournament, which began here today. Twenty of the leading players of the game are entered in the tournament, which will consist of a single round, each of the players meeting every other competitor once.

One of the competitors is Emanuel Lasker, champion chess player of the world. Other leading masters who have agreed to play are Burn, Marco, Mieses, Teichmann, Tarrasch, Maroczy, Vidmar, Schlechter and Janowski.

Hangs Himself in Barn.

Paw Paw, Mich., Feb. 14.—O. C. Putney, seventy-three years old, and one of the best known farmers in this county, committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn. What caused the man to commit the deed cannot be learned. He was in good health.

PATHETIC WAS HIS DEPARTURE

Armstrong and His Family Quit Jackson Prison.

NO FRIEND TO SAY ADIEU.

Former Warden Manifested Deep Emotion in His Leave Taking—Prosecutor Reece Busy Preparing For Grand Jury—Wenger Candidate For Wardenship.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 15.—With hardly a word of adieu to any one, and never a friend to see him off, Allan N. Armstrong, the suspected warden of the state penitentiary, has left the prison, when and under what circumstances to enter it again, who knows. No matter in what straits he might return to it, he could hardly figure in a more pathetic picture than his departure presented.

Armstrong manifested in his every action and word the emotion which probably welled up in him at the departure, and never at any time since the first of the series of disclosures at the prison did he appear so near the verge of breaking down. Noticeably, it took all the strength he could summon to keep him up. He delayed his actual leave taking until the very last minute. Then he walked quickly up to Acting Warden Wenger and said, "John, I guess we'll be going now."

Rides in Prison Carriage.

"All right, Mr. Armstrong," said Wenger. "It's a bad day out, blowing and sleeting hard, and I wish you'd make use of the carriage. Mrs. Armstrong and your daughter would hardly be able to walk to the station this morning, and the cars are sure to be cold."

Armstrong turned away and bowed, unable to trust himself to a word of thanks. He got into his overcoat and, with his wife and daughter on either arm, walked down the staircase from the residence to the administrative offices. There he looked about him as if in farewell to the place where he ruled for four years.

Finally the carriage drove up, and Armstrong helped his wife and daughter in. Then he extended his hand to Wenger, looked at his former deputy in silence for a moment and said simply, "Good-bye, John, good-bye." Then he pulled his hat more firmly onto his head, got into the carriage and was whirled away down the street.

At the station the Armstrongs were just in time to catch the train for Niles, whence they went to Mrs. Morgan's home in South Bend, Ind.

Finds New Leads.

Prosecutor Reece, who will endeavor on Tuesday to have Armstrong bound over on the charge of soliciting and accepting a bribe from General Fred W. Green of Ionia, is very busy. His time is taken up from morning to night on the prison scandal. It is not thought he will do much more than introduce in Tuesday's hearing before Justice Russell the evidence he thinks sufficient to warrant holding Armstrong for trial. He is continually finding new leads on which to gather evidence for presentation to the grand jury.

One of the latest stories that has come to his ears is of a character which makes it certain that bills and invoices by some dealers in supplies bought for the prison will be scrutinized by the grand jury.

Wenger, who is now serving as temporary warden, is a candidate for the wardenship, which will be at the disposal of the prison board as soon as Armstrong's resignation is tendered. He rests his claim to it on the fact that he has been six years in the institution and has advanced through every grade of the service from carrying a lantern in the halls at night to governing the prison as its warden.

Mangled by Train.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 14.—Late at night train hands found the body of S. J. Wallace on the railroad tracks in the Yyoming yards of the Pere Marquette road. Wallace had been employed as brakeman. The presumption is that he was run over by a freight train while wandering about the yards, his body being badly mangled. His home was in Wayne village.

PLUNGES OVER TRESTLE.

Train Falls Thirty-five Feet; One Killed, Six Hurt.

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 15.—A freight train on the Louisiana Railway and Navigation company's line has been wrecked near here, plunging from a trestle for a distance of thirty-five feet to the ground below, killing one and injuring six, four of them perhaps fatally.

When You Buy Oysters Don't Pay For Water

Why should you get a pint of water with every quart of Oysters? Water is cheap—bloats and bleaches the oyster—spoils its natural flavor.

You have never known how good oysters can be unless you have had

"Sealshipt" Oysters

They are shucked into air-tight steel cans and shipped direct from the beds—packed with ice around the container, not in contact with the oysters. You get all solid meats. And how fresh, wholesome, appetizing and deliciously different they are!

Ask for "Sealshipt Sense," a booklet containing new and attractive ways of preparing oysters.

If your dealer doesn't sell "Sealshipt," here are some who do:

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Carelessness is really laziness under a more polite name.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by all dealers.

The Barrier

By

Rex Beach

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY HARPER & BROTHERS.

This is a tale of Alaska, a bleak land where men and women fight each other and the relentless elements for the precious gold that lurks beneath the icy soil. Here is told a story of wild ambition, of uncontrolled passion, of men who know no law other than that of their own making; a story of a girl whose beauty and purity plunge her into deepest peril; a story of big men, big events, big thoughts and big hopes. Read of Necia, the fascinating heroine, who loves and is loved; of Gale, the man of mystery; of Stark, the killer of men; of Runnion, prince of scoundrels; of "No Creek" Lee, who comes into his own at last; of simple souled, big hearted Poleon Doret; of Lieutenant Burrell, the gallant Kentuckian who carries law and justice into the Yukon wilds and forces desperate men to recognize him as their master.

CHAPTER I.

THE LAST FRONTIER.

MANY men were in debt to the trader at Flambeau, and many counted him as a friend. The latter never reasoned why, except that he had done them favors, and in the north that counts for much. Perhaps they built likewise upon the fact that he was ever the same to all and that in days of plenty or in times of famine his store was open to every man, and all received the same measure. Nor did he raise his prices when the boats were late. They recalled one bleak and blustery autumn when the steamer sank at the Lower Ramparts, taking with her all their winter's food, how he eked out his scanty stock, dealing to each and every one his portion month by month. They remembered well the bitter winter that followed, when the specter of famine haunted their cabins and when for endless periods they cinched their belts and cursed and went hungry to sleep, accepting day by day the rations doled out to them by the grim, gray man at the log store. Some of them had money belts weighted low with gold washed from the bars at Forty Mile, and there were others who had wandered in from the Koyukuk with the first frosts, footsore and dragging, the legs of their skin boots eaten, to the ankle and the taste of dog meat still in their mouths. Broken and dispirited, these had fared as well through that desperate winter as their brothers from up river and received pound for pound of musty flour, strip for strip of rusty bacon, lump for lump of precious sugar. Moreover, the price of no single thing had risen throughout the famine.

He mixed in no man's business. He took and paid his dues unfalteringly. He spoke in a level voice, and he smiled but rarely. He gazed at a stranger once and weighed him carefully; thereafter his eyes sought the distances again, as if in search of some visitor whom he knew or hoped or feared would come.

This day he stood in the door of his post staring up the sunlit river, absorbing the warmth of the arctic afternoon. The Yukon swept down around the great bend beneath the high, cut banks and past the little town, disappearing behind the wooded point below, which masked the upcoming steamers till one heard the sighing labor of their stacks before he saw their smoke.

The sound of shouting caused him to turn his head. Downstream, a thousand yards away, men were raising flagstaff made from the trunk of a slender fir, from which the bark had been stripped, heaving on their tackle as they sang in unison. They stood well out upon the river's bank before a group of well made houses, the peeled timbers of which shone yellow in the sun. He noted the symmetrical arrangement of the buildings, noted the space about them that had been smoothed for a drill ground and from which the stumps had been removed, noted that the men wore suits of blue and noted in particular the figure of an officer commanding them.

The lines about the trader's mouth deepened, and his heavy brows contracted.

"That means the law," he murmured half aloud.

He stood so, meditating somberly, till the fragment of a song hummed lightly by a girl fell pleasantly on his ears, whereupon the shadows vanished from his face, and he turned expectantly, the edges of his teeth showing beneath his mustache, the corners of his eyes wrinkling with pleasure.

The sight was good to him, for the girl approaching down the trail was like some wood sprite, light footed, slender and dark, with twin braids of hair to her waist framing an oval face colored by the wind and sun. She was very beautiful, and a great fever surged up through the old man's veins till he gripped the boards at his side and bit sharply at the pipe between his teeth.

"The salmon berries are ripe," she announced, "and the hills back of the village are pink with them. I took Constantine's squaw with me, and we picked quarts and quarts. I ate them all!"

Her laughter was like the tinkle of silver bells. Every move of her graceful body was unrestrained and flowing, with a hint of Indian freedom about it. Beaded and trimmed like a native princess, her garments manifested an ornature that spoke of savagery, yet they were neatly cut and held to the pattern of the whites.

"Constantine was drunk again last night, and I had to give him a talking to when we came back. Oh, but I laid him out! He's frightened to death of me when I'm angry."

She furrowed her brow in a scowl—the daintiest, most ridiculous puckef of a brow that ever man saw—and drew her red lips into an angry pout as she recounted her temperance talk till the trader broke in, his voice very soft, his gray blue eyes as tender as those of a woman:

"It's good to have you home again, Necia. The old sun don't shine as bright when you're away, and when it rains it seems like the moss and the grass and the little trees was crying for you. I reckon everything weeps when you're gone, girl, everything except your old dad, and sometimes he feels like he'd have to bust out and join the rest of them."

"I missed you dreadfully, daddy," she said. "It seemed as if those days at the mission would never end. Father Barnum and the others were very kind, and I studied hard, but there wasn't any fun in things without you."

"I reckon you know as much as a priest now, don't you?"

"Oh, lots more," she said gravely. "You see, I am a woman."

He nodded reflectively. "So you are! I keep forgetting that."

Their faces were set toward the west, where the low sun hung over a ragged range of hills topped with everlasting white. Beyond were other ranges thrust skyward in a magnificent confusion, while still to the farther side lay the purple valley of the Koyukuk, a valley that called insistently to restless men, welcoming them in the spring and sending them back in the late summer tired and haggard with the hunger of the north.

"When will Poleon get back, do you suppose?"

"Most any day now, unless the Dawson dance halls are too much for him. It won't take him long to sell our skins if what I hear is true."

"What is that?"

"About these Cheechakos. They say there are thousands of tenderfeet up there and more coming in every day."

Gale turned his eyes downstream to the barracks and noted that the long flagstaff had at last been erected. Even as he looked he saw a bundle mounting toward its tip and then beheld the stars and stripes flutter out in the air, while the men below cheered noisily. It was some time before he answered.

"Poleon Doret is like the rest of us men up here in the north. We have taken care of ourselves so far, and I guess we're able to keep it up without the help of a smooth faced Yankee kid for guardian."

"Lieutenant Burrell isn't a Yankee," said Necia. "He is a Blue Grass man. He comes from Kentucky."

Her father grunted contemptuously. "I might have known it. A regular male man with any ginger in him would shed his coat and go to work.

The sound of shouting caused him to turn his head.

sumed in an altered tone:

"I reckon Poleon will bring you something pretty from Dawson, eh?"

"He has never failed to bring me presents, no matter where he came from. Dear old Poleon!" She smiled tenderly. "Do you remember that first day when he drifted, singing, into sight around the bend up yonder? He had paddled his birch bark from the Chandelar without a thing to eat. Hunger and hardship only made him the happier, and the closer he drew his belt the louder he sang."

"He was bound for his 'new country.'"

"Yes; he didn't know where it lay, but the fret for travel was on him, and so he drifted and sang, as he had drifted and sung from the foot of Lake Le Barge."

"That was four years ago," mused Gale, "and he never found his 'new country,' did he?"

"No; we tied him down and choked it out of him," Necia laughed. "Dear, funny old Poleon! He loves me like a brother."

The man opened his lips, then closed them, as if on second thought, and rose to his feet, for, coming toward them up the trail from the barracks he beheld a trim, blue coated figure. He peered at the approaching officer a moment, set his jaw more firmly and disappeared into the store.

"Well, we have raised our flagstaff," said the lieutenant as he took a seat below Necia. "It's like getting settled to keep house."

"Are you lazy?" inquired the girl.

"I dare say I am," he admitted. "I've never had time to find out. Why?"

"Are you going to boss our people around?" she continued, bent on her own investigation.

"No. Not as long as they behave. In fact, I hardly know what I am to do. Maybe you can tell me." His smile was peculiarly frank and winning. "You see, it's my first command, and my instructions, although comprehensive, are rather vague. I am supposed to see that mining rights are observed, to take any criminals who kindly offer themselves up to be arrested and to instead of wearing his clothes buttoned up all day. It don't take much 'savvy' to run a handful of thirteen dollar a month soldiers." Necia stirred a bit restlessly, and the trader continued: "It ain't man's work; it's—loafing. If he tries to boss us he'll get quite a surprise."

"He won't try to boss you. He has been sent here to build a military post and to protect the miners in their own self government. He won't take any part in their affairs as long as they are conducted peaceably."

The old man grunted again, with added contempt, while his daughter continued:

"This rush to the upper country has brought in all sorts of people, good, bad—and worse, and the soldiers have been sent to prevent trouble and to hold things steady till the law can be established. The Canadian mounted police are sending all their worst characters down river, and our soldiers have been scattered among the American camps for our protection. I think it's fine."

"Where did you learn all this?"

"Lieutenant Burrell told me," she replied, at which her father regarded her keenly. She could not see the curious look in his eyes, nor did she turn when, a moment later, he resort of handle things that are too tough for the miners themselves."

Lieutenant Burrell.

"I don't believe you will be very popular with our people," Necia announced meditatively.

"Now that I think it over," he continued, "I'd rather have you like me than have the men do so."

"Of course," she nodded. "They do anything I want them to—all but father, and"—

"It isn't that," he interrupted quickly. "It is because you are the only woman of the place, because you are such a surprise. To think that in the heart of this desolation I should find a girl like—like you, like the girls I know at home."

"Am I like other girls?" she inquired eagerly. "I have often wondered."

"You are, and you are not. You are surprisingly conventional for these surroundings and yet unconventionally surprising—for any place. Who are you? Where did you come from? How did you get here?"

"I am just what you see. I came from the States, and I was carried. That is all I can remember."

"Then you haven't lived here always?"

"Oh, dear, no! We came here while I was very little, but of late I have been away at school."

"Some seminary, eh?"

At this she laughed aloud. "Hardly that, either. I've been at the mission. Father Barnum has been teaching me for five years. I came up river a day ahead of you."

To be continued.

"Almost every man," says a Baltimore specialist, "learns sooner or later to think of his doctor as one of his best friends, but this fact does not hinder the world from laughing at the profession.

"'How is our patient this morning?' asked a physician, a fellow graduate of mine, of a patient's brother.

"'Oh, he's much worse,' came from the other in a tone of dejection. 'He's been delirious for several hours. At 3 o'clock he said, "What an old woman that doctor of mine is!" and he hasn't made a rational remark since.'"—Lippincott's.

A Rising Fall.

A certain member of the British government who was admittedly a great failure was being discussed by two of his colleagues.

"And now," concluded one, "they want to make him a peer!"

"No," said the other, with greater acumen; "they want to make him disappear."

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, sent nerveward, excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use the well

Mrs. Harriett Snyder Writes Entertainingly of

DR. WILLIAM BALDWIN,

One of the early settlers of Tecumseh.

Quite recently the readers of "The Herald" were given a pen sketch by Mrs. E. B. Wood of the early life of Michael A. Patterson, M. D., who was the first regular physician to make Tecumseh a permanent home.

He had only been in the village a few years, when William Baldwin, M. D. came to try his fortune in the same town.

William Baldwin was the eldest child of Elnathan, and Esther Bissell Baldwin.

He was born in Windsor, Conn., Feb. 24, 1799. He was of English ancestry. His ancestors came from Aston Clinton (near Aylesburg) Buckinghamshire England, and settled at Milford, Conn. in 1638.

His parents resided at Agawam, Mass. and during his early childhood were in prosperous circumstances. His father was the proprietor of a large Tannery, and the owner of a fine Colonial residence.

When William Baldwin was about twelve years old, his father drove from Agawam to Hartford on business. When returning home, on going down a steep hill, the dash board of his wagon gave way, and he was thrown out, and instantly killed.

His mother, concluding that the care of four children, and the management of a large business was too much of an undertaking for her to accomplish alone, very soon married her brother-in-law, Col. Benjamin Olds of Westfield, Mass.

This marriage proved to be a failure, for Col. Olds was a poor financier, and soon wasted a fine property. Thus William was thrown upon his own resources quite early in life.

He was educated in Springfield, Mass.

After leaving school, he entered the home of Howard Alden, M. D. at Suffield, Conn. as a medical student, and attended medical lectures at Yale.

In 1820, the young physician left his eastern home for the "Western Reserve," and the little town of Strongsville, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio, where his step-brother, and step-sister had preceeded him. He remained there a year, then returned to his former home and married Miss Delia Alden at Suffield, Hartford Co., Conn., October 16, 1822.

The young couple then journed westward to Strongsville, where they commenced housekeeping in part of the unfinished frame Tavern owned by John Stoughton Strong, Sr.

The next year Dr. Baldwin built, and completed the first entirely finished frame house in that place, which is situated fourteen miles south of Cleveland, Ohio.

Dr. Baldwin never lived in a log house like so many people of his day, neither was he born in one.

He remained in Strongsville fourteen years, and experienced many hardships incidental to the life of a genuine pioneer physician. From there he moved to Bliesfield, Michigan where the family occupied part of the house with William Bliss, the founder of that town.

Through the influence of the late Judge Stillman Blanchard, Dr. and Mrs. Baldwin with their two little sons William, and Sidney came to Tecumseh July 4th, 1836. Their only daughter, Delia, was living with her cousin Mrs. H. J. Olcott at Cherry Valley, Otsego Co., N. Y., thus was not an inmate of their first Tecumseh home, which is called the Hiram Snell homestead. Their next home was on the corner of Logan, and Oneida streets, which was afterwards burned.

Dr. Baldwin then bought the place on the corner of Logan and Maumee, which consisted of half the block, and at that time was in the main part of the village. The house was small, but he soon improved, and built additions to the house until it was about the size of the present structure.

Dr. Baldwin was very proud of his neat, pretty home, which was certainly as good, if not better than the majority of residences at that period.

His large, splendid orchard, and fine garden were a source of great pleasure to him. He procured many fine varieties of fruit from the eastern states and from Ohio, and became an expert fruit grower.

He was also a lover of fine horses, and owned several fast ones. His elegant "Black Frank" was the admiration of the community, celebrated for his beauty and wonderful intelligence.

In some respects Dr. Baldwin was like Dr. Patterson, "for he had rather hear others, than be heard himself," thus never addressed public assemblies. He was a fine singer in his youth and was delighted with both vocal and instrumental music, of which his home was always the center for the entire village.

He was a very social person, and a most genial host, to the many relatives and friends from abroad, and at home who often frequented the old homestead.

Dr. Baldwin was thoroughly devoted to his profession, going whenever, and wherever duty called, through storms, and through sunshine, in the brightness of the day, and the blackness of the night, through heat, and through cold, often over roads that were nearly impassable. He had a very large country practice, and a very good one in the village.

He was very sympathetic with his patients, and would care for the poor among them the same as for those in more comfortable circumstances, and often with little, if any remuneration.

He was a very strong Republican, and a great admirer of President Lincoln. He was also greatly interested in the events of the "Civil War."

Though instructed from infancy in the Baptist creed, he became a Presbyterian in later years.

He joined the first Temperance organization in this country, "The Washingtonians," and was always greatly opposed to the use of intoxicants.

He was never addicted to the use of tobacco in any form, but considered it a most injurious habit, delivering many fireside lectures to his sons and son-in-law regarding the pernicious habit of smoking cigars.

He was a man above medium height, with dark brown hair, touched with silvery tints, blue eyes, a fine forehead, and strongly marked features. He was correct in his language, never coarse, or profane.

One night in 1863, when driving "Black Frank" home from Newbergh, the wheel of his sulky hit some obstruction in the road, and he was thrown out, and badly injured. "Black Frank" went a short distance driverless, when he suddenly appeared to realize the situation, turned of his own accord, and went back to where Dr. Baldwin was, and waited until he could regain his seat in the sulky, then turned, and took him home.

This accident was the cause of Dr. Baldwin's death. It produced a Tumor, which was a year in developing, and weighed twelve pounds.

He died at the Baldwin homestead Dec. 5, 1864, aged 65 years.

The funeral was at the house, and attended by Rev. S. E. Wishard, whose remarks were heard by a large concourse of people from the text, "Our Fathers! Where are They?"

Samuel Catlin, M. D. is the only physician now living in Tecumseh, who was a practitioner here at the time of Dr. Baldwin's death forty-five years ago.

A Master of the Art of News-letter Writing.

William E. Curtis, the famous correspondent of The Chicago Record-Herald, probably has a more enviable position and is read by more men and women daily than any other newspaper writer in the United States. He can go anywhere in the world and write on any live topic that he chooses, so long as he interests his hundreds of thousands of readers. He has traveled several times around the world and written entertainingly about almost every country under the sun.

Every day in the year, without vacation or intermission, Mr. Curtis has a two column letter in The Record-Herald. The remarkable thing about these letters is their power to interest all classes of readers. Women read them with the same enjoyment as men. Whether the subject be politics, travels, a new kink in the Monroe doctrine, an interview with the newest money king or the personal history of an Egyptian mummy, the story is always told with a limpid simplicity and an unfailing sense of interest that keeps one reading to the end. No other correspondent now living can match the record of Mr. Curtis as a popular purveyor of timely and useful information. Whether he writes from his home in Washington or from the wilds of Mexico, from the gay streets of Paris or some remote temple in India, he always has something fresh and entertaining to tell.

Mr. Curtis began his newspaper career in Chicago as a reporter in 1872, speedily became a managing editor, resigned to serve as secretary of a government commission sent to South America, and fulfilled his duties so brilliantly there that Secretary James G. Blaine placed him at the head of the new bureau of American republics. He is almost as widely known in South America and Europe as in the United States. At the world's fair in Chicago he was the executive head of the Latin-American department. He is a member of almost every learned society in Washington and many in Europe.

Nobody outside of The Record Herald office knows under what flag Mr. Curtis will next be hanging up his hat, but everybody knows that, whether it be in Patagonia or Kamchatka, he will find something interesting to write about. Merely to read his daily news letters is a liberal education. He does his full share toward making The Chicago Record-Herald the best home newspaper in the West.

The Secret Of Long Life.

A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. But long ago millions of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolongs life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, rebuilds wasted nerve cells, imparts life and tone to the entire system. Its a godsend to weak, sick and debilitated people. "Kidney trouble had blighted my life for months," writes W. M. Sherman of Cushing, Me., "but Electric Bitters cured me entirely." Only 50c. at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store.

FOR AGED PEOPLE

Old Folks Should be Careful in Their Selection of Regulative Medicine.

With advanced age comes inactive bowel movement and sluggish liver. Nature is unable to perform her proper functions and requires assistance. Otherwise, there is constant suffering from constipation and its attendant evils. Old folks should never use physic that is harsh and irritating.

We have a safe, dependable and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constitution or other bowel disorder. We are so certain that it will cure these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer them with our personal guarantee that they shall cost the user nothing if they fail to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies have a soothing, healing, strengthening, tonic and regulative action upon the dry, relax muscular coat of the bowel. They produce a natural, successive contraction and relaxation of the muscular fibres of the bowel walls, generating a wave-like motion which forces their contents onward and outward; thus simulating nature in perfect bowel movement. They also remove all irritation, dryness, soreness and weakness. They tone up and strengthen the nerves and muscles and restore the bowels and associate organs to more vigorous and healthy activity. They may be taken at any time without inconvenience, do not cause any griping, nausea, diarrhea, excessive looseness, flatulence or other disagreeable effect. Try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee. 36 tablets 25c, and 12 tablets 10c. B. J. Pulver, the druggist.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL

Beer's Post and Ladies Auxiliary Gave an Excellent Program.

EVERY GRADE IN THE SCHOOLS CELEBRATED LINCOLN'S ANNIVERSARY.

Prof. C. H. VanTyne spoke before a large gathering in Ann Arbor.

The rooms of the Tecumseh Beer's Post were filled to the utmost last Friday evening, with friends of both the Beer's Post and the Ladies Auxiliary, who gathered to listen to the excellent Lincoln program that had been prepared by the members of the Post and Auxiliary. The hall was handsomely trimmed with bunting and flags.

John D. Shull gave an excellent address upon the life of Abraham Lincoln and there were several recitations by the members that were also good.

W. S Dickenson rendered two solos, and Henry Stevens sang one song, which he had composed himself. All were pleasingly rendered.

Mr. Stevens read the following selection from Margaret E Sangster, which is perhaps the most beautiful picture ever portrayed by any one,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.
February 12, 1809—1909.

Child of the boundless prairie,
Son of the virgin soil,
Heir to the bearing of burdens,
Brother to them that toil;
God and Nature together shaped him
To lead in the van,
In the streets of her wildest weather,
When the Nation needed a Man.

Eyes of a smouldering fire,
Heart of a lion at bay,
Patience to plan for tomorrow,
Valor to serve for today,
Mournful and mirthful and tender,
Quick as a flash with a jest,
Hiding with gibe and great laughter,
The ache that was dull in his breast!

Met were the Man and the Hour—
Man who was strong for the shock,—
Fierce were the lightnings unleashed,
In the midst, he stood fast as a rock.
Comrade he was, and commander,
He, who was meant for the time,
Iron in council and action,
Simple, aloof and sublime.

Swift slip the years from their tether,
Centuries pass like a breath,
Only some lives are immortal,
Challenging darkness and death.
Hewn from the stuff of the martyrs,
Write in the star-dust his name,
Glowing, untarnished, transcendent,
High on the records of Fame.

The program closed with the song, God Be With You Till We Meet Again and a prayer by Rev. Young.

A social hour was spent with the comrades and their wives.

The High school exercises for the Lincoln memorial were held at the same hour at 8:30 in the morning until they were finished.

In the afternoon the pupils of the high school meet in the main room, spending 20 minutes singing partriotic songs.

The programs were rendered in the various grades at different hours of the day.

PROF. C. H. VANTYNE

C. H. VanTyne, professor of American history at the University of Michigan, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence VanTyne of Tecumseh, gave an address before a large audience last Sunday evening, at the Methodist church in Ann Arbor, upon Abraham Lincoln, what made him a great man.

In part, Mr. VanTyne said: "There were, I think, three qualities which made Lincoln unique among all heroes of profane history. The first and greatest was SYMPATHY, abounding, all embracing sympathy with every class of his fellow men. The second was PATIENCE which, in him, was a sort of devotion. Finally he possessed a most unusual GOOD SENCE, aided in a marked degree by his HUMOR. These were homely traits, seemingly quite too modest to make of their possessor the leader of a mighty nation in the moment of meeting the greatest crisis in its history."

Mrs William E. Caldwell of 618 Church Street, Ann Arbor, was one of the 500 singers, who participated in the funeral services of Abraham Lincoln. As the casket was borne from the state house to the hearse, the 500 voices rose in song.

The words were those so often used at masonic funerals, beginning, "Children of the Heavenly King, As Ye Journey Sweetly Sing," and it was sung to the tune of Pleyel's hymn. Mrs. Caldwell is the widow of the late Rev. William E Caldwell and mother of Dr. E B. Caldwell.

Do You Hear Well?

The Stolz Electrophone—A New, Scientific and Practical Invention for Those Who Are Deaf or Partially Deaf—May Now Be Tested Free at Our Store

Deaf or partially deaf people may now make a Free trial of the Stolz Electrophone. This is unusually important news for the deaf, for by this plan the final selection of the one completely satisfactory hearing aid is made easy and inexpensive for everyone. This new invention (U.S. Patent No. 893,876) renders unnecessary such clumsy, unsightly and frequently harmful devices as trumpets, horns, tubes, ear drums, fans, etc. It is a tiny electric telephone that fits on the ear, and which, the instant it is applied, magnifies the sound waves in such manner as to cause an astonishing increase in the clearness of all sounds. It overcomes the buzzing and roaring ear noises, and also so constantly and electrically exercises the vital parts of the ear (not, usually, the unheard, unaided hearing itself) is gradually restored.

Are You Sick?

Much sickness is due to a weak nervous system. Yours may be. If it is, you cannot get well until you restore nerve strength Your nervous system is nature's power house; the organs of your body get their power from it. If the power is not there, the action of the organs is weak, and disease (sickness) follows. Dr. Miles' Nervine cures the sick because it soothes the irritated and tired nerves and gives the system a chance to recuperate. Try it, and see if you do not quickly feel its beneficial effect.

"I was given up to die by a leading doctor. Got one of Dr. Miles books and found that Dr. Miles' Nervine fit my case. From the very first dose I took I got better. I am better now than I have been for years, and do all my own work on the farm. That's what Dr. Miles' Nervine has done for me, and I am glad to recommend it to others."

LOOKING FOR OLD MAN.

Believed He Perished on Road to the Poor House.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 11.—That D. C. Phelps, aged eighty-eight, half blind and crippled with rheumatism, perished in a blinding snow storm while trying to make his way to the Ingham county poor farm is the belief of Superintendent of Poor J. M. Smith and Superintendent Skinner of the poor farm.

After having struggled in vain to support himself by selli shoestrings on the streets of Lansing, the old man called on Superintendent Smith and asked for assistance. Mr. Smith offered to furnish him transportation to the poor farm, but he would accept only a permit to enter.

"My legs are good, and I can walk. Just write the order," he said.

With half a dollar given him by Superintendent Smith and the written permit for admittance to the county house, he set out for the ten mile walk. Since then he has not been seen.

The poor authorities are making inquiries along the road

To Cure Wrinkles.

"Look at a paralytic if you think wrinkles incurable," said a beauty doctor. "On the side he is paralyzed all his wrinkles disappear. Though he be sixty or seventy, his profile on that side is the profile of a youth. So the paralytic shows us how to cure our wrinkles—namely, by keeping our facial muscles still. If we keep our faces in perfect repose, never laughing when the comedian sings his best song, never weeping when wife or sweetheart dies, we will have no wrinkles whatever. The skin wouldn't wrinkle if it were not exposed. The skin of the body is much disturbed by action of the muscles underneath—as at the knee, for instance—yet this unexposed skin never wrinkles. Not being exposed to the bad influence of sun and wind, it has not lost the oil and the elasticity of childhood. And that's where I come in with my creams and unguents and massages."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Taming Patti.

Patti was to sing on a certain date at Bucharest, but at the last moment she declined to leave Vienna. It was too cold; snow everywhere; she would not risk catching her death of cold. M. Schurmann, the impresario, was in despair until a brilliant inspiration came to him. Quickly he telegraphed to the advance agent in the Roumanian capital: "At whatever cost Patti must receive an ovation at Bucharest station from the Italian aristocracy Send me by return the following wire: 'The members of the Italian and Roumanian nobility are preparing to give Mme. Patti a magnificent reception. The ministry will be represented. Processions, torches and bands. Telegraph the hour of arrival.'" The advance agent carried out this instruction, and when the telegram dictated to him over the wires arrived in Vienna it was handed to Patti, with the desired effect. "How charming!" she murmured. "What time do we start?"

His Wonderful Invention.

Australia, as is well known, is infested with rabbits, a most destructive and multitudinous pest. Not long ago a man invented the following plan:

You go out into the field from which the rabbits are to be removed. You saw down a tree, and on the slant of the stump you paint a black spot. Then you keep very quiet, so that the rabbits will come back from their burrows and feed as usual. When a large enough number has collected you clap your hands sharply. The effect will be electric. The rabbits will jump in haste for their burrows. At least one is sure to mistake the black spot for his hole and make for it. Invariably he will dash his brains out. This process, repeated often enough, is warranted to exterminate the rabbit forever.

The reports do not say whether there are any rabbits left in Australia.

Twin Place.

One day an old gentleman who found the Java village at the World's fair very absorbing at length confided in a young man standing near. "It's powerful nice to watch," he said, "but I may say I should be better on't if I was a trifle better posted. My jography's a leetle rusty, and it's truth and fact that I don't jestly know where Java is. Now, where is it?"

"Oh," said the young man, with the assured quiet of one who knows, "just a little way from Mocha!"—Argonaut.

Changeable Names.

Tom—Belle is a strange girl. She doesn't know the names of some of her best friends. Maud—That's nothing. Why, I don't even know what my own will be a year from now.—Boston Transcript.

The Process.

"You are a pretty sharp boy, Tommy."

"Well, I ought to be. Pa takes me out in the wood shed and straps me three or four times a week."—Harper's Weekly.

Liver Trouble Remedy Free

Any intelligent person can be his own doctor in the ordinary case of liver trouble, for the symptoms cannot be mistaken. If the white of the eye becomes yellowish, if the skin becomes sallow, if pimples and blotches appear, if the bowels do not move, if you have sick headache, if you are bilious, you may be sure that your liver is torpid or inactive.

The quickest and surest remedy yet found for the cure of liver trouble or any of its symptoms is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great herb laxative compound. This wonderful remedy is not only a laxative, but a tonic as well. It will start the flow of gastric juice, thereby soon enabling the liver to do its work naturally. A bottle of this great liver remedy can be bought of any druggist for 50 cents or $1, and in many cases a single bottle has cured a chronic case.

For example, John W. Lee, 513 S. Pennsylvania ave., Indianapolis, Ind., had a stubborn and very long-standing case of liver trouble, with pimples, blotches, jaundice, etc., and it cured him. Mrs. B. Pinchum, Jackson, Ky., says the same of it. Thousands of families keep it in the house against just such an emergency, as you can never tell when some member of the family will need a good laxative.

In order to have you or any other sufferer from the liver make a test of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin without personal expense, Dr. Caldwell will send you a free test bottle if you will send your name and address. The sample will show you how pleasant it is to take, how gently it works. It will start you on the cure of your trouble and convince you that you have found a cure. That is the object of the sample, and the doctor urges you to send for it today.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

It is understood that this means the practical retirement of Admiral Sir Charles Beresford.

Nevada Senator Believes They Should Be Segregated.

Reno, Nev., Feb. 11.—Declaring that he agreed with those Californians who desired segregation of Japanese in schools, and that a state had the right to enact legislation enabling school trustees to provide for such segregation, Senator Nixon has sent the following interview to the Reno Gazette from Washington:

"There is no doubt that the sentiment of Nevada is almost unanimous in excluding the Japanese from our commonwealth, because, as is well known, they have in no manner assisted in developing our industries, but, on the other hand, every dollar earned by them finds its way to the coffers of the land of their nativity.

"I agree," said the senator, "with the citizens of the Pacific coast upon the entire subject, and particularly with the people of California upon the subject of segregated schools."

FAMILY SCRAP BEFORE ARMY RETIRING BOARD

Colonel Tucker's Case Up For Consideration Today.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—The meeting of the army retiring board which began in this city today will in all liklihood determine the fate of Colonel William F. Tucker, whose troubles with his wife have engaged the attention of army gossips for a long time. Colonel Tucker occupies a responsible post in the army, that of paymaster general of the department of the lakes. He is at odds with his wife, the daughter of the late General John A. Logan, who was the Republican candidate for vice president in 1884. Friends of Colonel Tucker declare that Mrs. Logan is the chief cause of his troubles and that the case is one of "too much mother-in-law."

Secretary of War Wright has given permission for Mrs. Tucker to appear with her attorney before the army retiring board. This unusual action is expected to create a sensation.

Colonel Tucker, who has been an invalid for years, is seeking retirement with the rank of colonel and the retired pay of that rank. Mrs. Logan and the colonel's wife declare his conduct has been such that he is not entitled to honorable retirement, and they are seeking his summary dismissal from the army. Charges of misconduct in the Philippines made against Colonel Tucker two years ago by his female relatives were not sustained by the army authorities, and Colonel Tucker retaliated with a suit for divorce. In October of last year Mrs. Tucker had her husband arrested in Chicago on a charge of abandonment, but the proceedings were dropped.

Mr. and Mrs. Frohman were married in November, 1903. Mr. Frohman in his statement announces that Mrs. Frohman has retired permanently from the profession. He adds:

"There is no scandal in this disagreement—no man or woman is the cause of it. In fact the arrangement is far more amicable than hostile on either part."

Eat What

You want of the food you need Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively know what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

RAILROAD COMMISSION UPHELD BY COURT.

Excess Baggage Rate Injunction Only Good to March 1.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 18.—The first battle in court over the question whether the excess baggage rate fixed by the state railroad commission is legal and binding on the railroads resulted in a substantial victory for the commission when Judge Murphy filed a written opinion last night in which he refuses to sustain the temporary injunction except until March 1, and that time is allowed only to give the roads time to make out a schedule under the rates as fixed by the commission.

The new rate would have gone into effect at midnight last night and would have found the roads wholly unprepared to enforce it had the step not been taken.

MAY IMPEACH FATHER.

Swears Son Was Not Person Who Shot Him.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 18.—"I can swear positively that it was not my son Floyd who fired the shot," said William Huller in circuit court here at the trial of his son, Floyd Butler, who is charged with attempted murder.

William Huller was shot from the shadow of his barn on his farm near Climax the night of April 9 by someone having a thorough knowledge of the place. Two shots were fired, the second taking effect in his arm. The following day his son, Floyd, was placed under arrest as he was driving home to visit his father.

William Huller was the first witness called. Preliminary steps looking towards the impeachment of the elder Huller's testimony were taken by Prosecutor Cavanagh, as the victim's statements were at a variance with the facts as related by the county officials in justice court hearing.

MEXICO AND CANADA JOIN US

Movement to Save American Resources Begun Today.

MEETING IN WASHINGTON.

President Welcomes Foreign Delegates in Address, Declaring Importance of Joint Efforts to Save Wealth of Continent For Future Generations—Conference Will Last Three Days.

Washington, Feb. 18.—Union of the United States, the Dominion of Canada and the republic of Mexico in the movement to conserve the natural resources of the continent of North America is the purpose of the joint conservation commission which began its sessions at the state department in this city this morning. Taking part in the conference are delegates from the two neighboring countries, the national conservation commission of the United States which recently reported to President Roosevelt and representatives of the state department.

The Hon. Sydney Fisher, minister of agriculture in the Dominion cabinet, is the leading Canadian representative. The chairman of the Mexican delegation is the Hon. Romulo Escobar, former minister of agriculture of Mexico.

The foreign delegates to the conference were received at the White House by the president, who expressed his pleasure at the acceptance by Canada and Mexico of his invitation to the joint conference. He dwelt on the importance of the work of conservation, declaring that it transcended the boundaries of the three countries and depended on their co-operation. He called attention to the report of the United States commission and asserted that further efforts were needed to make the work already accomplished of benefit to the nation. He asked the foreign delegates to join with this country's commission in the formulation of a plan whereby the natural resources of the continent in lands, waters, forests and minerals may be wisely conserved for the benefit of future generations.

Three Days' Conference.

It is expected that the sessions of the conference will last three days. While in this city the Canadian and Mexican delegates will be the recipients of numerous social attentions, entertainments having been planned in their honor by their own countrymen and by many of the high officials of the United States government.

President Diaz of Mexico, Earl Grey, the governor general of Canada, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the premier of the Dominion, are greatly interested in the work of the conference and have written to President Roosevelt expressing their interest.

The conference is the outgrowth of the two conservation conferences held in Washington in which the governors of the states and territories were the principal conferees. At the second conference, in which, on Dec. 8, President Roosevelt and President Elect Taft participated, representatives of the Canadian government were present, and they expressed interest in the conservation movement.

Out of that and the general interest the people of the United States are showing in the subject grew the idea of a North American conference to consider, in the words of the president, "mutual interests involved in the conservation of natural resources and to deliberet upon the practicability of preparing a general plan adapted to promote the welfare of the nations concerned."

Gifford Pinchot, chairman of the conservation commission, was sent by President Roosevelt to Ottawa and the City of Mexico to deliver in person invitations to the conference.

ANGELL RESIGNS.

Veteran Head of U. of M. Will Be Made Chancellor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 18.—President Angell of the university has handed in his resignation to the board of regents. The resignation was accepted, and the regents immediately appointed Dr. Angell as chancellor of the university, to become such when his resignation takes effect at the end of the year.

His duties as chancellor will be such as the then president of the university shall designate. Dr. Angell is to have a salary of $4,000 and the free use of his present residence.

Several names were presented in connection with the presidency, but the board members stated that no one of these was considered seriously. Prof. J. W. Jenks of Cornell university was one of the prospectives discussed.

Upon the motion of Regent Fletcher a committee of four was appointed to consider the proposition of a successor.

CHICAGO POLICE ARE MYSTIFIED.

Young Woman Found in Hotel Tied to Bathtub.

HAD BEEN CRUELLY TREATED.

Also Believed She Had Been Given Poison—She Had Previously Thrown Over Transom Letter to Be Mailed to Friend, Appealing For Aid—Incoherent Story From Victim.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—A mysterious case that has put the police at sea has developed here. The unconscious form of Miss Ella Gingles was found lashed to the supports of a bath tub in the Wellington hotel, a hostlery in the heart of the city. Whether she was the victim of a plot, as she incoherently alleged in her few conscious moments, or chose fantastic means to retaliate on a woman whom she believed to have been her enemy is the question that the police have set about to solve.

The girl's face showed cuts and bruises, and it was later determined that she had been mistreated. She was also apparently suffering of laudanum poisoning. A two ounce bottle which had contained laudanum was found in the room and near it an empty claret bottle. A towel was tied tightly under the girl's jaw, and a wet cloth was found stuffed in her mouth. Her clothes, including her outer wraps, were found in a corner of the room.

The senseless girl was removed to a bedroom, and restoratives were administered by Dr. Watson, the house physician, but she recovered only sufficiently to babble hysterically: "Don't let her come nearer. Don't let her make me drink any more, it will kill me."

Told Strange Tale.

The words "cab" and "pepper" occurred in her talk. Later, after she had lain several hours at the Frances Willard hospital, whither she was taken, she recovered consciousness for several minutes. Chief of Detectives O'Brien was at her bedside, and to him she told a strange tale of having been attacked near her rooming place, 474 LaSalle avenue, by a man and a woman. One of them struck her, and the other threw pepper in her eyes. She was then hustled into a cab. She knew no more, she told the captain, until she regained consciousness in a strange room. She recognized the apartment as belonging to the Wellington hotel, she said, and wrote a note to her friend, Miss Mary Joyce. She threw it over the transom, with a penciled note on the envelope asking "Some bellboy" to mail it. The letter ran:

"Mary: Will be killed at Wellington hotel. Come quick. Ella."

It was this note which set the police on the trail.

Miss Gingles said she recognized the woman who helped seize her as Miss Agnes Barrett, who conducts a lace shop in the Wellington hotel building. A few weeks ago Miss Barrett caused the arrest of Miss Gingles, who is nineteen years old, on a charge of stealing $50 worth of lace from the store, where she was employed.

It is alleged that Miss Gingles has been pressed with the attentions of a certain man, and, having been left alone with the young lady, he may have sought revenge in mistreating her.

The question which mystifies the police most is the unexplainable reason why the girl took the slow method of calling for aid by means of a letter instead of crying out or using the telephone which was in the room.

EXPECTS TO BE DROPPED.

National League Head Is Going to California.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—President Harry Pulliam of the National league has made it plain that he was willing to forego the glory and salary attached to his position as head of the clubs in order to save himself worry.

In substance he declared that he was tired of warfare and after leaving for California next Monday he would not be surprised to hear that he had been deposed by those in the league whom he claims to be antagonistic to his administration as chief executive.

American League Begins April 12.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—The baseball season of the American league will open on April 12, according to the official schedule. On that day New York will play at Washington, and Boston will be at Philadelphia. On April 14 Cleveland will be at St. Louis and Chicago at Detroit. On Decoration day St. Louis will be at Cleveland, Detroit at Chicago, New York at Washington and Boston at Philadelphia.

PRIMARY BILL IS PUT OVER.

Senate Will Not Act on It For Another Week.

SCOT WOULD SAVE RESOURCES,

Detroit Senator Introduces Bill Reserving to State All Land Beneath Which Is Found Gas and Oils—United States Senators Indorsed In Their Action Against Canadian Treaty.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 18.—The senate showed decided backwardness about taking hold of the Dickinson primary bill Wednesday afternoon, and it was put over for a week.

Senator White was the man who made the motion to postpone, and he was supported by all but three or four of the body. Senator Dickinson insisted that the senate "get at" his bill without further delay, but other members saw no reason for haste.

"I agree with the senators that we ought to 'get at' this bill," remarked Senator John MacKay of Detroit, "but I am not ready to 'get at' it just now. I want another week to whet my ax."

Preparing to Fight Bill.

The administration leaders displayed no serious objection to the postponement of the bill. Senator MacKay's rejoinder indicates that the anti-administrationists are preparing to fight the bill.

A bill that if enacted would reserve for the state all rights to minerals and oils discovered beneath land hereafter sold to homesteaders was introduced by Senator Scott of Detroit. He also introduced a bill to prevent the useless waste of gas and oil which is allowed to escape from wells owing to neglect. Both bills came from the state geology department.

Senator John Anhut put up a bill to prohibit the practice of palmistry, clairvoyancy and fortune telling.

The regular appropriation bill for the state tuberculosis sanitorium at Howell, calling for $20,000 to cover current expenses for two years and $68,500 for improvements, was introduced by Senator Shields. Another bill by Senator Shields makes it unlawful for any common carrier, innkeeper or proprietor of an amusement place to deny a soldier or sailor in uniform the enjoyment of those privileges accorded to civilians.

Resolution Passed.

A resolution, drafted by Senator Fowle of the Soo, passed both houses, indorsing the action of Senators William Alden Smith and Julius C. Burrows in insisting on the modifications of the new Canadian treaty so as to retain the present boundary line in the rapids at St. Mary's river.

The senate passed two bills. They were Senator Aitkin's bill requiring persons released by another on probation to make a personal bond for their appearance, and Senator White's bill increasing the salary of the circuit court stenographer in the second judiciary district from $1,800 to $2,000.

The following appointments were recommended by Governor Warner and ratified by the senate: Roger M. Andrews, Menominee, commissioner of mineral statistics; Charles Byrns, Ishpeming, board of trustee, Newberry asylum; Ira Carley, Stephenson, Menominee county, member board of control, Marquette prison.

SENATOR SMITH HOLDS OUT.

Prevents Endorsement of Waterways Treaty This Session.

Washington, Feb. 18.—The persistent opposition of Senator Smith (Mich.) to ratification of the Canadian boundary waterways treaty will carry the convention over until the next session of congress.

From the day the treaty was reported to the senate Mr. Smith has fought it with great determination on the ground that it takes from his state and gives to Canada rights to certain waters of the St. Mary's river which are being used by a Michigan corporation to manufacture power.

Mr. Smith interested a large number of senators in his contention, and the treaty, therefore, was not brought to a vote and will not be at the present session of congress. Senators Nelson and Clapp (Minn.) and Heyburn (Ida.) also have been opposed to the treaty, but have subordinated their opposition to that of Senator Smith.

PRINTER IS KILLED.

Struck by Plunger of Cylinder Printing Press.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 18.—While at work on an old fashioned cylinder press in the shop of the West Michigan Printing company, Clarence Oakwood, sixteen years old, was instantly killed by the plunger of the machine.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Carelessness is really laziness under a more polite name.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by all dealers.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

Mental Hygiene

Work and Methods of the Emmanuel Movement — The Power of Habit — The Unconscious Life Is Nothing Figurative—Hygienic Thoughts.

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.

TWO years ago Dr. Ellwood Worcester and Dr. Samuel McComb, rectors of the Emmanuel church, Boston, opened a clinic for the treatment of those diseases which scientific investigation has shown to be peculiarly susceptible to cure by mental and spiritual means. Wisely conservative, says Horatio W. Dresser, a veteran advocate of mental therapeutics on sane and rational lines, they first won the co-operation of the medical profession, then limited the practice of psychotherapy to the cases of functional and nervous diseases which were pronounced eligible by competent physicians.

The example set by Emmanuel church has been followed elsewhere with marked success, and the new movement has within a short time won a place for itself unequaled by the general mind cure movement in half a century. Its leaders are well trained in physiological psychology, and their work is from first to last carried forward on a scientific basis. The result is not only distinct success within the chosen field, but this field is so plainly staked out that other specialists may the more clearly differentiate their own fields.

While assimilating and building upon psychotherapy, however, the Emmanuel movement is not limited to the psychological field, but through the agencies of the church may legitimately extend the practice with the sick into religion without confusion of categories. Such a term, for example, as "Christian psychology" would involve an unpardonable confusion of ideas. Yet the same work may be first psychological, then Christian. Suggestion is the prime factor in the first of these fields, and emphasis is put upon psychophysical states and subconscious activities, while prayer and other religious agencies are supreme in the religious field. The first field is necessarily limited and human, while the other includes powers upon which no bounds can be placed by the hand of man.

What Habit May Do.

Some one once remarked that as soon as a person found it difficult to do without anything that was the time for him to begin doing without it. Inveterate smokers and the unfortunate victims of alcoholism will appreciate the truth of this, and, says a popular scientist, it is equally applicable to those who have a tendency toward overindulgence of any kind. Even the simplest things of life, the necessary things, may be turned to one's destruction by the formation of an irresistible, reason defying, brain perverting habit. An impressive illustration is to be found in the experiences of a Frenchwoman who was a familiar figure some years ago in the restaurants of Paris, where she was known by the peculiar nickname of "Mme. Coffee and Rolls."

She had long been a sufferer from dyspepsia, and as a last resort her physician ordered her to confine herself for some time to a diet of toast and water. Rebelling at such meager fare, she secretly treated herself to an occasional cup of coffee and a roll or two. This seemed to do her no harm, and she gradually increased the allowance until she was drinking perhaps half a dozen cups of coffee a day. Imperceptibly the habit grew upon her. From half a dozen cups her daily allowance grew to a dozen, then to twenty and finally to thirty.

She passed her days wandering from one restaurant to another, eating nothing but rolls and drinking nothing but coffee and consuming incredible quantities of both. At night if she chanced to wake and found no coffee and rolls in her house she slept no more, but paced feverishly up and down her bedroom, counting the minutes until it would be time for the restaurants to open. She was, in fact, as much the victim of a pernicious habit as the most helpless dipsomaniac or morphine fiend. Her future was blasted, her life wrecked. Even the efforts of the famous Pierre Janet, the eminent French psychologist who has devoted his best energies to the study and treatment of the abnormally minded, failed in her case to effect a cure.

Our Unconscious Life.

Unconsciousness is no bar to livingness. Our conscious actions are a drop in the sea as compared with our unconscious ones. Could we know all the life that is in us by way of circulation, nutrition, breathing, waste and repair we should learn what an infinitesimally small part consciousness plays in our present existence, yet our unconscious life is as truly life as our conscious life, and, though it is unconscious in itself, it emerges into an indirect and vicarious consciousness in our other and conscious self, which exists, but in virtue of our unconscious self.—Samuel Butler.

Hygienic Thoughts.

Let us remember that fear is a disease to be cured.—Angelo Mosso.

Great men are they who see that spiritual is stronger than any material force; that thoughts rule the world.—Emerson.

THE BARRIER

By Rex Beach

She asked no questions of him in return, for she had already learned all there was to know the day before

"Mother needs me now. Goodby."

from a grizzled corporal in whom was the hunger to talk. She had learned of a family of Burrells whose name was known throughout the south and that Meade Burrell came from the Frankfort branch, the branch that had raised the soldiers. His father had fought with Lee, and an uncle was now in the service at Washington. On the mother's side the strain was equally militant, but the Meades had sought the sea. The old soldier had told her much more, of which she understood little—told her of the young man's sister, who had come all the way from Kentucky to see her brother off when he sailed from San Francisco; told her of the lieutenant's many friends in Washington and of his family name and honor. The old soldier, furthermore, had looked at her keenly and added that the Burrells were known as "divils among the weemen."

Resting thus on the steps of Old Man Gale's store, the two talked on till they were disturbed by the sound of shrill voices approaching, at which the man looked up. Coming down the trail from the town were a squaw and two children. At sight of Necia the little ones shouted gleefully and scampered forward, climbing over her like half grown puppies. They were boy and girl, both brown as Siwashes, with eyes like jet beads and hair that was straight and coarse and black. At a glance Burrell knew them for "breeds," and evidently the darker half was closer to the surface now, for they choked, gurgled, stuttered and coughed in their Indian tongue, while Necia answered them likewise. At a word from her they turned and saw him, then, abashed at the strange splendor of his uniform, fell silent, pressing close to her. The squaw also seemed to resent his presence, for after a lowering glance she drew the shawl closer about her head and, leaving the trail, slunk out of sight around the corner of the store.

Burrell looked up at his companion's clear cut, delicate face, at the wind tanned cheeks, against which her long braids lay like the blue black locks of an Egyptian maid, then at her warm, dark eyes, in which was a hint of the golden light of the afternoon sun.

The bitter revolt that had burned in him at the prospect of a long exile died out suddenly. How fresh and flowerlike she looked, and yet the wisdom of her! He spoke impulsively:

"I am glad you are here, Miss Necia. I was glad the moment I saw you, and I have been growing gladder ever since, for I never imagined there would be anybody in this place but men and squaws—men who hate the law and squaws who slink about—like that." He nodded in the direction of the Indian woman's disappearance.

She looked at him quickly.

"Well, what difference would that make?"

"Ugh! Squaws and half breeds!" His tone conveyed in full his utter contempt.

A curiously startled look lay in her eyes, and an inquiring, plaintive wrinkle came between her brows.

"I don't believe you understand," she said. "Lieutenant Burrell, this is my sister, Molly Gale, and this is my little brother, John." Both round eyed elfs made a ducking courtesy and blinked at the soldier, who gained his feet awkwardly, a flush rising into his cheeks.

From the regions at the rear of the store came the voice of an Indian woman calling:

"Necia! Necia!"

"Coming in a moment!" the girl called back; then, turning to the young officer, she added quietly: "Mother needs me now. Goodby."

CHAPTER II.

POLEON DORET'S HAND IS QUICKER THAN HIS TONGUE.

THE trader's house sat back of the post, farther up on the hill. It was a large, sleepy house, sprawling against the sunny side of the slope. It was of great, square hewn timbers, built in the Russian style, the underside of each log hollowed to fit snugly over its fellow underneath, upon which dried moss had previously been spread. Many architects had worked on it as it grew room by room through the years. It had stretched a bit year by year, for the trader's family had been big in the early days when hunters and miners of both breeds came in to trade, to loaf and to swap stories with him. Through the winter days, when the caribou were in the north and the moose were scarce, whole families of natives came and camped there, for Alluna, his squaw, drew to her own blood, and they felt it their due to eat of the bounty of him who ruled them like an overlord.

There are men whose wits are quick as light and whose muscles have been so tempered and hardened by years of exercise that they are like those of a wild animal. Of such was John Gale, but with all his intelligence he was very slow at reading; hence he chose to spend his evenings with his pipe and his thoughts rather than with a book, as lonesome men are supposed to do. He did with little sleep, and many nights he sat alone till Alluna and Necia would be awakened by his heavy step as he went to his bed. That he was a man who could really think and that his thoughts were engrossing no one doubted who saw him sitting enthralled at such a time, for he neither rocked nor talked nor moved a muscle hour after hour, and only his eyes were alive. Tonight the spell was on him again.

Gale's squaw came in, her arrival unannounced except by the scuff of her moccasins, and seated herself against the wall. She did not use a chair, of which there were several, but crouched upon a bearskin, her knees beneath her chin. She sat thus for a long time, while Necia put the little ones to bed. Soon the girl came to say good night.

When she had gone he spoke without moving:

"She'll never marry Poleon Doret."

"Why?" inquired Alluna.

"He ain't her kind."

"Poleon is a good man."

"None better. But she'll marry some—some white man."

"Poleon is white," the squaw declared.

"He is and he ain't. I mean she'll marry an 'outside' man. He ain't good enough, and—well, he ain't her kind." Alluna's grunt of indignation was a sufficient answer to this, but he resumed, jerking his head in the direction of the barracks. "She's been talking a lot with this—this soldier."

"Him good man, too, I guess," said the wife.

"The h—l he is!" cried the trader fiercely. "He don't mean any good to her."

"Him got a woman, eh?" said the other.

"No, no! I reckon he's single all right, but you don't understand. He's Gale's squaw came in.

different from us people. He's—he's"—Gale paused, at a loss for words to convey his meaning. "Well, he ain't the kind that would marry a half breed."

Evidently Alluna read some hidden meaning back of these words, for she spoke quickly, but in her own tongue now, as she was accustomed to do when excited or alarmed.

"Then this thing must cease at once. The risk is too great. Better that you kill him before it is too late."

Gale rose and laid his big hand firmly on her shoulder.

"Don't talk like that. There has been too much blood let already. There's time enough to worry."

He rose; but, instead of going to his room, he strode out of the house and walked northward up the trail. Alluna sat huddled up in the doorway, her shawl drawn close about her head, and waited for him until the late sun dipped down below the distant mountains for the midnight hour, then rolled slanting out again a few points farther north, to begin its long journey anew, but he did not return. At last she crept stiffly indoors, the look of fright staring in her eyes.

About 9 o'clock the next morning a faint and long drawn cry came from the farthest limits of the little camp. An instant later it was echoed closer, and then a dog began to howl. Before its voice had died away another took it up sadly, and within three breaths from up and down the half mile of scanty water front came the cry of "Steam-bo-o-a-t!" Cabin doors opened and men came out, glanced up the stream and echoed the call, while from sleepy nooks and sun warmed roofs wolf dogs arose, yawning and stretching.

Downstream came the faint sighing whoof-whoof of a steamer, and then out from behind the bend she burst. Her cabin deck was lined with passengers, most of whom were bound for the "outside," although still clad in mackinaw and overalls. They all gazed silently at the hundred men of Flambeau, who stared back at them till the gangplank was placed, when they came ashore to stretch their legs. One of them, however, made sufficient noise to make up for the silence of the others. Before the steamer had grounded he appeared among the Siwash deck hands, his head and shoulders towering above them, his white teeth gleaming from a face as dark as theirs, shouting to his friends ashore and pantomiming his delight to the two Gale children, who had come with Alluna to welcome him.

"Who's dose beeg, tall people w'at stan' 'longside of you, Miz Gale?" he called to her; then, shading his eyes elaborately, he cried in a great voice: "Waal, waal, I b'lieve dat's M'sieu Jean an' Mam'selle Mollee! Ba gar! Dey get so beeg w'ile I'm gone I don' know dem no more!"

The youthful Gales wriggled at this delicious flattery and dug their tiny moccasined toes into the sand.

Lieutenant Burrell had come with the others, for the arrival of a steamboat called for the presence of every soul in camp, and, spying Necia in the outskirts of the crowd, he took his place beside her. He had lain awake for hours thinking of her and had fallen asleep with her still in his mind, for the revelation of her blood had come as a shock to him.

He had sprung from a race of slaveholders, from a land where birth and breed are more than any other thing, where a drop of impure blood effects an ineradicable stain. Therefore the thought of this girl's ignoble parentage was so repugnant to him that the more he pondered it the more pitiful it seemed, the more monstrous. Lying awake and thinking of her in the stillness of his quarters, it had seemed a very unfortunate and a very terrible thing. During his morning duties the vision of her had been fresh before him again, and his constant contemplation of the matter had wrought a change in his attitude toward the girl, of which he was uncomfortably conscious and which he was glad to see she did not perceive.

The men were pouring off the boat now, and through the crowd came the tall Frenchman, bearing in the hollow of each arm a child who clasped a bundle to its breast. His eyes grew brighter at sight of Necia, and he broke into a flood of patois. They fairly bombarded each other with quick questions and fragmentary answers till she remembered her companion.

"Oh, I forgot my manners! Lieutenant Burrell, this is Napoleon Doret—our Poleon!" she added, with proud emphasis.

Doret checked his volubility and stared at the soldier, whom he appeared to see for the first time. The little brown people in his arms stared likewise, and it seemed to Burrell that a certain distrust was in each of the three pairs of eyes, only in those of the man there was no shyness. Instead, the Canadian looked him over gravely from head to heel, seeming to note each point of the unfamiliar attire; then he inquired without removing his glance:

"W'ere'bouts you live, eh?"

"I live at the post yonder," said the lieutenant.

"W'at bizness you work at?"

"The lieutenant has been stationed here, foolish," said Necia. "Come up to the store quick and tell me what it's like at Dawson."

In spite of the man's unfriendliness, Burrell watched him with admiration. There were no heels to his tufted fur boots, and yet he stood a good six feet two, as straight as a pine sapling, and it needed no second glance to tell of what metal he was made. His spirit showed in his whole body, in the set of his head and, above all, in his dark, warm face, which glowed with eagerness when he talked, and that was ever—when he was not singing.

"I never see so many people since I lef' Quebec," he was saying. "She's jus' lak beeg city—mus' be t'ree, four t'ousan' people. Every day some more dey come, an' all night dey dance an' sing an' drink w'iskee. Ba gosh, dat's fine place!"

"Are there lots of white women?" asked the girl.

"Yes; two, t'ree hondred. Mos' of dem is work in dance halls. Dere's one fine gal I see, name' Marie Bourgette. I tell you 'bout her by an' by."

"Oh, Poleon, you're in love!" cried Necia.

"No, siree!" he denied. "Dere's none of dem gal look half so purty lak you." He would have said more; but, spying the trader at the entrance of the store, he went to him, straightway launching into the details of their commercial enterprise, which, happily, had been most successful.

Among the merchandise of the post there were for sale a scanty assortment of firearms, cheap shotguns and a Winchester or two, displayed in a rack behind the counter in a manner to attract the eye of such native hunters as might need them, and with the rest hung a pair of Colt's revolvers. One of the new arrivals, who had separated from the others at the front, now called to Gale:

"Are those Colts for sale? Mine was stolen the other day." Evidently he was accustomed to Yukon prices, for he showed no surprise at the figure the trader named, but took the guns and

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.

If it's painful periods with women, same cause.

If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

Bartholomew-Judson.

A very pretty wedding occurred on Wednesday evening of last week at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs A. H. Lewis, when their daughter, Miss Jennie Bartholomew was united in marriage to Lynn C. Judson of Lenawee Junction. The guests, who were members of the immediate families, were welcomed by the bride and groom.

At six o'clock the lights in the parlor were extinguished and the dining room doors thrown open which revealed the room lighted with candles and prettily decorated, pink being the color scheme. The bands of wide ribbon suspended from the chandelier and extending to the corners of the table together with the green vines and lighted candles made a beautiful background as the bride and groom took their places in the archway under a drapery of pink chiffon and bows of satin ribbon where a very impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. George Humphrey of Palmyra. The bride was handsomely gowned in cream batiste, the only ornament worn being a crescent of pearls, the gift of the groom.

Immediately following the ceremony, a three course dinner was served by the Misses Mary Humphrey and Vesta Wilson. Many beautiful presents were received. The bride and groom went directly to their new home on a farm near Lenawee Junction. They have the congratulations and best wishes of their many friends.

MRS. CAROLINE GWYNNE.

Mrs. Caroline Gwynne died at her home in this village Thursday aged 83 years. The funeral was held from the Friends church this afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Cheney officiating. Burial at Brookside.

MRS. TUCKER FAINTED.

Strain Too Much For Her When Appearing Against Her Husband.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—The army retiring board has concluded the hearing in the case of Colonel William F. Tucker, former paymaster of the department of the lakes, who seeks to be honorably retired on the usual retirement pay. As a climax Mrs. Tucker confronted her husband for the first time since 1905. At her appearance Colonel Tucker said nothing to her. What Mrs. Tucker's testimony consisted of was not disclosed, as the session was secret, but she is known to have fainted.

Colonel Tucker, when he appeared in the hallway, was visibly affected.

"This ordeal is terrible," he said. "Just to think of my own son, with whom, when I was on half pay, I shared the little I had, standing up against me. This is the first time I have seen my wife since October, 1905, when I left for the Philippines."

The Swaffham Tinker and His Dog.

Two quaint figures are carved on the two top pews and reading desk of Swaffham church. According to legend, a tinker had a dream bidding him go to London bridge and a stranger would reveal to him how to find a pot of money. So off he went with his dog, and at the bridge a stranger stopped him, saying, "Last night I had a dream bidding me go to Swaffham and dig in such and such a place and there find a pot of money, but I don't believe in dreams." Then back went the tinker, dug for and found the pot as described and also an inscription bidding him dig deeper, which he did, and found another, and with them restored Swaffham church. The carvings were put up to perpetuate his memory.—London Strand.

The Interview.

As used nowadays by the newspapers the word interview is said to have been the invention of Joseph McCullagh of St. Louis, and, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, it became popular in England in the early nineties. But it was known before that. A writer on the subject in the Nation of 1869 was possibly the first to use the word in its present sense of a talk with a representative of the press.—Chicago News.

Vicarious Osculation.

He was having some words with her chaperon.

"I'll—I'll kiss her right under your nose!" he said defiantly.

"Oh, well," said that lady, "vicarious kissing like that I can see no objection to."—Boston Transcript.

Plausible.

Irascible Magistrate—Officer, why did you bring this prisoner up before me? Can't you see he's as deaf as a doornail? Policeman—Of was told ye'd give him a hearing, sor.—Judge.

TECUMSEH TO HAVE VAUDEVILLE, TOO.

Manager Marks of the Bradley opera house, Tecumseh, has been fortunate enough to make arrangements with the Lyric Amusement Co. whereby the complete vaudeville show will be brought to Tecumseh on nights that regular shows play the Adrian house, which will run an average of one night a week. This will give Tecumseh people a chance to see real vaudeville, the same as is run in the big cities, as the Lyric Amusement Co. controls a large circuit throughout Ohio and Indiana and the vaudeville acts will be put on the same here as in any of the larger places.

In addition to the regular vaudeville acts (which will number from five and seven each night) there will be two reels of the newest and best moving pictures shown. These are all new independent films, therefore none will have ever been shown in Tecumseh before.

In all it will be a clean, first class vaudeville show lasting from an hour and a half to two hours. Two performances will be given each evening, the first starting at 7 o'clock and the second at 8:30.

The dates of these vaudeville shows are not all set at present, but Manager Marks says that he expects to run the first one on Thursday, February 25. The prices will be 10 cents to any seat in the house and children under eight years of age 5 cents.

There will be a complete change of program including people and pictures every time the shows are presented here.

It is hoped Tecumseh people will turn out and patronize these shows as it is the best chance Tecumseh people will ever have to see "Real Vaudeville."

See next Tuesday's issue for farther particulars.

The first lesson in fence breaking may come from a little neglect on the part of the farmer to keep the boards or rails all whole. One board off and the mischief has been commenced. Look out for the beginning of such things.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a civil war veteran of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." For the first time in its history the Croswell opera house will be invaded by vaudeville performers on Saturday afternoon. For over forty years the playhouse has withstood the attack of comic opera, tragedy, drama and melodrama, and is now about to be assailed by the latest of theatrical crazes, vaudeville. Papers were signed yesterday whereby the Lyric Amusement Co, a Toledo concern, secured a lease on the opera house and will place there vaudeville of the best type, which has made the concern so popular throughout Ohio and Indiana. This is the company's first visit in Michigan and it means to give the people of Adrian the cream of the vaudeville world, as they claim, a policy which the patrons will be quick to realize and appreciate, no doubt. The first performance will commence at 2:30 p. m, and following in the evening two performance will be given.—Adrian Telegram.

MI-O-NA CURES

Dyspepsia, Sick Headaches, Vomiting of Pregnancy, and Every Stomach Ill.

Perhaps you have read of the remarkable relief and cure that dyspeptics of the Herald are obtaining from Mi-o-na, the money back dyspepsia cure.

Now you may be suffering from dyspepsia, either acute or chronic, and you may be skeptical in regard to the mighty curative powers of Mi-o-na. But did you ever stop to think that C. A. Wright & Son have been selling Mi-o-na for years on a money back guarantee for dyspepsia and all stomach troubles? And do you think they would continue to sell hundreds of packages monthly if Mi-o-na didn't back up the claim made for it?

Try Mi-o-na at C. A. Wright & Son risk. It relieves in 24 hours. It cures dyspepsia, sea and car sickness, vomiting of pregnancy, and all stomach disorders. 50 cents for a box that will rid you of dyspepsia as well as skepticism.

"Indigestion had given me much irritation, annoyance and suffering for a long time, and I was advised to try Mi-o-na, and had a treatment procured. I used Mi-o-na for a time and the nausea, vomiting, sourness and general stomach weakness left me, as also did the pains and distress. I can give a good recommendation to the use of Mi-o-na, as for stomach complaint. I know it to be all right." E. H. Crosby, Logan st., Tecumseh, Mich., Oct. 19, 1908.

PROMINENT HOSPITALS SAY
PE-RU-NA IS EFFICIENT
IN RELIEVING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES.

SISTERS OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD, MONTREAL.

HOSPITALS ALL OVER THE CONTINENT FIND PE-RU-NA VALUABLE IN TREATING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES

CATARRH of the respiratory organs is a common ailment in Canada for at least two-thirds of the year.

This condition is no doubt caused by the long, severe winters experienced in this part of the continent.

Therefore, when Peruna was discovered by Canadian people to be a reliable remedy for these catarrhal diseases, it at once became a popular medicine, not only among individuals and in families, but in the great hospitals, where it was used as a preventive and relief in hundreds of cases.

These institutions do not hesitate to give their endorsement of the remedy which has been so helpful in the treatment of their poor and sick.

Among these institutions is that of the Sisters of Good Shepherd, who gave the following endorsement:

The Peruna Company,
Columbus, Ohio,

Having used Peruna for the past few months, for our sick and poor, we are happy to say that it has given us great satisfaction.

The Sisters of the Good Shepherd,
August 20, 1903. Montreal.

After a continued use of the remedy, this institution has found no reason to change its good opinion of the remedy and expresses its satisfaction in the following terms:

Montreal, Nov. 7, 1903.

We found Peruna a relief in several cases.

We can say it is a good tonic and we are very thankful.

Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

When catarrh once fastens itself upon the system it becomes an obstinate disease to eradicate.

A systemic remedy—one that reaches every internal organ of the body—is an absolute necessity.

Peruna is just such a remedy. It searches out the cause of the disease, healing and strengthening the mucous membranes, and thus giving Nature an opportunity to perform her part of the restorative process.

One of the many hospitals which have found Peruna of value in treating old and obstinate cases of catarrh is the Hospital St. John, who write as follows:

"We are happy to tell you that your Peruna has given us satisfaction. Three patients have tried it, one 68 years old Renoul Dupuis, afflicted with catarrh, is much relieved, more than he has been for a number of years.

"A young girl, 15 years old, had an obstinate cough, which half a bottle of Peruna caused to disappear.

"As to myself, two bottles have convinced me that Peruna is magnificent as a tonic.

"Before the treatment I could not walk for a quarter of an hour without experiencing much fatigue. Now I can walk a mile easily.

"Through these three cases we desire to make known to the public the efficiency of your remedy."

Hospital St. John, of St. Johns, Province of Quebec.

A later letter received from the same institution reads as follows:

"Three weeks ago I wrote to tell you how satisfactory we found Peruna. We recommend it highly for colds, coughs, catarrh and neuralgia.

"I have used it myself as a tonic with the best results, taken as directed, half a teaspoonful every half hour."

Mrs. Etta Booker, Dundurn, Sask., N. W. T., Canada, writes:

"I suffered with internal catarrh until I wrote to Dr. Hartman, and after taking treatment as he advised, I can say I am now cured of this most trying affliction, for which I am truly thankful. I think Peruna the best medicine for catarrh. I never felt better in my life than I do at present."

Peruna not only promptly relieves coughs and colds in their first stages, but is equally prompt and efficient for catarrhal diseases in the chronic stage.

Of course, it is only reasonable to suppose that a great deal less medicine will be necessary to cure a slight attack of catarrh than would be required to relieve the ailment after it had been allowed to become chronic.

MOTHERS MEET TO TALK OF CHILDHOOD.

Annual Conference Begun In New Orleans Today.

New Orleans, Feb. 18.—"Work for home and childhood in many states" is the keynote of the twelfth annual conference of the National Congress of Mothers, opened in this city today with an address by Governor Sanders of Louisiana. Other greetings of welcome to New Orleans, Louisiana and the south were extended to the delegates by representative men and women of the state and city. Responses were made by Mrs. Jefferson D. Gibbs of Los Angeles, Cal., speaking for the west; Mrs. George K. Johnson of Philadelphia, spokeswoman for the east, and Mrs. Frederic Schoff of Philadelphia, president of the National Congress of Mothers, who replied in behalf of the "guardians of childhood in home and nation."

The conference will remain in session four days, and the Mothers will combine the discussion of topics of interest and importance with enjoyment of the Mardi Gras. This afternoon there will be a conference of state presidents and reports of national departments. In the evening the ladies will enjoy the Momus parade, assembling again tomorrow for a conference on child saving. The conference will close Sunday afternoon with a symposium of local work and concert at church.

TARIFF COMMISSION.

Indianapolis Convention Demands Its Immediate Formation.

Indianapolis, Feb. 18.—Demand for the immediate creation by congress of a permanent tariff commission is voiced in resolutions just adopted by the tariff commission conference convention. To dispel any idea that delay in tariff revision is sought and that the purpose of the gathering was to delay action on the pending tariff by congress a provision was added urging that congress during its special session shall prepare and adopt a revised tariff to the best of its ability under present conditions.

The adoption of the resolutions was the subject of a heated debate, lasting two hours.

Comptroller Herman A. Metz of New York city declared the need of a tariff commission so important that if an official one could not soon be procured it would be wisdom for the business men of the country to establish an unofficial one. The benefit of its findings, when a scientific revision of the tariff finally is enforced by public sentiment, he declared, would be invaluable to the legislators.

Eat What
You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question of delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

ARMSTRONG KEEPS QUIET

Is Mum About Newest Charges Against Him.

WARNER APPEARS INDIGNANT.

Inclined to Look Upon Former Warden as "Remarkable Liar"—Jackson's Prosecutor Declares Armstrong Sought to Induce Convict to Make Charges Against Green.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 22.—Allen N. Armstrong, deposed warden of the Michigan state prison at Jackson, Mich., who is here with his daughter, Mrs. R. O. Morgan, when seen regarding the Convict Warren affair and his alleged attempt to trump up the charges against General Green and others, positively refused to discuss any phase of this latest development.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 22.—"If Armstrong told that convict that I would parole him for making any statement, or that I was interested in the matter at all, he is a monumental liar, and it appears that he is a remarkable liar," said Governor Warner. "Armstrong told me that he had 'something coming' that would clear him, but he did not tell me what, and I never asked him. I don't know anything about Warren; never heard of him."

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 22.—"The whole plot is absurd and one which the records of the reformatory would so completely refute that it is really not entitled to the dignity of notice from me," said Amos Musselman, a member of the Ionia prison board. "If it was not so clearly shown in the story itself that there was nothing to the charges I would perhaps go into a categorical explanation of the matter, but as it is one is not in the slightest degree necessary."

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 22.—This latest development in the Armstrong case which has broken out has as the center of interest a convict in the Jackson prison. The prosecuting officers say that Fred Warren, the convict, told them that Warden Armstrong got him to write a statement that would discredit General Fred Green, complainant in the bribery case against Armstrong, and warden and members of the Ionia reformatory board, and it was Armstrong's plan to use this statement in his own defense.

The real name of the convict in the case is Fred Carleton. He is doing time in the Jackson prison for forgery. Warren, as he is known in the prison, served a previous sentence in the Ionia reformatory and while there was a bookkeeper. He was keeping books at the time the shirt contract was displaced at the reformatory by the reed chair contract given to General Green's company.

Green Interested in Warren.

It is not altogether clear as to how Warren contrived to come forward with his allegations involving the names of General Green and members of the Ionia reformatory board of control. The story of the prosecution is that Armstrong learned that Warren had kept books on the contract job at Ionia and the further fact that Green had at various times interested himself in Warren's behalf, in prison and out.

One story is, in effect, that Armstrong called in Warren, got him to say that he "knew things" about Green's transactions at Ionia and then set him at work to "frame up" a false story, taking steps to suborn corroborative evidence. Warren's reward was to be a parole, and in this connection Warren is stated by the prosecuting officers to have said Armstrong declared to the convict that Governor Warner was "more interested" in the matter than Armstrong himself.

As the prosecution has it from the convict, Armstrong dictated a statement for Warren to write, and which Warren did write, but would not sign. What he says Armstrong dictated was, in substance, that while employed in the office of Green's company in the Ionia reformatory, he, Warren, abstracted letters that had been written by Green to Warden Fuller of the reformatory and to Amos Musselman of Grand Rapids, Alfred Locke of Ionia and J. Wienboldt of Jackson, the reformatory board of control, that these letters showed that Green had distributed among them $15,000 in consideration of their having substituted the furniture contract for the shirt contract.

Woman in Case.

Then, according to the convict, via the statement of the prosecutors, the question arose between Armstrong and Warren as to the possibility of corroborating Warren's story. Warren either gave to Armstong, or Armstrong procured by searching the convict's cell and securing letters, the name of one Mae Adworth of Baltimore. She was to be the outside witness.

Telegrams from the Jackson prison signed "The Warden" induced the Baltimore police to locate this woman and send her to Buffalo. There Armstrong met her, according to the prosecution, registered at a hotel as Fred Carleton and had an interview with her. He also brought her to Jackson and had her in his residence in the prison.

Warren is the source of information for this, and he says Armstrong was trying to get the woman to promise to say that she had seen the letters spoken of in Warren's statement dictated by the warden.

The warden, it is alleged, wasn't making much progress in his attempt to get evidence that would reflect on Green, and then came his removal from the prison and Warren's expose of the whole matter to the prosecutors when they called on him in the prison after the warden left.

SHE DIES HAPPY.

Old Lady Lived Long Enough to See Grandson a Preacher.

Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 22.—Her one wish—that to see her grandson preach in the church whose congregation sent him to the old country to study the ministry—gratified, Mrs. Johanna Baker, eighty-three years old, one of Muskegon's oldest Holland-American residents, died Sunday.

Several years ago the local Holland church took up a subscription to send Claude Delderloss to the native land to study for the ministry. The young man made the trip.

Saturday he returned to Muskegon. Sunday Mrs. Baker died. She did not close her eyes forever, however, until she heard the announcement that he would ascend the pulpit of the church in which his school days had been spent.

FELL SIXTEEN FEET.

Yet Muskegon Man Will Live Despite Fact of Lighting on Head.

Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 22.—Henry Fink got up shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning to throw a pail of water from a second story window of his home. In order to do so and not soak some clothing on a line near the house it was necessary for him to lean out into the open nearly a foot.

He tried to do so, but lost his hold and fell head first to the hard ground below. Alighting on his head, he was found a few moments later by a passerby, who called a physician. Fink soon revived, and he will recover despite his fall of sixteen feet.

Anderson Jury Disagree.

Mason, Mich., Feb. 22.—Jerry Anderson of Grand Rapids, indicted by the Ingham county grand jury on the charge of obtaining money from the state by false pretenses by accepting expense money for a trip of the fisheries junket committee when he was a member of the house and not accompanying the committee, will have to stand another trial, the jury in the trial just ended in the circuit court failing to agree on a verdict.

JOHNSON ON WAY HOME.

Colored Champion Fighter Leaves Australia For America Today.

He was given an enthusiastic sendoff by a large gathering of sporting men. The big black scrapper has made many friends in this country, and they were sorry to see him go.

After a short stay in America Johnson will sail for England. He is matched to meet Sam Langford, the colored heavyweight, before the National Sporting club of London in the first championship battle between colored men. The fight will take place in June.

FLEET AGAIN IN HOME WATERS.

Big Armada Welcomed by President at Hampton Roads.

STEAMS INTO PORT TODAY.

Great Crowd Welcomes Sperry and His Men With Tremendous Din of Cannon, Whistles and Cheers—Nation's Chief Reviews Fleet on Mayflower—Festivities to Follow.

Fort Monroe, Va., Feb. 22.—Our fleet is home again. Riding safely at anchor in the waters of Hampton Roads after a welcome such as never before warmed the hearts of returning sailormen are sixteen "bully" vessels that have sailed around the world. It is impossible to resist the temptation to say that they look as "fit for a fight or a frolic" as they did when they sailed away from here more than fourteen months ago under the command of Admiral Evans.

When the Mayflower, bearing President Roosevelt and his invited guests, Secretary of the Navy Newberry and others, sailed down the harbor today the guns of Fort Monroe told the thousands of visitors to these shores that the welcome to the fleet would begin soon. Immediately the smoke began to rise from the stacks of the scores of excursion vessels chartered to bear the thousands of visitors out to sea to welcome the fleet. Turning their bows eastward, they steamed slowly after the Mayflower and took up their positions as near the presidential yacht as safety and the naval regulations would permit.

Saluting the President.

When the Mayflower reached the position selected for her off Thimble shoal light her anchor was cast, and the party aboard prepared to await the coming of Admiral Sperry and his ships. Word was sent to the admiral that his commander in chief was waiting for him, and the Connecticut hoisted the signal for the fleet to follow the flagship in. Steaming at a fair rate, the Connecticut moved past the Mayflower, her guns booming out the presidential salute. The Mayflower responded, and the great naval review was on.

From that time until the last of the twenty-five returning warships had sailed past the Mayflower and paid its respects to president in noise and smoke there was a continual roar of artillery that shook the Virginia hills and made conversation on the excursion steamers a difficult task. The civilian vessels added to the din with sirens and whistles, amid which the cheers of the visiting thousands anxious to do their share in the noisy welcome was all but lost. It was a pandemonium such as was never before heard in this historic harbor.

While the fourteen vessels of Sperry's fleet that have made the circuit of the world, covering more than 42,000 miles since they left here in December, 1907, received the greatest amount of applause, the two battleships which joined the fleet on the Pacific coast and the vessels of Admiral Arnold's convoying squadron received their due share of attention. Probably the greatest amount of applause greeted the appearance of the Connecticut, which was the flagship of the fleet throughout the cruise, and the Nebraska, which made its first appearance on the Atlantic seaboard.

Twenty-five Warships in Line.

In reviewing the fleet the Mayflower occupied almost exactly the same position she did when the president bade godsped to the sixteen battleships at the beginning of the cruise. The fleet which saluted him today, however, presented a more imposing appearance than the outbound armada. Then sixteen warships sailed south; today twenty-five war vessels, including twenty battleships, passed in review before the commander in chief.

When the last ship had passed the Mayflower the presidential yacht weighed anchor and turned to take up her position between the Connecticut and the Louisiana. Hardly had she cast anchor again when boats were cleared from the sides of the vessels of the fleet, and Admiral Sperry and the commanders and executive officers of the ships were rowed to the Mayflower to pay their respects to the president. After these official calls were paid and the naval men had returned to their own vessels the president visited in turn the flagship of each division and met and greeted the assembled officers, and the representative enlisted men sent to pay the respects of the jackies to him.

Tonight will be memorable in the history of Fort Monroe, Newport News and the surrounding towns. The focus of the receptions to the returning sailors will be in the Chamberlain hotel, where the Navy league will give a dinner to Sperry and his commanding officers. The dinner will be followed by a ball, and for several days there will be a round of gayeties here. Most of them, of course, will be reserved for the officers, but the enlisted men have not been forgotten. They will have a ball and reception of their own on Feb. 27 in the sail loft of the Norfolk navy yard.

PRESIDENT'S NEPHEW FALLS TO HIS DEATH.

Stewart Robinson Plunges From High Window.

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 22.—Stewart Douglas Robinson, nineteen years old, a nephew of President Roosevelt and a sophomore of Harvard college, is dead, the result of a fall from a sixth story window of Hampton Hall, a dormitory on Massachusetts avenue. He was a son of Douglas Robinson.

Robinson was out with a party of fellow students in the evening. He complained of not feeling well and went to the apartment of his brother, Monroe Douglas Robinson, in Hampton Hall, instead of going to his own rooms on Mount Auburn street. Monroe Robinson, who is a senior at Harvard, was not in his apartment, but Stewart Robinson had the freedom of the room, and the party of friends accompanied him there.

It is understood that shortly after their arrival young Robinson stumbled and fell in crossing the room and struck on his forehead, receiving a painful injury. His friends say that they then put him in his brother's bed and, after raising the window of the bedroom a few inches in response to his request for more air, went away a short time later, leaving him apparently asleep. That was the last they heard of young Robinson until they were told that his body had been found on the sidewalk.

It is believed that after his friends left him Stewart, feeling ill, got out of bed and walked toward the window to open it wider. It is thought that as he leaned out over the sill he became dizzy and, losing his balance, fell out of the window to the pavement, six stories below.

The body was discovered by a policeman.

The young man's parents were at once notified. His mother is President Roosevelt's sister.

Stewart was well known among his classmates and was prominent in the social life of the university.

J. EDWARD BRITT AGAIN.

He Fights Johnny Summers in London Ring Tonight.

London, Feb. 22.—Patriotic American sports in London will celebrate Washington's birthday by going to see Jimmy Britt, the California lightweight, fight Johnny Summers, the Englishman, at the National Sporting club—that is, if they have the price, for the National Sporting club is one of the ancient institutions of the British capital, and admission within its doors comes high.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Carelessness is really laziness under a more polite name.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see. Sold by all dealers.

THE BARRIER

rested each of them, whereupon the old man knew that here was no "Cheechako," as tenderfeet are known in the north, although the man's garb had deceived him at first glance. The stranger balanced the weapons, one in either hand; then he did the "double roll" neatly, following which he executed a move that Gale had not witnessed for many years. He extended one of the guns, butt foremost, as if surrendering it, the action being free and open, save for the fact that his forefinger was crooked and thrust through the trigger guard; then, with the slightest jerk of the wrist, the gun spun about, the handle jumped into his palm, and instantly there was a click as his thumb flipped the hammer. It was the old "road agent spin," which Gale as a boy had practiced hours at a time. But that this man was in earnest he showed by glancing upward sharply when the trader laughed.

"This one hangs all right," he said; "give me a box of cartridges."

He emptied his gold sack in payment for the gun and ammunition, then remarked:

"That pretty nearly cleans me. If I had the price I'd take them both."

Gale wondered what need induced this fellow to spend his last few dollars on a firearm. Then he inquired:

"Bound for the outside?"

"No. I'm locating here."

The trader darted a quick glance at him. He did not like this man.

"There ain't much doing in this camp. It's a pretty poor place," he said guardedly.

"I'll put in with you, from its looks," agreed the other. "It's got too many soldiers to be worth a d—n." He snarled this bitterly, with a peculiar leering lift of his lip, as if his words tasted bad.

"Napoleon Doret—our Poleon!"

"Most of the boys are going up river," said Gale.

"Well, those hills look as if they had gold in them," said the stranger, pointing vaguely. "I'm going to prospect."

Gale knew instinctively that the fellow was lying, for his hands were not those of a miner, but there was nothing to be said. His judgment was verified, however, when Poleon drew him aside later and said:

"He's bad man."

"How do you know?"

"She's leave Dawson d—n queeck. Dose mounted police t'row 'im on de boat jus' before we lef'." Then he told a story that he had heard. The man, it seemed, had left Skagway between two suns, upon the disruption of Soapy Smith's band of desperadoes, and had made for the interior, but had been intercepted at the pass by two members of the citizens' committee who came upon him suddenly. Pretending to yield, he had executed some unexpected coup as he delivered his gun, for both men fell, shot through the body. No one knew just what it was he did nor cared to question him overmuch. The next heard of him was at Lake Bennett, over the line, where the mounted police recognized him and sent him on. They marked him well, however, and passed him on from post to post as they had driven others whose records were known, but he had lost himself in the confusion at Dawson for a few weeks until the scarlet coated riders searched him out, disarmed him and forced him sullenly aboard this steamer.

Old Man Gale cared little for this, for he had spent his life among such men, but as he watched the fellow a scheme outlined itself in his head. Evidently the man dared not go farther down the river, for there was nothing save Indian camps and a mission or two this side of St. Michael's, and at that point there were a court and many soldiers, where one was liable to meet the penalty of past misdeeds; hence he was probably resolved to stop here, and, judging by his record, he was a man of unsettled convictions.

The trader stepped to the door and, seeing Burrell on the deck of the steamer, went down toward him. It was a long chance, but the stakes were big and worth the risk. He had thought much during the night previous—in fact, for many hours—and the morning had found him still undecided, wherefore he took this course.

"Necia tells me that you aim to keep law and order here," he began abruptly, having drawn the young man aside.

"Those are my instructions," said Burrell, "but they are so vague"—

"Well, this camp is bigger than it was an hour ago, and it ain't improved any in the growth. Yonder goes the new citizen." He pointed to the stranger, who had returned to the steamer for his baggage and was descending the gangplank beneath them, a vanse in each hand. "He's a thief and a murderer, and we don't want him here. Now, it's up to you."

"I don't understand," said the lieutenant, whereupon the trader told him Doret's tale. "You and your men were sent here to keep things peaceable," he concluded, "and I reckon when a man is too tough for the Canuck police he is tough enough for you to tackle. There ain't a lock and key in the camp, and we ain't had a killing or a stealing in ten years. We'd like to keep it that way."

"Well, you see, I know nothing of that shooting affray, so I doubt if my authority would permit me to interfere," the soldier mused, half to himself.

"I allowed you were to use your own judgment," said the elder man.

"So I am, I suppose. There is one chance, Mr. Gale. If you'll back me up I'll send him on down to St. Michael's. That is the most I can do."

The lieutenant outlined his plan, and as he went on the trader nodded approval.

The young man gazed back at him so squarely, his eyes were so pleasant and friendly, his whole person breathed such straight up honesty and freshness that shame arose in the old man, and he had hard shift to keep his glance from wavering. Without forethought he answered impulsively:

"He's desperate and he's dangerous. I sold him a 45 just now." He was about to tell him where the man wore it and to add a word concerning his dexterity with the gun when the very fearless deliberation of the youth deterred him. On second thought Gale yielded to an impulse to wait and see how Meade Burrell would act under fire. If the soldier emerged scathless it would give him a line on his character. If he did not—well, that would be even better.

The crowd was coming back to the steamer, which had discharged her few bundles of freight, and there was no one inside the log post as they entered except Doret and the stranger, who had deposited his baggage at the rear and was talking with the Frenchman at the bar. At sight of the lieutenant he became silent and turned carelessly, although with a distrustful stare. Burrell wasted no time.

"Are you going to locate here?" he began.

"Yes."

"I notice you go skeleton rigged," the soldier continued, indicating the man's baggage. "Pretty small outfit for a miner, isn't it?"

"It's plenty for me."

"Have you enough money to buy your season's grub?"

"I guess that's my business."

"My orders are to see that all newcomers either have an outfit or are able to buy one," said Burrell. "Those that are not equipped properly are to be sent down river to St. Michael's, where there is plenty of everything and where they will be taken care of by the government. Mr. Gale has only sufficient provisions to winter the men already in this district."

"I can take care of myself," said the man angrily, "whether I'm broke or not, and I don't want any of your interference." He shot a quick glance at Poleon Doret, but the Frenchman's face was like wood, and his hand still held the neck of the whisky bottle he had set out for the stranger.

"Come," said the officer peremptorily, "I have heard all about you, and you are not the kind of citizen we want here, but if you have enough money for an outfit I can't send you away. If you haven't"—

"I'm broke," said the man, but at the note in his voice Poleon Doret's muscles tightened, and Burrell, who also read a sinister message in the tone, slid his heavy service revolver from its holster beneath his coat.

"Give me your gun," he said. "I'll unload it and give it back to you at the gangplank."

"All right; you've got the upper hand," said the man through lips that had gone white. Drawing his weapon from beneath his vest, he presented it to the officer, butt foremost, hammer underneath. The cylinder reposed naturally in the palm of his hand, and the tip of his forefinger was thrust through the trigger guard.

Burrell lowered the barrel of his revolver and put out his left hand for the other's weapon. Suddenly the man's wrist jerked, the soldier saw a blue flicker of sunlight on the steel as it whirled, saw the arm of Poleon Doret fling itself across the bar with the speed of a striking serpent, heard a smash of breaking glass, felt the shock of a concussion and the spatter of some liquid in his face. Then he saw the man's revolver on the floor halfway across the room, saw fragments of glass with it and saw the fellow step backward, snatching at the fingers of his right hand. A smell of powder smoke and rank whisky was in the air.

There are times when a man's hand will act more swiftly than his tongue. Napoleon Doret had seen the manner of the stranger's surrender of his gun and, realizing what it meant, had acted. At the very instant of the fellow's treachery Doret struck with his bottle just in time to knock the weapon from his hand, but not in time to prevent its discharge. The bullet was lodged in the wall a foot from where Gale stood. Aiming a sweeping downward blow with his Colt, Burrell clipped the Skagway man just above the ear, and he reeled. Then as he fell the officer struck wickedly again at his opponent's skull, but Doret seized him by the arm.

"Ba gar, don't kill 'im twice!"

Burrell wrenched his arm free and turned on Doret a face that remained long in the Frenchman's memory, a face suffused with fury and convulsed like that of a sprinter at the finish of a race. The two men stared at each other over the fallen figure for a brief moment until the soldier gained mastery of himself and sheathed his weapon, when Poleon smiled.

"I spoil' a quart of good w'iskee on you. Dat's wort' five dollar."

The lieutenant wiped the liquor from his face.

"Quick work, Doret," he said. "I owe you one."

Gale's face was hidden as he bent over the prostrate man, fingering a long and ragged cut which laid the fellow's scalp open from back of the ear to the temple, but he mumbled something unintelligible.

"Is he hurt badly?"

"No; you chipped him too low," said the trader. "I told you he was bad."

They revived the man, then bound up his injury hastily, and as the steamer cast off they led him to the bank and passed his gripsacks to a roustabout. He said no word as he walked unsteadily up the plank, but turned and stared malignantly at them from the deck. Then as the craft swung outward into the stream he grinned through the trickle of blood that stole down from beneath his wide hat and cried:

"I'd like to introduce myself, for I'm coming back to winter with you, lieutenant! My name is Runnion." And until the steamer was hidden behind the bend below they saw him standing there gazing back at them fixedly.

As Burrell left the two men at the store he gave his hand frankly to the French Canadian and said, while his cheeks flushed:

"I want to thank you for saving me from my own awkwardness."

Doret became even more embarrassed than the lieutenant at this show of gratitude and grunted churlishly. But when the young man had gone he turned to Gale, who had watched them silently, and said:

"He's a nice young feller, ole man. Sapre! W'en he's mad his eye got so red lak my ondershirt."

But the trader made no reply.

CHAPTER III.

WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY.

WHEN the steamer had gone Napoleon Doret went to look for Necia and found her playing with the younger Gales, who reveled in the gifts he had brought. Never had there been such gorgeous presents for little folks.

The elder girl laughed gladly as Poleon entered, though her eyes were wet with the pity of it.

"You seem to bring sunshine wherever you go," she said. "They have never had things to play with like other children, and it makes me cry to watch them."

"Ho, ho," he chuckled, "dis ain' no time for cryin', ba gosh! I guess you don' have so much present w'en you was lit'l gal you'se'f, w'at? Mebbe you t'ink I forget you. Waal, I didn't."

He began to undo the fastenings of a parcel he carried in his arms.

"Don't you dare open it!" cried Necia. "Why, that's half the fun." She was a child herself now, her face flushed and her hands a-tremble. Taking the package to the table, she hurriedly untied the knots while he stood watching her, his teeth showing white against his dark face and his eyes half shut as if dazzled by the sight of her.

"Oh, why didn't you tie more knots to it?" she breathed as she undid the last, and then, opening the wrappings slowly, she gasped in astonishment. She shook it out gently, reverently, a clinging black lace gown of Paris make. Next she opened a box and took from it a picture hat with long jet plumes, which she stroked and pressed fondly against her face. There were other garments also—a silken petticoat, silk stockings and a pair of high heeled shoes to match, with certain other delicate and dainty things which she modestly forbore to inspect before the Frenchman, who said no word, but only gazed at her, and for whom she had no eyes as yet. Finally she laid her presents aside and, turning to him, said in a hushed, awe stricken voice:

"It's all there, everything complete! Oh, Poleon—you dear, dear Poleon!" She took his two big hands by the thumbs, as had been her custom ever since she was a child, and looked up at him, her eyes wet with emotion. But she could not keep away from the dress for long and returned to feast her eyes upon it.

"You lak it, eh?" pressed Poleon, hungry for more demonstrative expression.

"Oh-h!" she sighed. "Where on earth did you get it? Why, it must have cost a fortune!"

"Wan night I gamble in beeg saloon. Yes, sir! I gamble good dat night too. For w'le I play roulette, den I dance, den I play some more, an' by an' by I see a new dance gal. She's Franche gal, from Montreal. Dat's de one I tol' you 'bout. Ba gar, she's swell dress' too. She's name' Marie Bourgette."

"Oh, I've heard about her," said Necia. "She owns a claim on Bonanza creek."

"Sure, she's frien's wit' Charlie McCormack, dat riche feller, but I don' know it dis tam', so I ask her for dance wit' me. Den we drink a bottle of champagne—twenty dollar.

"'Mamselle,' I say, 'how much you charge for sell me dat dress?'

"'For w'y shall I sell 'im?' she say. 'I don' wear 'im before till tonight, an' I don' get no more dress lak dis for t'ousan' dollar.'"

Necia exclaimed excitedly.

"'For w'y you sell 'im?' I say. 'Bicause I'll tak' 'im down to Flambeau for Necia Gale, w'at never had no dress lak dat in all her life.' Waal, sir, dat Marie Bourgette she's hear of you before, an' your dad, too—mos' all dose Cheechakos know 'bout Old Man Gale—so she say:

"'W'at lookin' kind of gal is dis Necia?' An' I tell her all 'bout you. W'en I'm t'rough she say:

"'But maybe your little frien' is more bigger as I am. Maybe de dress won't fit.'

"'Ha, you don' know me, mamselle!' I say. 'I can guess de weight of a caribou to five poun'. She'll be same size la'kin' one inch roun' de wais'.'

"'Poleon Doret,' she say, 'you ain' no Franchemans to talk lak dat. Look here! I can sell dis dress for t'ousan' dollar tonight, or I can trade 'im for gol' mine on El Dorado creek to some dose Swede w'at want to catch a gal, but I'm goin' sell 'im to you for t'ree hondred dollar, jus' w'at I pay for 'im. You wait here till I come back.'

"'No, no, Mamselle Marie, I'll go 'long, too, for so you don' change your min',' I say. An' I stan' outside her door till she pass me de whole works.

"'Don't forget de little shoes,' I say, an' dat's how it come."

"And you paid $300 for it!" Necia said, aghast. The Canadian shrugged.

"Only for de good heart of Marie Bourgette I pay wan t'ousan'," said he. "I mak' seven hondred dollar clean profit."

"It was very nice of both of you, but—I can't wear it. I've never seen a dress like it except in pictures, and I couldn't"— She saw his face fall and said impulsively:

"I'll wear it once anyhow, Poleon, just for you. Go away quick now and let me put it on."

"Dat's good," he nodded as he moved away. "I bet you mak' dose dance hall women look lak sucker."

No man may understand the girl's feelings as she set about clothing herself in her first fine dress. Time and again she had studied pictures from the "outside" showing women arrayed in the newest styles and had closed her eyes to fancy herself dressed in like manner.

She hesitated modestly when she saw its low cut.

Poleon's eye had been amazingly correct, for the gown fitted her neatly save at the waist, which was even more than an inch too large notwithstanding the fact that she had never worn such a corset as the well formed Marie Bourgette was accustomed to.

She pondered long and hesitated modestly when she saw its low cut, which exposed her neck and shoulders in a totally unaccustomed manner, for it struck her as amazingly indecent until she scurried through her magazines again and saw that its construc-

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said so by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there. You can always be on the safe side by demanding

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Feb 20, 1909.

The President has signed the joint resolution of Congress removing the constitutional barrier to the appointment of Senator Knox to the premiership in Mr. Taft's Cabinet and it is to be hoped that this tempest in a tea pot has been settled for all time. Mr. Knox will now certainly become Secretary of State under the new administration and it is probable that the new Congress will pass a law increasing his salary from $8,000, the amount to which it was reduced in order to make Mr. Knox eligible to the $12,000 which was the amount agreed upon in the general salary raise. Mr. Knox is a rich man and the salary is a matter of small importance to him. The technicality though, by which having been a member of the body that voted the increase, he became ineligible for the position has been made the most of by a Congress which would rather debate a whole session on a technicality than to get down to real work on a simple, uncomplicated problem providing a necessary appropriation or the solution of a vital question.

Senator La Follette has been accused of taking upon himself the task of being the conscience of Congress. He has spent several summers in Chatauqua lecturing, and he has not hesitated to use the names of those Senators whom he declares have been guilty of neglecting their duties. He came in for a withering rebuke this week when Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania uncorked the vials of his wrath and charged the Wisconsin Senator with neglect of his Senatorial duties. He named four committees upon which Mr. La Follette is assigned and declared that he has not attended the meetings of any of them this session. These charges were not taken seriously by the Senate, probably because no Senator is guiltless of neglecting the work of all the Committees upon which his name appears except that one or two of which he is chairman, but the members who have been so often and severely scored by the Wisconsin Senator were delighted in hearing him publicly rebuked. The record of Mr. La Follette's activity since he has been United States Senator is too well know to need vindication here and the grudge that is borne him by the Senate is due to too much rather than too little energy in the performance of his duties.

Washington's Birthday will see a general exodus of prominent people from the National Capital who will spend that day at Hampton Roads in the general welcome that is being prepared for the home coming of the fleet which will Sunday complete its circle of the globe. Several Congressional parties have chartered steamers for the occasion that will take them to the scene of the festivities and practically all of the Army and Navy officers will be present at Old Point Comfort to attend the dinner given in honor of the officers of the home coming fleet. The Secretary of the Navy will take a large party to Old Point that day and the President will go down on the Mayflower. The greatest enthusiasm is manifest over the successful round the world trip of the great fleet and though the little excursion has cost the country the sum of twenty millions of dollars there seems to be a general consensus of opinion that it was worth it.

The last and farewell reception of President Roosevelt was given Thursday night when the Army and Navy were the guests of honor. When the Presidential party retired after the reception it was with the doubtless happy consciousness that its official entertaining was at an end. The reception was exactly like all that have preceded it for the past seven years except for the general adieus that were made during the handshaking. Early in the administration it was Mrs. Roosevelt's boast that like the President, she enjoyed her job and it must be said that both she and the President have never shown any signs of diminishing interest or enthusiasm but there has been no disguising the fact this winter that they have both been looking forward to their release, especially from the social requirements of it and that they are happily anticipating the trip which will follow almost immediately on their retirement. The orginal plan was for Mr. Roosevelt to take the trip alone and for Mrs. Roosevelt to join him next year on the continent. This has been altered so that Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter will accompany him to Naples and to the scene of the recent earthquake at Messina. They will be much entertained in Southern Italy and will proceed from there to Egypt where a dahabeah will be placed at their disposal and that they will go in a large party up the Nile to the second cataract. Mrs. Roosevelt will then return in time for the London season and with her debutante daughter will be presented at Court. There will follow leisurely visits in other Capitols of the old world and sixteen or eighteen months later the President will join them for the voyage home. More of a change and relaxation from the exactions of the life of the past seven years could not well be imagined.

The Secret Of Long Life.

A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. But long ago millions of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolongs life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, rebuilds wasted nerve cells, imparts life and tone to the entire system. Its a godsend to weak, sick and debilitated people. "Kidney trouble had blighted my life for months," writes W. M. Sherman of Cushing, Me., "but Electric Bitters cured me entirely." Only 50c. at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store.

GROWS HAIR ON BALD HEADS

Bald Headed People May Get a New Chance in Life.

In these days when youth is the moving factor in business; when a man makes his mark at thirty-five and is ready to retire at forty-five; when business houses pension the man we call "middle aged" rather than allow his lagging influence to intrude upon the commercial rush, a bald head is almost fatal to any man's hopes. The following must therefore prove interesting to people who are losing their hair or who are bald.

Resorcin is one of the latest and most effective germ killers discovered by science, and in connection with Beta Napthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which destroys the germs which rob the hair of its nutriment, and also creates a clean and healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the development of new germs.

Pilocarpin is a well known agent for restoring the hair to its natural color, where the loss of color has been due to a disease of the scalp. Yet, it is not a coloring matter or dye.

This combination of curatives mixed with alcohol as a stimulant perfects the most effective remedy for hair and scalp troubles.

The famous Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is chiefly composed of Resorcin, Beta Napthol and Pilocarpin. It makes the scalp healthy, nourishes the hair, stimulates the follicles. Where the head is already bare, it enters the follicles, revitalizes the roots, supplies nourishment and stimulates a new growth.

We want you to try a few bottles of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic, on our personal guarantee that the trial will not cost you a penny if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. That's proof of our faith in this remedy and it should indisputably demonstrate that we know what we are talking about when we say that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair on bald heads, except of course, where baldness has been of such long duration that the roots of the hair are entirely dead, the follicles closed and grown over, and the scalp is glazed.

Remember, we are basing our statements upon what has already been accomplished by the use of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic, and we have the right to assume that what it has done to hundreds of others it will do for you. In any event you cannot lose anything by giving it a trial on our liberal guarantee. B. J. Pulver, the druggist.

TECUMSEH GRANGE

Held Regular Meeting Last Saturday.

Saturday, Feb. 20, the Tecumseh Grange held their regular meeting at noon and had a picnic dinner. The work of the order was then taken up, after which the doors were open to the public to hear the programme which had been arranged and which included an address on Equal Suffrage by Mrs. Jennie Law Hardy. The rooms were soon filled and the meeting called to order. A beautiful piano solo was rendered by Mrs. Bryan, after which Mrs. B. Hurrey read a paper on Household Economics written by Mrs. Finch which was full of good ideas for the "women of the house." Mrs. Hardy then addressed the audience and proved herself an interesting and instructive speaker. She told how beneficial Equal Suffrage had been in New Zealand and Australia and plainly showed the need of it in the United States. Several questions were asked which were answered by Mrs Hardy much to the amusement of all present. Miss Mingay then recited in her pleasant way a selection suitable to the occasion and was heartily encored to which she kindly responded. At the close of the meeting many who had not had an opportunity before gladly availed themselves of the privilege of signing the petition of Equal Suffrage.

RECEPTION

Given at the home of Mrs. Freeman Under the Auspices of the Kings Daughters.

The reception given by Mrs. J. J. Freeman and Mrs. F. B. Wood for the King's Daughters last Friday afternoon and evening at the home of Mrs. Freeman was largely attended in spite of the inclemency of the weather. George and Martha Washington were present acting as pages during the entire afternoon and evening. The delightful cordiality which the King's Daughters always extend prevailed at this charming affair. Further pleasure was given by the musical entertainment which consisted of selections by the ladies and men's quartette, Mrs. Shaw, J. Duaine Service, Miss Shull, Miss Gaston and Miss McKinney. In the dining room the hostesses were assisted by members of the King's Daughters and six young ladies who served the guests with the dainty refreshments. The decorations were in keeping with Valentine's day and Washington's birthday, the idea being carried out also in the menu.

The hostesses in behalf of the King's Daughters, wish to thank all who assisted them in any way to make the affair a success and are especially grateful to those, who, though unable to be present, sent an offering. A neat little sum was realized from the entertainment which will be used for benevolent purposes.

Dabbling in stocks and leaving the farm to run itself is not a good way to do business. It is the surest way to trouble and loss. Money out of pocket every time for the man who follows it.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a civil war veteran of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. NECK WAS BROKEN

Edmund Lloyd Fell Down Cellar Steps at his Home Sunday.

Resided with his Family on the P. B. Sutfin Farm Three Miles East of Clinton.

Neck was broken and skull crushed.

This community was shocked Monday morning to learn of the accident which befell Edmund Lloyd, at noon on Sunday, rendering four little children fatherless and taking the light from a once happy home. Mr. Lloyd resided three miles east of Clinton on the P. B. Sutfin farm.

About noon on Sunday he went to the cellar to get meat and otherwise assist in preparing the noon-day meal. He had gotten back up the steps when he lost his balance in some way, and fell the entire length of the steps, breaking his neck and crushing his skull. He was found a short time later by his little daughter, Hester, who hastily summoned help.

A very sad feature in connection, was that the wife and two smaller children were in Dundee, caring for her mother, who had broken her arm. The two older ones, Hester aged 7 and Elizabeth aged 5, were staying at home with Mr. Lloyd. The family are prostrated with grief.

An inquest was held, and it was decided that death was accidental.

Deceased was 36 years old.

In opening the exercises for the afternoon, Mrs. Clark welcomed the visitors in a few well chosen words. Her remarks were followed by a reading by Miss Millspaugh, who gave a portion of Owen Wister's, "Seven Ages of Washington."

PIONEER DAY,

Monday club members and their friends to the member of sixty held a reception yesterday afternoon, at the hospitable home of Mrs. J. F. Hicks'. Mrs Albert as president announced the program numbers, the first being by the Ladies Quartette, Mesdames Mead and Hodges, and Misses Magers and Kriedler. Mrs. Frances Sutherland Wilson of Adrian then read a very able and interesting paper on Arts and Crafts, detailing her experiences in different centers of the work. She had a number of illustrations which were passed around and much enjoyed. The Quartette sang again after which Mrs. P. B. Hardy presented very clearly and forcibly the subject of Woman Suffrage, and in closing invited all in sympathy to sign a petition to be presented to Congress. A number of questions were asked her and answered clearly and comprehensively. The house was decorated with flags and tiny flags served as souvenirs of the pleasing event.

Refreshments were served.

MEN'S BANQUET.

At 6:30 tonight the men of the Presbyterian church will hold their annual banquet in the parlors of the church. The men will assemble in the auditorium and from there go to the tables.

The program will consist of three vocal numbers, a solo by Mr. Ellis: a trio by Messrs Dickenson, Slater and Ellis; quartette—Dickinson, Slayton, Ellis and Slater. There will be a violin solo by Duaine Service. Mr. Hurst will give Swedish recitations. J. Q. Look and Rev. Shaw will give brief talks.

The address of the evening will be given by Prof. Claud VanTyne, on the subject of "Abraham Lincoln."

ICE COMPANY

NEW COMPANY FORMED MONDAY.

Tecumseh Lake Ice Company Make the Following Announcement.

We, the undersigned having bought the interests of G. R Gillespie, H. E. Hand, Eugene Service and Robert McClelland in the Tecumseh Lake Ice Co. would respectfully announce that we have discontinued all law suits arising from the rights to the ice on the Brownville Pond, except such as are now owned by the Smith estate and leased by us and would hereby solicit the patronage of any one wanting ice when it is ready to cut. It is our intention to furnish ice as reasonable as it, can possibly be afforded taking into consideration the extremely short crop this season.

We have already secured 1000 tons of Lake Ice and about the same amount from the Globe mill pond.

While this amount will hardly be sufficent to supply our customers yet should the weather turn colder we shall secure 1000 tons more, which amount will be amply sufficient to supply all demands.

We are not in the business solely for the purpose of making big money nor for the purpose of forming a monopoly but for our own protection as we are larger users of ice ourselves.

We would further say if this ice company had not been formed last year, there would not have been one half enough ice to have supplied this village and if we had depended on ice shipped in during the summer, we would have had to pay at least 25 per cent more for our ice.

Soliciting the good will and patronage of the citizens of Tecumseh and surrounding territory we remain,

Very truly yours,
The Tecumseh Lake Ice Co.,

HONOR FATHER OF COUNTRY.

Washington's Birthday Observed Throughout Nation.

NOTED MEN MAKE SPEECHES

Addresses Delivered by Taft, Hughes, Fort and Others—General Holiday in Every State Except Mississippi. Appropriate Exercises in Schools Everywhere.

Although the celebration of the centennial of the birth of Lincoln has overshadowed this year the birthday of George Washington, the usual honors are being paid today to the memory of the Father of His Country. As a legal holiday today is far more widely observed than Lincoln day, since the adoption of the latter day as a holiday has not become general in the greater part of the states. Washington's birthday is a legal holiday in every state except Mississippi. There, as elsewhere, the day is observed with exercises in the public schools.

President Elect Taft delivered an address today at the University of Pennsylvania; Governor Fort of New Jersey spoke at the annual celebration of the Union League club of Chicago, and Governor Hughes of New York was the principal speaker at the winter convocation of George Washington university in the national capital.

THE DAY IN PHILADELPHIA.

Taft Delivers Oration at the University of Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—The principal feature of Washington's birthday in this city is the presence of President Elect Taft as guest of the University of Pennsylvania. Mr. Taft delivered the university day oration in the Academy of Music today and will be the guest of the University of Pennsylvania Alumni society at its annual dinner in the university gymnasium tonight.

For many years Washington's birthday has been a great day in the university's calendar. The orators are chosen among the leading speakers of the nation. Among Mr. Taft's predecessors have been President Roosevelt, President McKinley and the Hon. Joseph H. Choate.

FORT SPEAKS IN CHICAGO.

Principal Orator at Washington's Birthday Celebration Today.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—The main features of this city's celebration of Washington's birthday are the two great public mass meetings and the annual banquet of the Union League club.

Governor Fort of New Jersey was the principal speaker today at the first of the mass meetings. The other speakers are William Dudley Foulke, the well known Indiana reformer; President Stryker of Hamilton college and the Hon. Joseph Willett of Georgia, one of the leading orators of the south.

Chicago has not permitted its enthusiasm over Lincoln to cause it to forget Father George, and the arrangements for today's celebrations are probably the most elaborate ever made.

AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Crowds Gather at George Washington University to Hear Hughes Today.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Washington's birthday being a legal holiday in the District of Columbia, it is being generally observed in this city. Various celebrations of the day are being held, among the most interesting being that at George Washington university.

The principal speaker at the university was Governor Hughes of New York. He has many admirers here, and there was a large gathering at the university to hear his address. The occasion was the winter convocation of the university. A reception was planned for the governor after the convocation.

SCHOOLS REMEMBER HIM.

Appropriate Exercises Commemorate Birth of Washington.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—Michigan and Detroit are today thoroughly fulfilling the time honored and greatly beloved custom of observing the anniversary of the birth of the nation's first president.

Business is pretty well suspended. The schools particularly are reviving the memories of Washington with appropriate exercises.

In this city Sunday Washington and his life was the subject of many sermons.

Use For Uniforms.

"Do you think we ought to have a bigger army and a larger navy?"

"Oh, yes," replied the beautiful girl. "It would be so nice if all the boys at the dances could appear in uniform, with epaulets and braided collars."—Chicago Record-Herald.

All She Paid For.

On her way home from morning service Mrs. Scott complained to the friend who had joined her of the exceeding dullness of the sermon.

"Yes, mamma, but it was very cheap," little Jimmy hastened to say. "You only paid a dime for it."

An Obliging Caller.

When M. Clemenceau was in the French chamber of deputies he became for some reason the idol of the workingman, but his popularity, according to the course of nature, brought its penalties. He was besieged by all sorts of people, who came merely to ask questions, and sometimes they were questions of the most trivial sort.

He was originally a doctor and used to give advice for nothing at certain hours of the day. One morning a workingman entered his room, and Clemenceau said without looking up from his writing:

"Take off your coat and shirt. I'll attend to you directly."

Three minutes later he found the man had stripped to the waist.

"There is nothing the matter with you," said the doctor when he had made an examination.

"I know there isn't," returned the man.

"Then what did you come for?"

"To consult you on a political question."

"But what did you strip for?"

"I thought you wanted an illustration of the emaciated body of the man who lives by the sweat of his brow."

The political question remained unanswered. M. Clemenceau was too exasperated to do more than tell the man to dress and go home.

Why Our Railroads Are Narrow Gauge.

Why are all railroads built on the standard gauge of four feet eight and one-half inches? The makers of the first locomotives thought only of putting their machines upon the tramways already in existence, and from that followed a very interesting and curious result. These tram lines naturally had exactly the width prescribed by the strength of one horse. By mere inertia the horse cart gauge established itself in the world, and everywhere the train is dwarfed to a scale that limits alike its comfort, power and speed. Because there is so much capital engaged and because of the dead power of custom it is doubtful if there will ever be any change in this gauge. Still, it might be worse. If the biggest horses had been Shetland ponies our railway carriages now would only be wide enough to hold two persons side by side and would have a maximum speed of twenty miles an hour. There is hardly a reason aside from this antiquated horse why the railway coach should not be nine or ten feet wide—that is, the width of the smallest room in which people can live in comfort and furnished with all the equipment of comfortable chambers.—Atlantic.

Thiers as a Prompter.

Among the anecdotes related by the Marquis Massa in his "Souvenirs et Impressions" is one about the first president of the French republic. It runs: "A short time after young Thiers had been elected as a legislator a number of our set arranged to give a performance of 'Roman chez la portiere' at the house of a mutual friend. On the evening of the performance our prompter deserted us, and without a moment's hesitation the new fledged deputy volunteered to take the place, and despite the protests of some of the party, who feared that his dignity might be everlastingly injured, he jumped into the box, where he remained ready to help us in time of need until the curtain descended on what proved to be a highly satisfactory performance."

Hunting With Lighted Crabs.

A group of clubmen seated about an odorous cedar fire talked of hunting.

"Once I hunted with lighted crabs," said an ex-consul. "It was in the desolate region of France called La Vendée. There is no hunting there but sea gulls (which the French adore to shoot) and rabbits. It was to get the rabbits that we used the crabs. We caught some dozens of small, lively fellows, fastened on their backs lighted candles and shoved them down into rabbit holes. The rabbits, scared to death by those strange moving lights, rushed forth frantically—forth into the very muzzles of our guns. This sounds rather frisky perhaps, but it is a Vendean custom as widespread as coon hunting in the south."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Grant and Sumner.

Concerning the reliability of things in print, it is recalled that Charles Sumner criticised General Grant savagely, and some time after some one was talking to Grant about atheism in New England and remarked, "Even Sumner does not believe in the Bible." "Why should he?" quietly replied Grant. "He didn't write it."

Gathering Ammunition.

"What makes you think our new congressman is going to be so successful as a speechmaker?" said one constituent.

"Because," answered the other, "whenever he hears a story that strikes him as funny he goes into the hall and makes a note of it in his memorandum book."—Washington Star.

One Way of Putting It.

"Although he goes to the club every night, he's always happy when it's time to go home."

"In other words, he doesn't go home till he's happy. Is that it?"—Exchange.

Very High.

"I just got that doctor's bill for that fever of mine."

"How was it?"

"It was a very high fever—higher than I dreamed."—Bellman.

A good reputation is a fair estate.—Shakespeare.

Compassionate.

Small Margie drew the picture of a dog and cat on her slate, and, calling her mother's attention to it, she said:

"Of course a cat ought to have only four legs, mamma, but I drew this one with six so it could run away from the dog."—Exchange.

Mild Laxative for Baby Free

The child of today is the parent of the future, and whether it grows up healthy and strong, or puny and weak, depends upon the intelligence of its parents, for most children are born into the world healthy, but thousands become future weaklings between birth and the age of ten, when the parents are still in greatest control.

The prime cause of trouble is in the stomach. A baby that is digesting its food seldom cries and always looks cheerful; the little child whose stomach is good romps and plays and never whines; the growing child learns well at school and is eager for fun if its head is clear and its stomach light, and that means if it has no constipation.

The best and safest way to cure any irregularity of the stomach and bowels in children is by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a liquid laxative wonderful in its effect as Mrs. John W. Dunham, Apple Creek, O., Mrs. H. L. Cullum, Pleasville, Ind., and numerous others can testify who give it to their children with extraordinary results.

A bottle only costs 50 cents or $1 according to the size you want, and even one 50-cent bottle will do a wonderful amount of good in a family. It can be given to any member of the family in constipation, sour stomach, indigestion, torpid liver, dyspepsia, heartburn, sick headache and similar digestive troubles. It never gripes or strangles like pills, tablets, salts and powders, which should not be given to children, women or old folks.

If you have a child or other member of the family who needs it but has never used this grand laxative tonic, send your name and address to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent to your home. In this way you can find out what it will do without personal expense.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

A Story of Father Mathew.

"Father Mathew was the most loving and lovable of human beings," and in the light of this statement found in a biography of the famous Irish priest by Mrs. Katherine Tynan Hinkson two incidents of his crusade for temperance in the north of Ireland should be read.

At Clones, in Ulster, there were two Orange flags raised when he visited it. Instead of considering it as an insult, he thought it a very great compliment, never having seen one or been honored with one before. When he saw them he called for three cheers for the Orange flag. Commenting on this, an Irish writer says:

"A Catholic priest calling for a cordial salutation of the Orange banner and a Catholic assembly heartily responding was something almost inconceivable. It had never occurred before in Ireland. I'm afraid it has never occurred since."

For the time being there were good will and friendly feeling from one end of Ulster to the other. One recruit who knelt for Father Mathew's blessing said:

"You wouldn't be blessing me if you knew what I am."

"And what are you, my dear?" Father Mathew called men, women and children "my dear."

"I am an Orangeman, your reverence."

"Why, God bless you, my dear, I wouldn't care if you were a lemon man!"

A Lost Fee.

The Right Hon. Augustine Birrell once believed that he had been smitten with a mortal disease and went to consult a distinguished doctor who lived in the neighborhood of Harley street and who was a great expert on the disease of which he thought he was a victim. It was a hot day in July, and as he walked from his London home, which was in the neighborhood of Addison road, to Harley street he perspired freely.

He found the great physician's rooms all crowded with patients—probably, he thought, suffering from a similar complaint to himself.

While waiting he found on the table a book written by the great physician on the subject of the particular disease. He opened the book, and the first words which caught his eye were these: "The patient who is suffering from this disease never perspires."

He had Scotch blood in his veins, so he picked up his hat and gloves and walked out, and he never saw that eminent physician.—London Scraps.

Reynard's Cunning.

While crossing an old field waist high with withered mullein stalks, goldenrod and other weeds I noticed a dog within forty feet. He was partly hidden by the grasses, but appeared to be a young, reddish brown setter, pottering along, smelling at this clump and that bunch of weeds and gradually circling behind me. In a few minutes I heard a yell, "There goes a fox." Sure enough, over the top of a neighboring hill a hundred yards away went my "dog." It was a shrewd piece of work on his part to throw me off my guard by seeming indifferent and when behind me and out of sight to streak it for cover. I had probably disturbed him during his afternoon siesta. Many a fox have I hunted and killed, but this one fooled me completely. It forms a very pleasant recollection as an instance of brute sagacity.—Forest and Stream.

A Regimental Custom.

A peculiar custom obtains in the Twelth lancers—the playing of the Vesper hymn, the Spanish chant and the Russian national hymn every night of the year after the "last post" has sounded. It is said that the playing of the Vesper hymn originated in one of the officers' wives presenting the regiment with a new set of instruments on condition that the hymn was played every night after the "last post." The playing of the Spanish chant is declared to be a penance for sacking of a convent during the peninsular war. No reason is assigned for the playing of the Russian national anthem.—London Tit-Bits.

A Quick Response.

Mrs. Jones (a suffragette)—I don't ask special privileges, Mr. Jones. What I do ask is that you, for example, a man, should treat me exactly as you would another man. Instead of talking small talk and treating me like a thing to be protected, and all that, assume toward me the attitude you do to Mr. Warrington. Treat me like a good fellow. Mr. Jones (quickly)—Why, certainly, old chap. Lend me a fiver, will you?—London Graphic.

GIVE TAFT FREE HAND.

That is Reason Roosevelt is Going to Africa.

Washington, Feb. 22.—An exceedingly interesting semi-official account of President Roosevelt's proposed hunting expedition into Africa has just been given out here. It is replete with details concerning the trip. But no one portion is of more interest than the giving to the people one particular reason for the expedition—a fact upon which but little stress has been laid up to the present. The statement reads thus:

"Mr. Roosevelt is aware of the manner in which the charge has been circulated that Mr. Taft would be only a Roosevelt man as president, and whatever Mr. Taft, as president, might do, it would be ascribed to Mr. Roosevelt's influence. It is because of this situation that Mr. Roosevelt decided to take himself out of the country, where it would be impossible for anyone to repeat any such charge against President Taft.

"Mr. Roosevelt has well selected a place where his seclusion in this respect is secure, for hardly could a more inaccessible locality be found."

NEW BRITISH DREADNOUGHT

Vanguard, Biggest of His Majesty's Battleships, Launched Today.

Barrow, England, Feb. 22.—The Vanguard, the latest addition to King Edward's battleship fleet, was launched here today.

The Vanguard is the seventh vessel of the Dreadnought class to be constructed for the British navy. When completed she will be the largest, heaviest and most heavily armored battleship in the world. Her keel was laid down April 1, 1906, and the contract calls for her completion within two years from that date. Her total cost will be more than $9,000,000.

Effect of Colors on Animals.

The effect of color upon mind is most easily noticeable in dumb animals, because they make no effort to curb or control their emotions. Wave a red flag at a bull and he becomes violently angry. Shake a red shawl in front of a turkey gobbler and he will storm around fearfully. I made an experiment in the country one summer to see if this same fact held true of other animals. On my farm I had an enormously fat, lazy pig that disliked nothing so much as to move. All day long it used to lie asleep in the sunshine, and sometimes even the attraction of food could not budge it. I took a number of pieces of silk of the same quality, but of different shades, and, after waking the pig, waved each strip of silk in front of it. For the blue and green it never moved, but when I waved the red and orange strips it jumped to its feet, stamped about and appeared to be thoroughly angry. Time and again I repeated this experiment and always with the same result.—Frank Alvah Parsons in Good Housekeeping.

Recognized Their Old Friend.

The late Sir John Steell, who was sculptor to Queen Victoria, was modeling a bust of Miss Nightingale when an officer of one of the highland regiments which had suffered so cruelly in the Crimea heard that the bust had just been completed and was in Sir John's studio. Many of the men in his company had passed through the hospital at Scutari, and he obtained permission from the sculptor to bring some of them to see it. Accordingly a squad of men one day marched into the studio and stood in line. They had no idea why they had been mustered in so strange a place. Without a word of warning the bust was uncovered, and then, as by one impulse, the men broke rank and with cries of "Miss Nightingale, Miss Nightingale!" surrounded the model and, with hats off, cheered the figure of their devoted nurse until the roof rang. So spontaneous and hearty and so inspiring was the whole scene that in after days Sir John Steell declared it to be the greatest compliment of his life.

Hard to Kill.

A distinguished entomologist, J. C. Warburg, writes: "When I was still new to collecting, in the south of France I discovered one day, to my great joy, a large female of Saturnia pyri hidden away in some bushes. The specimen was the first I had ever caught, and I decided, on account of its large body, to stuff it (a quite unnecessary operation; I have kept dozens since unstuffed). The moth was first apparently killed by being forced into a cyanide bottle, where it was left about an hour. The abdomen was then emptied and the cavity filled with cotton wool soaked in a saturated solution of mercuric chloride. The insect, pinned and set, was discovered next day attempting to fly away from the setting board."

Eat What
You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

SENATE ORATES FOR HOURS.

Dickinson Primary Bill Considered In Upper House.

DO AWAY WITH CONVENTIONS.

Long Discussion Results In Showing. Majority Favor Such Move—Whole Matter Put Over For Week—House Passes Bill Putting Clairvoyants and Fortune Tellers Out of Business.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 25.—The Dickinson primary bill was taken up in the senate Wednesday as per schedule. For three long hours senators debated and wrangled over the bill. When it was all over not one thing definite in the way of legislation had been accomplished, but the development established beyond question these two facts:

First, the majority of the senate favors a popular advisory vote of United States senators. Second, the majority of the senate is in favor of the nomination of the whole state ticket by direct primaries, thereby doing away with the state convention.

MacKay Is Eloquent.

Not since the session opened has there been such a play of oratory. Senator John MacKay of Wayne county set forth his sentiments in masterly eloquence, going at times away back to ancient Greece and Rome for the sake of illustration. Senators Whitney, Smith and Moriarty seconded him in rapping the whole primary reform agitation. Senator Tuttle came out plump in favor of an advisory vote for senator. It is not by the legislature that the United States senators is elected under the present system, he said, but by the party caucus held previously to the election, and expression of the people, he argued, would merely put an end to the party caucus, which was never contemplated by the framers of the constitution.

The whole thing wound up by the Dickinson measure being put over for further consideration until next Wednesday afternoon.

Fortune Telling Harmless.

Representative John Stevenson's bill to put clairvoyants and all other kinds of fortune tellers out of business carried the house Wednesday afternoon by a vote of 61 to 22, although Representative Charles Flowers and Judge Heckert tried to kill it. Flowers argued that fortune telling is largely a harmless amusement and then, too, palmistry has become such a serious science that books have been written on it; and, anyhow, the bill was vicious measure.

Judge Heckert insisted that it was a knock at religious tolerance, inasmuch as some people who patronize mediums get more or less religious confirmation from the seances.

However, Representatives Warner, Haviland, Fouch, Guy Miller and one or two others talked the other way, and the bill now goes to the senate.

The bill to prevent any kind of outdoor games on Memorial day failed at passage in the house, but the vote was reconsidered, and it was tabled. It had been amended so much that its friends voted against it.

ICICLE HIT HER.

Blow on Head Causes Northville Woman's Death.

Northville, Mich., Feb. 25.—Mrs. George Rayson, who was injured by being struck on the head by a piece of ice, is dead. Mrs. Rayson, who was the wife of a leading merchant, and a prominent church worker and member of the local W. R. C., went to the home of a neighbor, and when about to ascend the steps of the front porch a large icicle fell from the roof, striking her on the head.

Will Drag Creek For Her Body.

Monroe, Mich., Feb. 25.—Mrs. Peter Suzore, the wealthy widow who in a delirium of typhoid fever escaped from her home Monday evening, is still missing, despite the fact that more than fifty of the neighbors have been conducting an organized hunt. Sandy creek, a small stream which runs near the home of Mrs. Suzore, will be dragged.

Farmer Killed by Train.

St. Joseph, Mich., Feb. 25.—Stumbling along a country road in a dense fog, Charlie Emlong, Lake township farmer, was struck by a Pere Marquette passenger train at a point half a mile south of Stevensville, south of here, and instantly killed.

To Honor Custer's Memory.

Monroe, Mich., Feb. 25.—It has been definitely decided by the Custer Memorial commission that the unveiling exercises would be held some time in October next. The exact day will be decided later. The Custer monument will cost $65,000.

TAFT'S CABINET NOW COMPLETE

Treasury Portfolio Has at Last Been Filled.

FRANKLIN MACVEAGH THE MAN

Chicago Citizen Accepts Offer—Still Some Matters to Be Looked After Before Official Announcement Can Be Made—Mrs. Taft Joins Her Husband in New York.

New York, Feb. 25.—President Elect William H. Taft has completed his cabinet by the offer of the treasury portfolio and its acceptance. That the offer was made to and accepted by Franklin MacVeagh of Chicago is as near a positive statement of what is believed to be the fact as may be made in the face of an absolute refusal by Mr. Taft to throw any light on the most interesting situation.

It is vaguely hinted that there are things to be accomplished in Washington before an announcement may be properly made.

Mrs. Taft has joined her husband from Philadelphia. The two were the guests at dinner last night of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Wickersham, Mr. Taft's attorney general, and later with them witnessed the play, "The Gentleman from Mississippi," at the Bijou theater.

The arrival of President Elect Taft and his party at the theater was made the occasion of a noisy and enthusiastic demonstration by the audience.

SOCIETY WOMEN ARRESTED

Suffragette Movement In England Becoming Serious Problem.

London, Feb. 25.—Every effort of the suffragettes to force the hand of the government becomes more determined, and it is increasingly difficult to predict how their demands may be successfully parried.

The situation has taken on an embarrassing aspect for the government owing to the high social position of many among some thirty or more women just arrested, these including Mrs. Patrick Lawrence, Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton and daughter of the former viceroy of Indiana; Miss Stratford Dugdale, daughter of Commander Dugdale and cousin of Hon. William R. W. Peel, who has just been elected in a bye-election as member of the house of commons for Taunton; Miss Daisy Solomon, daughter of the ex-premier of Cape Colony, and Mrs. Catherine Elizabeth Corbett, an aristocratic supporter of the suffragette movement.

An attempt was made on the part of the suffragettes last night to force themselves on Premier Asquith, who had previously declined by letter to receive a deputation.

The police, abandoning former tactics of barring the approach to the house of commons, adopted the new plan of breaking up the processions before the house was reached.

The demonstrations did not occasion such scenes of roughness and violence as on some former occasions.

CHILDREN NOT SOLD.

Italian Ambassador Investigates Reports Following Quake.

Washington, Feb. 25.—After an official investigation, conducted by cable, Baron Mayor des Planches, the Italian ambassador, has issued an official denial of a recently published story to the effect that in the stress and confusion following the recent earthquake in southern Italy a large number of orphaned children had been sold into "white slavery" abroad.

The attention of the embassy was called to the story some days ago, and the ambassador immediately cabled his government. Advices just received state that the story is groundless, as immediately after the disaster the minister of the interior issued stringent orders to the officials at all ports and on the frontiers to prevent the immigration of all minor orphans.

Society Man Goes to Prison.

New York, Feb. 25.—The trial of Carl Fisher-Hansen, the lawyer and society man under indictment charging him with the bribery of a witness, has been brought to a sudden close by the entering of a plea of guilty by the defendant at the amended complaint charging attempted bribery. A sentence of five months in the penitentiary was imposed on Fisher-Hansen by Justice Dowling.

Lamp Fell on Her.

Charlotte, Mich., Feb. 25.—Miss Laura Casler, one of the most popular young society ladies of Charlotte, was terribly burned at her home. While preparing to attend a Washington's birthday ball, a hanging lamp fell and broke, saturating her clothing with the burning oil.

SPERRY TO GO TO WASHINGTON

Rumored Friction Between Officers Has to Do With It.

ARNOLD ALSO TO REPORT.

To Appear Before Naval Board Meeting—Numerous Gales Toss Small Craft About at Fort Monroe and Cause Minor Accidents—Sperry to Continue In Command.

Fort Monroe, Va., Feb. 25.—Numerous gales and storms, sweeping over the battleship fleet, have caused several minor accidents.

The big ships did not suffer from the blows, but the steam launches running to the shore made decidedly heavy weather of it.

Two sailors on ships' launches were tossed overboard, but both were rescued. A launch belonging to the battleship Rhode Island was partly wrecked in trying to come alongside the ship's gangway. A party of ladies was aboard, and when the wave tossed boat crashed into a side boom of the armorclad several of those on board fainted. The launch drifted rapidly away from the ship, the engine having caught a "dead center" in reversing.

Another little steamer was sent to pick her up, but the helpless launch had drifted more than half a mile in the choppy seas before being secured.

Only the expert seamanship of the navy coxswains and deckhands in charge of the launches prevented more serious mishaps.

The water has been the roughest known in recent years in Hampton Roads. Many tea and dinner parties planned on board the various ships had to be postponed, while scores of visitors who went early to the anchored vessels had to remain on board until late before they could be sent ashore.

Shore boats did not attempt to make the battleship lines. Rear Admiral Sperry will leave for Washington this afternoon. He goes to consult with the navy department authorities as to the further plans for the fleet. Admiral Sperry will continue as commander in chief of the battleship fleet until the date of his retirement in September.

Admiral Sperry is under orders to report to the president on his trip to Washington and to appear at a naval board meeting. Admiral Arnold is also to report to Washington later.

It is rumored in the fleet that the appearance of the two senior officers in Washington will have to do with the friction that developed between Admirals Arnold, Schroeder and Sperry over Schroeder being outranked by Arnold.

WILL TAKE CENSUS.

California to Determine How Many Japs Are In State.

Sacremento, Feb. 25.—The senate has passed the bill providing for a census of Japanese in the state to determine whether or not California should ask for a general Asiatic exclusion act.

The bill already has passed the assembly and will be signed by the governor at once.

It empowers the state labor commissioner to take the census.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Rev. O. S. Edwards of Battle Creek has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Lutheran church at LaGrange, Ind.

James McGuire, aged twenty, a lumber jack, was crushed by rolling logs near Pembine. He died twenty minutes after the accident.

A big temperance rally as a boom for the local option campaign in Eaton county has been planned for next Sunday night, in the opera house at Eaton Rapids.

The voters of Muskegon will have a bunch of four candidates from which to choose their mayor, three Republicans and one Democrat having entered the race.

Commissioner of Insurance Barry, with the assistance of the attorney general, is preparing several repeal measures for the "dead" insurance laws which now exist.

Four men are under arrest at Big Rapids, and two more have left the vicinity, accused of violating the game laws. The men hunted a deer which has been in the woods near there for several days.

The police of Port Huron have been asked to locate Jacob Hauch, an Oil Springs (Ont.) man who disappeared from his home on Feb. 10. Hauch was going to visit relatives at Berlin, Ont., and his family fear that he has

SHRUBB-DORANDO RACE.

Long Distance Cracks In Fifteen Mile Contest In Buffalo Tonight.

Buffalo, Feb. 25.—In the Seventy-fourth regiment armory tonight Pietri Dorando, the Italian runner, and Alfred Shrubb, the English crack, will meet in a fifteen mile race. Unless all signs fail it will be a race that will fully repay the sports who have come here from many points to see it run.

Both Dorando and Shrubb are in fine condition, having trained hard for tonight's race. The Englishman has declared that he will retrieve his reputation, which has suffered from his recent defeat by Longboat in a Marathon race in New York. Dorando is not talking much, but his friends are confident.

Longboat was originally scheduled to run; but, owing to a disagreement between Shrubb and the Indian, Dorando was substituted.

COLONEL COOPER HEAVY DEFAULTER.

Starts Out to Prove It In Carmack Murder Case.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 25.—After a day replete with exciting incidents and interesting developments, Wednesday's session of the trial of Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, Robin Cooper and John D. Sharpe for the murder of former Senator E. W. Carmack closed with the aged defendant, Colonel Cooper, still on the stand.

Among the first things the state did on cross examination was to announce that it would try to prove that Colonel Cooper was a defaulter to the extent of more than $100,000 while clerk and master of chancery of Maury county. This precipitated a bitter fight between counsel, during which some harsh words were used and much anger displayed.

The state won a partial victory and straightway sprang another surprise. It resurrected some old legislative records concerning an investigation into the defalcation of State Treasurer M. T. Polk in the early 80's. It offered to prove that thousands of dollars of the state's money was invested by Polk, with Colonel Cooper and others, in a Mexican silver mine scheme, a walnut log scheme in North Carolina and a scheme to buy the Nashville American.

Colonel Cooper admitted that there were irregularities in his office of clerk and master of chancery, but said they were due to bad management and poor bookkeeping and that every dollar was made good. He admitted that Polk was his partner in the ventures named, but declared that he himself never handled a dollar of the money and had no knowledge that it was taken from the state's strong box.

Colonel Cooper did not contradict himself on any point.

TALK OF WAR.

Situation Between Russia and Balkan States Very Strained.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 25.—The pessimism with regard to the Balkan crisis is steadily deepening in diplomatic circles, where it is believed that Austran action against Servia may be expected within a fortnight unless a solution to the present grave problem is soon arranged.

Foreign office officials state that Russia is not disposed to consider an invasion of Servia alone as a causus belli, but there is a fear that the government's hand may be forced under such circumstances by popular feeling. The beginning of hostilities would throw thousands of Russian volunteers into Servian ranks.

Duma leaders who have visited the foreign office expressed themselves as convinced that war is inevitable. The Kiev army department is ready for instant mobilization.

Makes Long Flight.

Baddeck, N. S., Feb. 25.—The Aerial association has continued experiments with Aerodrome No. 4, the McCurdy Silverdart. Mr. McCurdy made a magnificent flight of four and a half miles at the rate of forty miles an hour, flying above Baddeck bay at an elevation of between forty and fifty feet. At one point he crossed a tongue of land, going over a tree on his way.

Rear Admiral Franklin Dead.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Rear Admiral Samuel R. Franklin, retired, is dead at his home in this city, aged eighty-four. He was a native of Pennsylvania and was appointed a midshipman from that state to the naval academy in 1841. The admiral retired in August, 1887.

Still No Choice For Senator.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 25.—The sixteenth ballot of the Wisconsin legislature, in joint convention, for United States senator has resulted in no choice. Stephenson received 56 out of 128 votes cast.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Carelessness is really laziness under a more polite name.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by all dealers.

THE BARRIER

ration, as compared with others, was most conservative. Even so she shrank at sight of herself below the line of sunburn, for she was ringed about like a blue winged teal, the demarcation being more pronounced because of the natural whiteness of her skin. She sat down, dress and all, in the thick softness of a great brown bearskin and thought it over.

How old it was, now that she considered it, that she needed no aid with these alien garments; that she knew instinctively their every feature; that there was no intricacy to cause her more than an instant's trouble.

She was interrupted in her reverie by the passing of a shadow across her window and the stamp of a man's feet on the planks at the door. Of course it was Poleon, who had come back to see her. So she rose hastily, gave one quick glance at the mirror above her washstand, choosing the side that distorted her image the least, and, hearing him still stamping, perfunctorily called:

"Come in! I'll be right out."

She kicked the train into place behind her, looping the shawl carelessly about her in a way to veil her modesty effectively. She crossed proudly to the reading table to give him a fair view of her splendor and was in the middle of the room before she looked up. Taken aback, she uttered a little strangled cry and made a quick movement of retreat, only to check herself and stand with her chin high in the air, while wave after wave of color swept over her face.

"Great lovely dove!" ejaculated Burrell fervently, staring at her.

"Oh, I—I thought you were Poleon. He"— In spite of herself she glanced toward her room as if to flee. She writhed at the utter absurdity of her appearance and knew the lieutenant must be laughing at her. But flight would only make it worse. Burrell, however, was not laughing.

"I was looking for your father," he said, wondering if this glorious thing could be the quaint half breed girl of yesterday. There was nothing of the native about her now, for her lithe young figure was drawn up to its height, and her head, upon which the long black braids were coiled, was tipped back in a haughty poise. She had flung her hands out to grasp the table edge behind her, forgetful of her shawl, which drooped traitorously and showed such rounded lines as her ordinary dress scarce hinted at. This was no Indian maid, the soldier vowed. No blood but the purest could pulse in such veins; no spirit save the highest could flash in such eyes as these. A jealous rancor irked him at the thought of this beauty intended for the Frenchman's eyes.

"Can't you show yourself to me as well as to Poleon?" he said.

"Certainly not!" she declared. "He bought this dress for me, and I put it on to please him. After he sees it I will take it off, and"—

"Don't—don't take it off—ever," said Burrell. "I thought you were beautiful before because of your quaintness and simplicity, but now"—his chest swelled—"why, this is a breath from home. You're like my sister and the girls back in Kentucky, only more wonderful."

"Am I?" she cried eagerly. "Am I like other girls? Do I really look as if I'd always worn clothes like these?"

"Born to them," said he.

Her warmth and unaffected frankness suffused him as she stood out, turning to show the beauties of her gown, her brown hands fluttering tremulously as she talked.

"It's my first party dress, you know, and I'm as proud of it as Molly is of her rubber boots. It's too big in here and too small right there. That girl must have had a bad chest. But otherwise it fits me as if it had been made for me, doesn't it? And the shoes—aren't they the dearest things? See!" She held her skirts back, showing her two feet side by side, her dainty ankles slim and shapely in their silk.

"They don't wear as well as moccasins." Both laughed delightedly till he broke in impulsively:

"Oh, girl, don't you know how beautiful you are?"

"Of course I do," she cried, imitating his change of voice, then added naively, "That's why I hate to take it off."

"Where did you learn to wear things like that?" he questioned. "Where did you get that—well, that air?"

"It seems to me I've always known. There's nothing strange about it. The buttons and the hooks and the eyes are all where they belong. It's instinct, I suppose, from father's side."

"Probably. I dare say I should understand the mechanism of a dress suit, even if I'd never seen one," said the man, amused, yet impressed by her argument.

"I've always had visions of women dressed in this kind of clothing, white women, never natives, not dressed like this exactly, but in dainty, soft things, not at all like the ones I wear. I seem to have a memory, although it's hardly that either; it's more like a dream, as if I were somebody else. Father says it is from reading too much."

"A memory of what?"

"It's too vague and tantalizing to tell what it is, except that I should be called Merridy."

"Merridy? Why that?"

"I'll show you. See." She slipped her hand inside the shawl and drew from her breast a thin gold chain on which was strung a band ring. "It was grandmother's. That's where I got the fancy for the name of Merridy, I suppose."

"May I look?"

"Of course. But I daren't take it off, I haven't had it off my neck since I was a baby." She held it out for him to examine, and, although it brought his head close to hers, there was no trace of coquetry in the invitation. He read the inscription, "From Dan to Merridy," but had no realization of what it meant, for he glimpsed the milk white flesh almost at his lips and felt her breath stirring his hair, while the delicate scent of her person seemed to loose every strong emotion in him. She was so dainty and yet so virile, so innocent and yet so wise, so cold and yet so pulsating.

"It is very pretty," he said inanely.

At the look in his eyes as he raised his head her own widened, and she withdrew from him imperceptibly, dismissing him with a mere inflection.

"I wish you would send Poleon here. It's time he saw his present."

As Burrell walked out into the air he shut his jaws grimly and muttered: "Hold tight, young man. She's not your kind—she's not your kind."

Inside the store he found Doret and the trader in conversation with a man he had not met before, a ragged nondescript whose overalls were blue and faded and patched, particularly on the front of the legs above the knees, where a shovel handle wears hardest; whose coat was of yellow mackinaw, the sleeves worn thin below the elbows, where they had rubbed against his legs in his work. As the soldier entered the man turned on him a small, shrewd, weather beaten face with one eye while he went on talking to Gale.

"It ain't nothin' to git excited over, but it's wuth follerin'. If I wasn't so cussed unlucky I'd know there was a pay streak som'ere close by."

"Your luck is bound to change, Lee," said the trader, who helped him to roll up a pack of provisions.

"Mebbe so. Who's the dressmaker?" He jerked his bushy head toward Burrell, who had stopped at the front door with Poleon to examine some yellow grains in a folded paper.

"He's the boss soldier."

"Purty, ain't he?"

"If you ain't good he'll get you," said Gale, a trifle cynically, at which Lee chuckled.

The one eyed man snorted derisively. "It ain't wuth considerin'!"

"Why not?" insisted Gale guardedly. "Maybe I've got a record. You don't know."

"If you have, don't tell me nothin' about it," hastily observed Lee. "I'm a God fearin' citizen myself, leanin' ever toward peace and quietudes, but what's past is dead and gone, and I'd hate to see a lispin' child like that blue and feller party try to reezureck it."

"He's got the American army to back him up, at least five of them."

"Five agin a hundred. He aims to overawe us, don't he?" snickered the unregenerate Lee, but his wrinkles changed and deepened as he leaned across the counter confidentially.

"You say the word, John, and I'll take some feller along to help me, and we'll transfer this military post."

"Pshaw! I'm just supposing," said the trader.

"All right. It's up to you. However, if I happen to leap down on this pay streak before it sees me comin' I'm goin' to put my friends in first and foremost and shut out these dressmakers complete. So long!"

Having given Necia's message to Poleon, the lieutenant took up his business with the trader. It concerned the purchase of certain supplies that had been omitted from the military outfit, and when this was concluded he referred to the encounter of that morning.

"I don't want you to think I bungle everything in that manner," he said, "for I don't. I want to work with you, and I want to be friends with you."

"I'm willing," said Gale.

"Nobody dislikes playing policeman more than I do, but it's a part of my

"Oh, I—I thought you were Poleon. He"— duty, and I'll have to do it," continued the young man.

"I reckon you simply aim to keep peace, eh? You ain't looking for nobody in particular?"

"Of course not—outside of certain notorious criminals who have escaped justice and worked north."

"Then there are a few that you want, eh?"

"Yes, certain old timers. The officers at every post have descriptions of a few such, and if they show up we will take them in and hold them till courts are established."

"If you've got their names and descriptions mebbe I could help you," said the trader carelessly.

"Thank you. I'll bring up the list, and we'll go over it together. You must have been here a good while."

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerve, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

DEMOCRATS AT LANSING TODAY.

Menominee Attorney Made Temporary Chairman.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 25.—The temporary chairman of the Democratic state convention, which convenes here today, will be Attorney M. J. Doyle of Menominee. The Democratic state central committee selected Mr. Doyle at a meeting held last night.

The convention will nominate two justices of the supreme court, two regents of the university, a superintendent of public instruction, a member of the state board of education and six members of the state board of agriculture.

Gossip around the hotel lobbies indicates that former gubernatorial candidates would figure prominently on the ticket. L. T. Hemans of Mason, candidate for governor last fall, is prominently mentioned for regent, and W. N. Ferris of Big Rapids, Democratic candidate for governor four years ago, will probably be the second candidate for regent.

Charles Kimmerle of Cassopolis, candidate for governor two years ago, is prominently mentioned for member of the state board of agriculture. Attorney Mark Morris of Grand Rapids is mentioned for justice of the supreme court and W. S. Lister of Ionia for superintendent of public instruction.

The Secret Of Long Life.

A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. But long ago millions of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolongs life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, rebuilds wasted nerve cells, imparts life and tone to the entire system. Its a godsend to weak, sick and debilitated people. BANQUET

Given by the Men's Class of the Presbyterian Church.

TUESDAY EVENING WITH OVER 160 IN ATTENDANCE.

Prof. C. H. VanTyne of Ann Arbor delivered the address.

On Tuesday evening the men's class of the Presbyterian church gave their annual banquet in the parlors of the church. One hundred sixty men gathered in the auditorium between 6:30 and 7:00, when they marched to the banquet tables, while Mrs. F. B. Wood rendered America at the piano. After Rev. Cheney of the Friends church asked the blessing, the guests were seated at the tables and partook of an excellent three course supper, consisting of the following menu: Tomato bouillon, wafers, roast pork, cranberries, mashed potatoes, brown gravy, salad, pie, doughnuts, white and brown bread, cheese and coffee. Those who had the affair in charge were: Mesdames B. W. Anderson, J. J. Freeman, J. W. Dunning, R. A. Heesen, R. M. Boyd, A. D. Lawrence, P. W. A. Fitzsimmons, L. I. Bidwell, J. L. Anderson, R. B. Gillespie, R. T. Mead and Burroughs and they were ably assisted in the serving by the following ladies: Mesdames Guy Nemire, Mattie Gillen, Herbert Temple, Albert Lowry, Richard Mclles, Elmer Slayton, Harold Anderson, and Misses Anna and Alice Cutting, Margaret Haire, Margaret Mahoney, Lulu Aylesworth, Helen Wilson, Edith Gray, Anna Sonkie, Margaret Morrison, Sarah Platt, Florence Eccles, Ernestine Anderson, Bess Spayde, Beth Widney, Allie Owen, Zilla Mills and May Lowry. The souvenirs were folders a portion of them bearing the likeness of Washington and others his Mt. Vernon home, on the outside, while the inside contained the menu, and the programme. Above the speakers table pictures of Washington and Lincoln were hung, draped with our National colors.

Concluding the serving, Rev. J. W. Dunning as toastmaster, announced the program for the evening.

Mr. J. Duaine Service delighted the audience with a violin solo, rendering, "Legende, Op. 17" with Mrs. E. C. Codling, as accompanist. Mr Service responded to an encore with "Annie Laurie."

J Q Look, as president of the men's class, extended a hearty welcome to the guests.

Mr. Ellsworth Ellis followed with a pleasing solo, "The Bandolero," and was obliged to respond to an encore. He gave, "The Little Irish Girl."

Rev. D. Stanley Shaw, as president of the Methodist men's class, brought greetings from the class. Rev. Shaw represented the original men's class of Tecumseh, organized by Rev. Ward.

Frank R. Hurst, recited in Sweedish dialect, the Sweeds version of "The Courtship of Miles Standish" and "General George Washington." Beside these he kept his audience in good humor with stories and jokes.

The male trio, consisting of W. S Dickenson, Floyd Slater and Ellsworth Ellis, sang "Kavanagh."

The toastmaster then introduced, Prof Claude H. VanTyne, Ph D., Dep't of History of the U. of M., who delivered an excellent address upon Abraham Lincoln.

Prof. VanTyne is an old Tecumseh boy, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence VanTyne and for several years has occupied the chair of History at the University of Michigan. He is rapidly ascending the ladder of fame, being already one of the greatest historians of the day. Eastern colleges have made many attempts to secure his services but he stands loyally by the college of his native state. His popularity with his home people was expressed by the large number in attendance at the banquet, all of whom listened attentively to his address. In part, Dr. VanTyne said:

"I shall attempt to point out what seems to me the true sources of Lincoln's greatness as a statesman. We know in a vague way that he was one of the world's truly great, and we are apt to give to him all the attributes of other great figures in human history. Yet, if in a fullness of knowledge of the facts of his life and character we calmly sit down to eliminate those elements of greatness found in others, but not found in him, we shall, I think, be surprised at the nature of the residual traits.

"No one would think of ascribing to Lincoln the creative imagination of William Pitt—the power of conceiving and carrying out vast schemes of colonial extension and of world wide domination. The vigorous, unbending, relentless will of a Cromwell was also quite foreign to Lincoln's nature. He could be firm, but he never pressed on with resistless, domineering, overwhelming energies to the attainment of an end. Nor did he have Washington's lofty, heroic mould of mind and body. Lincoln did not have in any marked degree those accurate, painstaking, scholarly mental habits which made James Madison, unaided by a single spark of genius, able almost to dictate what was to be the fundamental law of the greatest republic the world has known. Lincoln would have made a poor figure among trained scholars or in a constitutional convention. Nor did he have Hamilton's cold intellectual grasp of administrative questions. Even the democratic philosophy of Jefferson, that idealism which made the great founder of the Democratic party a patron of the plain people, was not to be found in Lincoln. 'Honest Abe' was a 'genuine sans culotte, his veins uncontaminated by one drop of gentility' in the conventional sense of that word. He could not patronize the plain people because he was so wholly one of them.

"If Abraham Lincoln had none of these traits of typical great men, what was it that made him truly great. If it was not creative imagination, not boundless energy, defiant ambition, nor unyielding will, if not heroic proportions in mind and body if not the intellectual habits of a scholar nor unimpassioned logic, not philosophic idealism, what was it? There were, I think, three qualities which made him unique among all heroes of profane history. The first and greatest was sympathy, abounding, all embracing sympathy with every class of his fellow men. The second was patience which in him was a sort of devotion. Finally he possessed a most unusual good sense, aided in a marked degree by his humor. There were homely traits, seemingly quite too modest to make of their possessor the leader of a mighty nation in the moment of meeting the greatest crisis in its history. Is it any wonder that men failed to recognize him as the man of the hour? No one could see in him any of the traditional characteristics of greatness. It was this exceptional quality of his genius which made so many good men sneer at this awkward, uncouth prairie lawyer, whom political chance had made the nation's leader. On no other hypothesis can we explain why Chase, Seward, Stanton, Dana, C. F. Adams and so many other great men failed at first to see in Lincoln the heroic qualities which the years of war revealed to them and all mankind.

At the close of this able address, the toastmaster tendered Prof. VanTyne a vote of thanks in behalf of the men's class. The Quartette, consisting of Messrs Dickenson, Slayton, Ellis and Slater rendered a selection, "Hail Us, Ye Free," and to an encore, gave Simple Simon.

In closing the National Anthem, "America" was sung by the entire company.

Soldier Balks Death Plot.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a civil war veteran of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." For severe Colds, obstinate Coughs, Hemorrhages, Asthma, and to prevent Pneumonia it's unrivaled. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son, the druggists.

"VAUDEVILLE."

Packed houses greated the "Vaudeville" show at the Opera House last night and we think the performance was well worth the price. It is the first time Tecumseh people have had the chance to see real vaudeville.

The program included Smith & Kleine, the Wooden Shoe Dance artists. They had several fancy steps, and their work was fine.

Roberts & Roberts the German Comedians, were especially good. They got off several hits that were well received by the audience.

The Indian and Spanish Impersonator, Savoy Glen, has an excellent voice all three of his songs taking well with the audience and his dance with the castanets in the Spanish stunt was extremely good.

The Kinetoscope pictures were also a great feature. Blanch Tedrow sang, "If I should Love You," which was liked by every one.

Manager Marks informs us that the next Vaudeville show will be on Friday, March 5th, and he promises another entertainment equally as good if not better.

RICH, RED BLOOD

You Cant's Have It Unless Your Stomach is Right.

In order to keep the blood pure and the body healthy, it is absolutely necessary that the gastric juices in the stomach be throughly mixed or churned with the food.

When the stomach is run down, the walls have lost their elasticity, and have not energy enough to properly mix the food, then dyspepsia, sour stomach, distress, heartburn, sick headache and other annoying ills are bound to result.

There is only one logical way to cure such a condition, and that is to build up the worn out stomach walls.

That's exactly what Mi-o-na tablets do, and that's why C. A. Wright & Son are willing to give you your money back if Mi-o-na doesn't cure dyspepsia, whether acute or chronic. Large box, enough to make light bright for the ordinary dyspeptic, only costs 50 cents. Get a box today.

"Mi-o-na cured me of indigestion of months' standing, and has from me a hearty recommendation and endorsement. Mi-o-na, in my case, worked wonders and in a very short space of time. Prior to using Mi-o-na, I had doctored and used several remedies, without help or benefit." Mrs. John McCann, Tecumseh, Mich., Oct. 16, 1908.

PEOPLE WHO REALLY KNOW WHAT PE-RU-NA IS.

MRS. ALICE J. BORDNER.

Mrs. Emma F. Mumford, No. 1 Olsen's Court, Salt Lake City, Utah, writes:

"Four months ago I became chilled through and through by getting my feet wet.

"The next morning I was stiff and sore with a severe cold which had settled all over my body. The blood seemed to rush to my head, causing dizziness and blinding headaches.

"As soon as Peruna was recommended to me I decided to give it a trial and am pleased to say that it cured me after I had used it only two months.

"I think you have a splendid medicine and gladly endorse it."

People preferring solid medicines should call for Peruna tablets. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

MRS. EMMA F. MUMFORD

Mr. George W. Amory, 337 West 19th St., New York City, New York, writes:

"Somehow I have always had a prejudice against advertised medicine, but I want to make one decided exception in favor of Peruna.

"I caught a cold last winter and it settled in throat and head, developing a most persistent catarrh, which seemed to defy all medicines until I tried Peruna. Before I had used two bottles I considered myself cured."

Catarrh of Bronchial Tubes.

Mr. Wickliffe R. Smith, editor of The Pottatch Herald, formerly principal of the schools at Cameron, Idaho, writes:

"For some time I suffered with catarrh of the throat and bronchial tubes.

"I tried many remedies, but could find nothing that would give me relief. Finally I tried Peruna. Three bottles cured me, sound and well. I believe it will do as much for others as it did for me."

Gained Thirty Pounds.

Mrs. Alice J. Bordner, 1311 Maple Ave., Harrisburg, Pa., writes:

"I have found a cure in Peruna. I cannot recommend Peruna enough, and I also thank you for your kind attention to me. I am as well as could be ever since I began taking Peruna, and will recommend it to others. I only weighed 95 pounds before taking Peruna; now I weigh 125."

Throat and Head.

Mrs. I. D. Hayes, 1987 Druid Hill, Baltimore, Md., writes:

"Peruna is one of the best remedies for grippe, cold in the head, sore throat, nervous headaches, and coughs that has ever been discovered. After the use of one bottle in my family I don't feel safe without Peruna in my house."

In a later letter Mrs. Hayes says: "I am never without a bottle of Peruna in the house. I find it good for most every complaint. I give the children Peruna if they have a cold and it always relieves them. I don't think I could find a better remedy to give my children."

It is so easy to criticize things about which the critic knows nothing.

Take, for instance, Peruna. There are plenty of people who are willing to say Peruna is this and that, who never have tasted Peruna, and have never known anything about its effects upon the human system.

There are people who say, and probably believe, that Peruna is used as a beverage by some people. It would be the easiest thing in the world to show the falsity of such a belief.

Let any one who reads this go to the drug store and purchase a bottle of Peruna. If, after attempting to use it as a beverage or to take it in doses sufficient to produce anything like intoxication, if after putting it to this test such a person is still of the opinion that Peruna is a disguised alcoholic drink, he will be warranted in making such a statement. Practically, Peruna cannot be so used. Any one who knows anything about Peruna by personal use knows that Peruna is a medicine. The very label on the bottle, giving the principal active ingredients, furnishes indisputable proof that Peruna is a medical compound. We will be willing to guarantee that no normal person can or will use Peruna as a beverage. If any one thinks this remedy can be so used one trial will be sufficient to disabuse his mind.

Peruna is a great and useful family medicine. It is used in multitudes of homes. It has become a standard remedy for various petty ailments in the home. It is especially useful for climatic diseases. It is an excellent remedy for colds. It is a well-tried remedy for catarrh in all forms.

We have a multitude of testimonials recommending it for colds, for bronchitis, for various affections of the respiratory and alimentary organs.

This is well known to all who know Peruna by actual experience.

"Cures All Catarrhal Diseases."

Mr. I. W. Kightlinger, Cambridge, Neb., writes: "I don't have any more trouble in my throat, and have not had a headache for four weeks.

"Peruna is the very medicine for catarrh. There is no medicine like it in the United States, for I have tried a good many before using Peruna.

"I will keep it in my house to guard against catarrh, as it cures all catarrhal diseases."

Restored to Health by Vinol

"I was run down and weak from indigestion and general debility, also suffered from vertigo. I saw a cod liver preparation called Vinol advertised and decided to give it a trial, and the results were most gratifying. After taking two bottles I regained my strength and am now feeling unusually well." Henry Cunningham, Elder Baptist Church, Kingston, N. C.

Vinol is not a patent medicine—but a preparation composed of the medicinal elements of cods' livers, combined with a tonic iron and wine. Vinol creates a hearty appetite, tones up the organs of digestion and makes rich, red blood. In this natural manner, Vinol creates strength for the run-down, overworked and debilitated, and for delicate children and old people. For chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis Vinol is unexcelled.

All such persons in this vicinity are asked to try Vinol on our offer to refund their money if it fails to give satisfaction.

Eat What You want of the food you need Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

ADVANCE GUARD ARRIVING TODAY.

Inaugural Week Finds Washington Ready For Festivities.

PARADE PARTICIPANTS THERE.

New England Coast Artillery First to Arrive—Roosevelt Issues Proclamation Calling Senate Into Extraordinary Session—Taft Will Take Oath on Old Supreme Court Bible.

Washington, March 1.—Inaugural week has been ushered in with Washington ready with gaily bedecked buildings, newly erected stands and clean swept streets for the reception of the thousands of American patriots who will come here to witness the induction into office of President Taft next Thursday.

The advance guard of the unattached delegations are arriving today at the vast Union station, where an augmented force of 125 special policemen, recruited from practically every large city in the country, have gone on duty for the purpose of preventing the ingress of pickpockets and other undesirables known to them.

Parade Participants Arrive.

With the arrival today of the New England coast artillery, Massachusetts, 500 strong, the influx of the organizations which will participate in the inaugural parade began. Other organizations expected before the day is over are the Second division of the Rhode Island naval battalion of Newport, the Now-And-Then club of Salem, Mass., and the Saratoga club of Saratoga, N. Y.

In accordance with the custom of the retiring president, Mr. Roosevelt has issued a proclamation calling the senate in extraordinary session at noon on March 4th next. The session is to be held for the purpose of receiving "such communications as may be made by the executive," among them probably the nominations of his cabinet officers.

William H. Taft will take the oath of office as president of the United States on the century old bible which belongs to the supreme court of the United States and by it kept in sacred custody. There is a touch of sentiment in this decision, which Mr. Taft has just announced with the statement that had he become a member of the supreme court his oath would have been taken on identically the same book. During the past few days there have been many offers of bibles to the prospective president.

May Break Precedent.

Precedent in another ancient inaugural detail is to be broken next Thursday in the intention of President Roosevelt to go from the inaugural ceremonies at the capitol direct to his train for Oyster Bay and not return to the White House in the carriage with Mr. Taft.

In this event there will be a vacant seat in the presidential carriage on its return to the White House, and it is now proposed to have this seat occupied by Mrs. Taft. The decision, however, has not been made, but the subject is under consideration.

Mr. Taft has been at the White House with President Roosevelt going over that portion of Mr. Taft's inaugural address which discusses what is to be his policy respecting the foreign relations of the country. Mr. Taft said that he had as yet given no thought to possible changes in the diplomatic service of the United States and any speculation which had been made in that direction had no foundation so far as it might pretend to represent his ideas.

Tonight Mr. and Mrs. Taft will be guests of honor at a dinner to be given them by the famous Taft Philippines party.

The ninth attempt of Miss Elizabeth Lowry of St. Louis, Mo., to end her life was successful. She drank carbolic acid because of despondency. In the last three years she drank poisons six times, used a razor once and tried to hang herself twice.

HOUSE RULES HAVE STOOD TEST

May Not Be Ideal, But Criticism Doesn't Go.

AT LEAST WITH CANNON.

Presiding Member Among Legislators Defends Self Against Alleged Attack of President of Magazine—Declares He Receives Hundreds of Letters of Instruction.

Washington, March 1.—Incensed by an attack alleged to have been made upon himself and the rules of the house of representatives by Edward E. Higgins, president of a leading magazine, in a circular letter to the "life subscribers" of his publication, Speaker Cannon has made public a letter he has written to one of his constituents in which he vigorously defends the house rules.

"The rules may not be ideal," writes the speaker, "but they have stood the test among those who know them, in spite of half a century of denunciation such as Mr. Higgins puts forth. The foundation principles of the rules were laid down more than a century ago under the leadership of Jefferson and Madison. They have been perfected from year to year to meet the needs of a growing representation of a growing nation, just as the law of the land is developed."

Speaker Cannon's letter was in response to one from F. O. Voris of Neoga, Ill., enclosing a copy of the circular. Mr. Cannon states that he had previously received several letters from Mr. Higgins informing him that he was making a poll of his life subscribers as to whether he should be elected speaker again and whether the rules of the house should be revised.

"This is an age of advertising," writes the Speaker, "and it has become almost a science. I receive hundreds of letters from men and women who instruct me in my duties as a representative and as speaker. They all merit the consideration due to the intelligence and conscientiousness they display in the presentation of views; no more and no less.

"As to the criticism which Mr. Higgins makes of the rules and the administration of them by the speaker little need be said. His letter shows that he knows nothing of what he writes. That will be evident to any one who has ever studied the rules or observed carefully and honestly their administration."

OFF FOR GUANTANAMO.

Third Squadron Leaves Big Fleet at Fort Monroe Today.

Fort Monroe, Va., March 1.—All of the vessels of the Third squadron, the gray fighting host that met the returning battleships 1,000 miles at sea, sailed today for Guantanamo, whence they expect to be sent on a West Indian cruise.

The battleship Ohio has gone to New York. The Ohio sailed away the proud winner of the "steam trophy for the voyage around the world."

The announcement is a splendid tribute to the engine room staff of the winning ship. The rules for the contest was one of economy in coal and water consumation for the entire trip.

Naval circles here had a flutter of excitement when they learned of a mock marriage in the parlors of the Chamberlain hotel in which Midshipman Robert S. Young, Jr., of the armored cruiser North Carolina and Miss Margaret Connell, daughter of A. J. Connell of Scranton, Pa., were supposed to be the principals. The entire ceremony was a joke at the regular Saturday evening dance. One of the midshipmen carried the joke a little too far by calling up the newspapers and telling them of the wedding.

Captain Marshall, when he heard of the affair, made the midshipmen involved go to the newspapers and make a personal retraction.

Washington, March 1.—Twelve senators and seventy-seven representatives who are members of the present congress will be absent when the Sixty-first congress assembles in special session on March 15. The changes in the personnel of the senate and house include many whose names are by-words to every reader of newspapers.

Of the seventy-seven representatives who retire on March 3rd one, Mr. Hepburn (Ia.), has served twenty-two years.

In years of service Senator Teller (Colo.) is the nestor of the retiring statesmen, having been elected senator upon the admission of his state to the Union, taking his seat Dec. 4, 1876, since which time he has been continuously and prominently in the public eye.

BOY MAY HAVE BEEN STOLEN.

Little Harold Moon of Flint Missing Since Saturday.

WENT TO POND FOR SKATE.

Hole Found In Ice, But Another Lad Declares He Made It—Boy Answering Harold's Description Seen In Neighboring Town With Strange Young Man.

Flint, Mich., March 1.—Harold Moon, ten-year-old son of Luman Moon, a carpenter of this city, has been missing from his home since early Saturday afternoon, and it is the opinion of the police that the boy has been kidnaped.

Harold left his home Saturday to go for a skate on Thread pond. At 6 o'clock, when he did not return for supper, his parents became worried and set out in search of him. Several people went to the pond and found skate marks leading to a hole in the ice, and it was at once announced that the boy had been drowned. This theory was exploded a few minutes later when a schoolboy told the police that it was he who had fallen into the bond.

Saturday night it was learned from Holly, a small town near here, that a strange boy, accompanied by a young man of about twenty-two years, had been seen walking about the streets. The description tallied with that of the boy.

Harold wore a light gray coat, a pair of gray knee breeches and had a stocking cap when he left home.

Chief McCall has notified the police of neighboring towns to be on the lookout for the missing boy and to arrest anyone who might be in company with him.

BAIRD'S SUCCESSOR.

Authentically Stated He Will Be Philip Barthelme.

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 1.—It has been authentically stated here that Phillip Barthelme, a student of the literary department ten years ago, and Athletic Director Baird's right hand man during many of the big football games, and who handled all of the Chicago games, would be the man selected to handle Michigan's athletic affairs when Baird steps out.

The next meeting of the regents will be held March 29, and it is expected that at this time some action will be taken on the matter. "King" Cole has also been mentioned for the place.

WINS AT MONTE CARLO.

Battle Creek Man Placed Bet Just For Fun.

Battle Creek, Mich., March 1.—From Monte Carlo has come the news that Louis Werstein of Battle Creek has won 3,000 francs, or $585 American money, at the famous gambling resort. Louis is a brother of Frank Werstein, who recently found an expensive pearl in a Mt. Clemens cafe oyster. Neither of the young men gamble, but both have always been lucky.

At Monte Carlo, Louis, who is touring Europe, laid down a five-franc piece, largely for the fun of it. It continued to multiply till he won 3,000 francs. Then he quit and went on his travels.

SERIOUSLY ILL.

Advanced Age Brings General Debility Upon Bishop Gillespie.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 1.—Rt. Rev. George D. Gillespie, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of western Michigan, is dangerously ill at his home here of general debility.

Rev. Gillespie will be ninety years old on June 14 and has been bishop of this diocese for thirty-three years.

Owing to his advanced age it is feared he cannot recover.

FORTS BOOM SALUTE.

Two Vessels of "Round the World Fleet" Reach New York.

New York, March 1.—New Yorkers got their first glimpse of a portion of the "round the world battleship fleet" Sunday, when the battleships Rhode Island and New Jersey steamed majestically into port and anchored off Tompkinsville, S. I.

When the channel leading to the harbor was reached Forts Hancock, Wadsworth and Hamilton boomed out a welcoming salute, and this was answered by the battleships.

Never disclose your schemes lest their failure expose you to ridicule as well as disappointment.

TAFT'S SPECIAL ESCORT.

"Black Horse" Troop of Cleveland Will Enjoy This Distinction.

Cleveland, March 1.—Troop A, known as the "Black Horse" troop, the city's representative in the cavalry branch of the Ohio National Guard, will serve as personal escort to President Taft in his inaugural parade Thursday morning.

Seventy-six strong will ride with the carriage which contains the retiring president and the newly sworn president from the capitol to the White House, as it has done at every previous inauguration of an Ohio born president.

Troop A was organized in 1877.

Men of prominence in the state and nation have been members of Troop A. The late John Hay, secretary of state, was a member.

BUSY WEEK FOR CONGRESS.

Ending of Sixtieth Session Brings on Hurly-Burly.

Washington, March 1.—The Sixtieth congress will come to an end next Thursday noon with the inauguration of Taft and Sherman. Until that time business in both the senate and the house will be in a hurly-burly condition, with conference reports on appropriation bills the principal order of business.

All of the big supply bills have been passed by the house, and all but the sundry civil, military academy and general deficiency bills have passed the senate. The supply measures in conference are the legislative, executive and judicial; the pension, army, agriculture, fortifications and rivers and harbors appropriation bills.

An effort will be made in the senate by Senator Heyburn to have the conference report on the penal code bill adopted, but some opposition is anticipated. In the house it is expected the question of changing the rules to establish a calendar day for the consideration of bills will be taken up sometime today, and on Tuesday an effort will be made to pass the senate bill providing for the granting of subventions to mail carrying vessels between United States ports and South America, Japan, China and Australasia. The passage of the bill will be stubbornly resisted.

The senate will meet in special session on Thursday to consider presidential nominations.

SURPASS ALL RECORDS.

Appropriations of Present Congress Likely to Total $1,008,000,000.

Washington, March 1.—Now that billion dollar sessions of congress are the rule, little other than appropriation legislation can be enacted during the short sessions, and the one to end this week is no exception to the rule.

The appropriations of the session probably will be largest on record, even exceeding the $1,008,000,000 provided for at the first session.

Scarcely any of the general policies of the country were touched upon this session. The discussion in both houses of the secret service and of the Panama canal and in the senate of the Brownsville affair and of the Tennessee Coal & Iron company purchase has brought the administration of Theodore Roosevelt prominently into view. The veto of the census bill because the employes for the taking of the decennial census were not to be placed under civil service regulations was a feature in another interesting chapter of the session. The census bill goes over to the special session of the Sixty-first congress. The veto of several dam bills because they did not recognize the principles advanced for the conservation of water powers attracted much attention.

The appropriation of $800,000 for the relief of the Italian earthquake sufferers at the beginning of the session has been spoken of as the most significant enactment of the session. A companion piece of legislation was enacted in the first session, when the remission of the remainder of the Chinese indemnity was authorized.

The passage of a law for the suppression of the opium habit in this country, it is hoped by its advocates, will exert a wide moral influence.

An act of great importance to western homeseekers authorized enlarged homestead entries in the arid region.

2 CENTS TO NEWFOUNDLAND.

Reduction In Postage Between United States and Colony In Effect Today.

Washington, March 1.—Beginning today, a two cent stamp will carry a letter from Newfoundland to the United States, and vice versa, instead of 5 cents, as heretofore.

The reform is said to be due largely to the efforts of Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, the famous missionary to Labrador, who recently interviewed President Roosevelt and Postmaster General Meyer on the subject.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's catarrh is the only positive cure now known to the fraternity. Catarrh being a consitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

The trouble with most schemes is the inability of their author to harness them to a practical whiffletree.

A failing tiny nerve—no larger than the finest silken thread—takes from the Heart its impulse, its power, its regularity. The Stomach also has its hidden, or inside nerve. It was Dr. Shoop who first told us it was wrong to drug a weak or failing Stomach, Heart or Kidneys. His prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed straight for the cause of these ailments—these weak and faltering inside nerves. This, no doubt clearly explains why the Restorative has of late grown so rapidly in popularity. Druggists say that those who test the Restorative even for a few days soon become fully convinced of its wonderfully merit. Anyway, don't drug the organ. Treating the cause of sickness is the only sensable and successful way. Sold by all dealers.

This is the most dangerous time of the year to catch cold, and it is the hardest time to cure it. If you should take a cold, a few doses of Kennedy Laxative Cough Syrup will act very promptly. Children especially like Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup, as it tastes so good, nearly like maple sugar. It is sold by all druggists.

1809—The Year of Genius—1809

The Chopin Centenary

Poland's Musical Genius and His Rise to Fame. His Love Affairs—George Sand—Liszt's Tribute.

By Oliver Leigh

Copyright, 1909, by the American Press Association

To sit in a cosy room in the gloaming, the flickering fire the only light, and hear a gentle handed player draw from a common pianoforte the mystic dream music of a Nocturne—this is to realize the unsuspected celestial harmonies that He hid in the too familiar box in which hammers and wires are incited to wrangle and jangle. Chopin gave his life, his love, his whole soul to this, the instrument into whose nature he penetrated deeper than its throng of devotees. They could make it sing and dance; crash and roar or tinkle as sweetly as a pebbly brook, but he bewitched it into showering as from April skies the glittering rainbow music of the spheres.

Chopin was born in Zelazowa-Wola, near Warsaw, on March 1, 1809. During the life of his parents the land which Sobieski made glorious had been devastated by merciless wars and divided between Russia, Prussia and Germany. His father was a French Polander. His mother was of native blood, and the infant drank deeply of the patriotism that still boils in every Polish bosom. The tumult of hopeless insurrections may be said to have been the accompaniment of his cradle songs. No wonder he was a melancholy man. Polish music is melancholy. Even in its wildest dances there must come a lament for the sacred cause—for the time a lost cause.

Lucky for posterity it was that so frail a constitution had not to battle for existence. It would have smothered the Chopin genius, though pianos would not have gone mute. His father had a profitable boarding school, in which the boy and his three sisters enjoyed happy years and were well schooled. A locally famous violinist taught him the piano and perhaps inspired him to make it sing like the stringed instrument. At eight he played at his first concert for a charity. When his mother asked how he felt on facing an audience he grumpily replied, "Oh, they were all looking at my new lace collar!" in which one of his biographers shrewdly sees the germ of Chopin's lifelong contempt for popular audiences.

The famous Elsner, director of the Warsaw conservatoire, was pleased to teach him the theory of music, harmony and counterpoint. During these years Chopin wisely rambled through the country, picking up folk songs and rustic dances, all throbbing with the Slavonic spirit. He was also taken up by ladies of the nobility, who made a drawing room pet of him. His long list of improvisations, with dances and light pieces, brought fame and patronage. Chopin's was a feminine temperament. He preferred this luxurious life to the ungrateful task of performing to the multitude for money wage. The czar gave him a diamond ring in 1825. Four years later he removed to Vienna and joined the ranks of popular pianists. Prince Radziwill, himself an amateur musician of exceptional gifts, bore the charges of a first rate general education for Chopin.

On the publication of his "Variations For the Piano, With Orchestra Accompaniments," and his fantasia on "Don Giovanni" he was acclaimed as an artist of mature powers. Schumann said, "Hats off, gentlemen; here's a genius!" He started for London, but, calling at Paris on the way, he halted there—for life. He was one of the many refugees who left Poland after its final subjugation in 1830. He would go a-soldiering, but was better advised, so sat down and put all his patriotic despair and indignation into the great "Study In C Minor," the first sound of which is like the crack of doom. This musical language of romance captivated the cultured audiences. It tells more powerfully than all the bullets he might have missed fire with—and been accounted a hero.

Chopin worked hard in composition and at the piano. He gave no public concerts for the four years ending with 1835. He only resorted to this when badly in need of money. Most of his concerts were semiprivate during the last ten years of his life. Liszt pictures a famous recital in the home of Pleyel, with a brilliant company of musicians and others.

Those were romantic days when Europe was seething with wars and rumors of wars, when knights and dames, poets, artists and writers had to fly with their lady loves from the horrors of invasion. The tender and delicate figure of the distracted young Chopin, seeking a snug haven for his precious genius, could not but burn the hearts of susceptible but not free girls, who longed to play heroine to him as hero, but were tethered by their mothers' apron strings. Mendelssohn once labeled him "Chopinette," so we may believe that not many broken hearts marked his flight from Poland.

His first love worthy the name was Constantia Gladowska, a student in the Warsaw conservatoire. Whether they met often or at all is not quite known. He was supposed to have been in love with another, living elsewhere, when Constantia came in his path. She sent him a ring, however. When the revolution broke out and he fled with the rest, the pupils of the conservatoire waylaid his coach, started a concert on the spot and with a pretty touch of sentiment presented him with a silver cup filled with the earth of their beloved Poland. This earth was strewn over Chopin's grave when he was interred in Pere Lachaise cemetery.

His state of mind on getting safely to Paris can be imagined from a letter. He is worrying as to the fate of his friends. "Perhaps my sisters have fallen victims to the fury of the Muscovite soldiers! * * * What to Constantia? Poverty stricken, perhaps, in the hands of the Muscovites! One strangles her, murders her! Ah, my life! Here am I, alone. Come to me. I will wipe away your tears, will heal your wounds of the present by recalling the past." Constantia gave him a ring, but there is none in this hollow array of beauteous words. Constantia's help came from a more practical hero, whom she married a few months after this. At a later date Chopin wrote from Paris to another friend: "I move in the highest circles and don't know how I got there. They credit you with more talent if you have been heard at a soiree of the English or Austrian ambassador. I feel daily how much I have still to learn. Do not imagine I am making a fortune; my carriage and white gloves eat up most of my earnings."

Louis Philippe presented him with a gold cup and saucer.

Maria, sister of Count Wodzinski, also of the Polish colony in Paris, won Chopin's delicate heart. This promised well, but the lady's father objected, and it was dropped. Not so by the count, her brother, who made a book about "The Three Romances of Frederic Chopin." There is no accounting for even a titled brother's taste, whether his object was revenge or cash.

That extraordinary woman and powerful writer, George Sand, came into Chopin's life when he was nearing thirty, she being five years his senior. A strong minded and far from beautiful girl of eighteen, educated in a convent, she became the wife of Baron Dudevant, a military man much older than herself and of opposite tastes. After nine unhappy years she formed a partnership with Jules Sandeau, and their novel made its mark. Then she wrote "Indiana," the first of her sixty stories, adopting the first half of his surname as her pseudonym. In this book she ventilated extreme opinions on social questions and dared public criticism by carrying them into practice.

Around her brilliant lamp clustered young men of intellectual distinction, dazzled by her philosophy more than by any charms and willingly dominated by her masterful personality. Alfred de Musset and Chopin were among the devotees. Chopin's feminine nature needed a virile intellect to lean upon. George Sand, like George Eliot, felt she could be the oak round which the tender vines of genius might twine and gain power. Chopin's physical health needed special care. Together they sojourned at Majorca.

On first seeing her portrait Chopin declared that it repelled him. Such were her powers or arts within a few weeks they spent two years together in their new Eden. He wrote: "I am among palms, cedars, cactuses, aloes, olive, orange, lemon and pomegranate trees. The sky is like a turquoise, the sea is like a lazuli, and the mountains are like emeralds. The air? The air is just as in heaven."

The trail of the serpent was there none the less. Their first house experiments were dismal failures. For the winter they took a ruined monastery, deserted by the odor of sanctity, haunted by musty damps, by owls and bats, and Chopin shiveringly swore there were ghosts. The masculine minded madame had to condescend to cook, as each meal made him ill. Paradise was getting lost. The lady writes: "The poor, great artist was a detestable patient. He became completely demoralized. He bore pain bravely, but his mind was upset, and his imagination too. He saw phantoms." Also a few realities. The malarious life brought him near death. They returned to France in 1839. He was not much happier for it. He composed many pieces, and in them all is the wail of a heart aching for a blessed peace that never comes. "He took to heart," she tells us, "his exclusion from our family life," for she had let him have part of her house as his little kingdom. On these broken lines ran his life till 1847, some eight years of relationship unendurable to any man of fiber and stout heart. He said to some one that the dame was an angel, but her wings sometimes hurt him. When he was so far oblivious to his serfdom as to attempt a show of paternal authority in the matter of her daughter's choice of a husband, George Sand jumped at the good opportunity to end a friendship that had sunk into a tragical farce.

Chopin tried change of surroundings in England. He was lionized in London, but saw no sunshine for a week, then back to his beloved Paris, this time under the loving care of his chief pupil and friend Gutman, where not consumption only, but silent heartbreak, undermined body and spirit. George Sand called, being the polite thing for so true a Frenchwoman to do, but Gutman took a leaf out of her book and "excluded her from their family life," the pair of faithful friends. Chopin's last words were, "She told me I would die in no arms but hers."

Liszt wrote a loving life of his friend, whose genius he adored, himself a marvelous pianist, as lovers of his all but impossible Hungarian rhapsodies know. He tells how Chopin grew worse each year after 1840. In his last two years he did scarcely any walking. Going upstairs choked him. The blow that killed him was his casting off by the woman who survived him nearly thirty years. Liszt viewed him as "one more great and illustrious victim to those transitory attachments formed between persons of differing characters who mistake for a durable feeling the surprise and delight felt at the first meeting and build on it hopes and illusions fated never to be realized, and it is always that nature which is most deeply stirred which is the most absolute in its hopes and attachments. For such as these any transplantation is a thing impossible; that is destroyed and forever ruined by the bitter awakening from the all absorbing dream."

FREDERIC FRANCOIS CHOPIN.
[Born March 1, 1809; Died Oct. 17, 1849.]

CHOPIN SWORE THERE WERE GHOSTS.

So poor Chopin uttered his soul in his converse with his well loved instrument. He got even with his woes in poetical furies and buried them, though they never really died, in those sublimely melancholy chords that eased his mind in the writing. His fame, his power, are growing every new year, and the influences of his genius who can measure?

ARGUMENTS TODAY.

Floyd Huller Shooting Case Will Soon Be in Jury's Hands.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 25.—Both sides have closed their testimony in the trial of Floyd Huller, and today arguments are being made. It is expected the case will go to the jury late this afternoon or Friday morning.

It has been brought out that there is a break in the Huller family because Mrs. Scramlin, sister of Mrs. Huller, has offered testimony that has been of value to the prosecution. Mrs. Scramlin is the one that found the shells in Floyd's trunk and gave them to Sheriff Graham.

Mrs. Scramlin also swore that Mrs. Huller shook her fist under Floyd's nose the morning after the shooting and told him that if he was guilty he ought to get the full limit of the law. Mrs. Huller denied this.

The defense put in very little evidence, and no attempt was made to contradict Floyd's sworn statement made to the officers following the shooting and which is now the strongest evidence against him. No attempt was made to prove an alibi, and he was not put on the stand.

Her Lockout.

"I must tell you the joke on me," said a business woman who "keeps bach" in a cunning little apartment. "Last week I invited two friends for luncheon. As I have just an hour at noon I got everything ready before I left in the morning that could be prepared and set on the ice. I made a lovely salad, a dessert, prepared for toasted muffins and tea and set my table in all its glory, even buying some flowers for a centerpiece. My guests met me at the office and we went to the apartment. What do you think I had done? Left my keys inside and locked the door!

"There was absolutely no way for us to get in. The janitor had a pass key, but he was away. All the windows on the fire escapes were locked, and no other key in the building fitted. There was nothing to do but take my guests to a restaurant. Then I found that I had not even brought my purse from the office, never dreaming that I should need it. I had to ask my guests for money to pay for the luncheon, and, as it happened, they only had a quarter each above their carfare. We went to the cheapest place we could find and had sandwiches and coffee. Wasn't that funny?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

To the Point.

Elderly Aunt—I suppose you wondered, dear little Hans, why I left you so abruptly in the lane. I saw a man, and, oh, how I ran! Hans—Did you get him?—Fliegende Blatter.

His Cleverness.

Nell—Young Mr. Bigwad is no fool. Belle—No. He's clever enough to have a rich father.—Philadelphia Record.
